SHIFT MILLIONS TO WPA ROLLS AS RELIEF ENDS

Federal Employes to Keep Jobs.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—With the official announcement that 3,500,000 persons would have been shifted from relief rolls to pay rolls of the Works Progress administration by midnight tonight, the WPA today was confronted with several problems resulting from that announcement which automatically rendered defunct the Federal Emergency Relief administration.

With Administrator Harry L. Hopkins away on a speech-making tour, the duty of attempting to explain the future course of the WPA fell upon Aubrey Williams, assistant chief of WPA and FERA.

Quickly disposed of was the question of what to do with some 1,100 FERA employés. They will be absorbed by the WPA organization. No one will lose a job.

Facing Other Problems.

But not so quickly settled was the problem of caring for the thousands of "employables" throughout the 48 states—able-bodied men and women who have been receiving a federal dole but who could not be hired by the WPA because state quotas under the 3,500,000 mark had been filled.

The final relief allotments dispensed by the FERA before it went out of existence today will help the states take care of these persons for some time, Williams explained. He was firm in an assertion, however, that no more relief money is coming out of Washington. The states must somehow take care of those unable to be employed by the WPA, he said.

"President Roosevelt said we must end this business of relief and we are doing so," said Williams, quoting from Mr. Roosevelt's speech to congress asking for the 4 billion 880 million dollar appropriation.

States Given Free Hand.

Telling newspaper men to "get this right," Williams emphasized that the state relief administrators would have a free hand in spending their final allotments.

"Why, the states may be using up some of that money six months from now," he remarked. "But there's no more coming from Washington."

He said he did not know the amount of unpaid bills of state relief administrations or the amount of carryover into December of the federal allotment. The money was distributed, he explained, on a threefold basis: "progress of the employment program, the amount of unencumbered balances of federal money held by each state, and the amount of money each state could provide of itself."

Four Million "Unemployables."

There is still another problem, Williams was reminded. About four million "unemployables," the blind, crippled, widows with dependent children, and others who are unable to work who will receive no more federal assistance and must depend on states and communities. The assistant administrator contented himself with the assertion that this problem would be solved satisfactorily.

Efforts are being made to speed up delivery of work relief pay checks, Williams said. More than 2,000 employés have been added to the treasury department's pay roll to help issue checks for WPA workers, but the gigantic task of handling a pay roll for an organization which must deal out 3,500,000 checks every two weeks has treasury officials frantic.

The FERA was created May 12, 1933. In the two and one-half years of its existence, it spent more than 3 billion dollars and served as parent for the Civil Works administration, the Surplus Relief corporation, and other groups.

REACH STATE WPA GOAL

Ralph H. Burke, deputy Works Progress administrator for Illinois, said yesterday that at least 183,400 persons have been transferred from relief rolls to WPA work, filling the Illinois quota of the 3½ millions that Aubrey Williams, assistant chief of WPA, said would be at work in the nation by Saturday night.

On Nov. 27, according to Mr. Burke's figures, 138,830 Illinois men and women were at work on WPA projects out of the 178,607 assigned.

JAPAN ACTS FOR SHOWDOWN ON CHINESE GRAB

New Troops at Great Wall; Towns Raided.

PEIPING, Nov. 30.—(AP)—North China's unrest cropped out in the province of Shantung tonight, where large bodies of well armed men were pillaging eastern villages, said dispatches from Chefoo.

Telegraph lines were severed and bus schedules were disrupted, said the reports, which quoted authorities as expressing the opinion the movement was political.

Renewed Japanese military activity at the great wall of China strengthened the impression prevailing among neutral observers that a showdown is approaching in the autonomy movement of the five northern Chinese provinces. Autonomy agitators are boldly proclaiming their cause in the streets of Peiping without police interference, and handbills and posters urging the people to demand "self-government" are widely circulated.

Troops Ready to Move.

Whether the Japanese will open the military floodgates and let troops pour down the railway arteries into the rich north China plain of Hopei province was generally believed to depend on whether the north China leaders are able to agree on a program of self government satisfactory to the Japanese.

Trains were held in readiness for quick movement of Japanese troops to the southern frontier of Hopei province if the central Chinese government should move troops northward.

[Nanking dispatches said today that Gen. Ho Ying-chin, minister of war, had left for the north in an eleventh hour move to check the autonomy movement. He was reported to be carrying important instructions to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who left Nanking yesterday for Chungking.]

Hope for Compromise.

Gov. Shang Chen, prominent Hopei militarist, remained away from the autonomy discussions at Peiping, persistently refusing to leave his provincial capital at Paoting, where he is surrounded by his well drilled army.

Authorities here expressed the opinion there was still hope that the northern leaders would find a formula acceptable to both the Japanese and the Nanking government.

Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan, Chinese commander of the Peiping-Tientsin garrison, told a delegation of educators protesting against the autonomy movement, "I have no ambition to become a second Yin Ju-keng, and will not lead an autonomous government." [Yin Ju-keng is the self-declared head of the new autonomous government in 22 of the north China counties.]

Jap Report Differs.

On the other hand, a Japanese dispatch from Tientsin said tonight that Gen. Sung announced an independent state would be proclaimed shortly in Hopei and Chahar provinces.

The commander of the Peiping-Tientsin military garrison said the Rengo [Japanese] News agency informed Chinese national leaders in Nanking by telegraph that the autonomy program would be carried through as "soon as possible."

The cities of Peiping and Tientsin would be included in such a state.

"The time is very near for new northern developments," said a spokesman for the Japanese embassy here.

Third Protest Note.

The Nanking government, in its third note to Japan within two days, protested vigorously today against what it said was Japan's seizure of the Chinese postoffice in the northern demilitarized zone.

At the same time the foreign office sent identical notes to all embassies and legations in China denouncing the autonomous state set up in eastern Hopei by Yin Ju-Keng, Chinese administrator of the demilitarized zone.

The note asserted the people of north China did not want to separate from the central government.

The Chinese notes yesterday accused the Japanese army of responsibility for the independence movement and protested the seizure of Fengtai railway junction, near Peiping, by Japanese troops.

Sudden Movie Strike Ends in Deep Mystery

Nearly all the Paramount Publix movie theaters in the Chicago suburbs were closed last night by a mysterious strike of union motion picture operators that lasted less than two hours.

The large downtown theaters were affected also, but their operators remained off the job only about 20 minutes. Telegraphic dispatches indicated that operators in many other cities of Canada and the United States went out briefly.

There had been no advance announcement of the walkout and the managers of the suburban theaters, finding their machines unmanned, refunded admissions to many thousand patrons. The majority of the houses reopened later when their operators reported back for duty as casually as they had marched out.

International Row Over 2 Jobs.

Although no official explanation could be obtained from union sources, it was learned that the widespread strike was called in Washington by George Browne, president of the International Alliance of Stage Employés and Moving Picture Operators, in an effort to compel the Paramount studios in Hollywood to hire two cameramen belonging to his union rather than two other cameramen.

Rumor had it that Browne, who succeeded Tommy Maloy as czar of the moving picture operators in Chicago after Maloy was murdered, objected to the taking of pictures by Dewey Wrigley and another Paramount employé who recently left Hollywood to take some background shots for an airplane romance.

The two men, it was said, resigned from the Browne controled alliance before starting east in a plane.

The Chief Is Annoyed.

This move so irritated the alliance head, it was said, that he decided to call out all operators in the Paramount allied theaters to show his resentment [this in spite of the fact that the local unions have contracts with the theaters in each of the cities].

It is known that the international alliance has lost largely its influence in Hollywood during the last three years, with other unions taking its place, and some observers regarded the on and off strike last night as a first move of Browne in a jurisdictional battle with these organizations.

Elgin Gets Orders First.

Elgin was the first town whose theaters were shut down. The operators there received their orders to quit at 6:30 p. m., the messages coming by telephone from Chicago. In a short time houses in Aurora, Joliet, Chicago Heights, Blue Island, Evanston, and Waukegan were forced to close. Peoria, Springfield, and Bloomington theaters followed.

The operators in the big downtown show houses did not receive their walkout commands until late, and received their return orders quickly, so there were only brief shutdowns. No theaters other than those which show Paramount pictures were involved.

Managers of all the affected theaters made it plain that there was no trouble between them and their employés, and that no demands had been made on them.

Whether the calling off of the walkout was the result of an agreement of Browne and the Paramount company was not certain. There was a possibility, it was hinted, that a longer lived strike would be called again today unless the operators' czar [Browne's power is nearly as great over the country as in Chicago] receives satisfactory concessions from the Hollywood corporation.

Girl Born at Sea Fights for Life in Incubator

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—A baby girl born prematurely on a transatlantic liner near Quarantine was fighting in an incubator today for the right to live under any flag. Four day old Magda Schultz has lost nine ounces of the three pounds and five ounces she weighed at birth. Immigration men decided Magda is an American, since she was born within the three mile limit.

Refuses to Be Mother; Nazi Divorces Her

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The District court in Koeslin granted a farmer a divorce today because his wife refused to bear children. The court held the farmers are the mainspring of German blood, which wives must help to perpetuate.

The decision conforms with changes proposed in laws regarding divorce and illegitimacy by Hans Frank, Nazi commissioner of justice.

Basis of Changes

Nazi jurists say the laws' changes, still unannounced, are based on the principle that "the family is the trustee of the people." Dr. Frank said the laws would make the "misfortune of the illegitimate child more bearable" and hinted all the statutes will be lightened in keeping with the reich's campaign for more babies.

Increasing grounds for divorce will be recognized, it was said, among them failure to bear children, sterility and nonacceptance of Nazi ideals.

Mothers to Get Aid.

The new amendments also are expected to provide financial help, if not subsidies, for unmarried mothers and care for illegitimate children in state homes if the mothers cannot provide for them.

Also planned is an "institute of marriage" where, it has been indicated, couples will get information on the selection of mates and eugenics and marital advice from doctors.

New regulations are forthcoming for "the protection of the German people's biologic soundness." These, officials have indicated, will govern marriages of persons having tuberculosis, venereal diseases, and other illnesses.

Mandel Party Routs Robbers In Gun Battle

Frederick L. Mandel Jr. and his brother, Leon, of the firm of Mandel Bros., and their wives were participants early today in a thrilling gun battle with two bandits who tried to hold up the party at the old Goodrich dock on the lower level near the Michigan avenue bridge. The robbers were routed by bullets from a watchman on the Mandel yacht and from pistols in the Mandels' hands.

As the Mandel automobile swung toward the yacht moored just east of the bridge at 3 o'clock the bandit auto pulled up alongside and flashed a spotlight into the face of the chauffeur.

The bandit car, a green Ford sedan, forced the Mandel chauffeur, Everett Bails, 2014 North Clark street, to the side of the street near the dock. One gunman, wearing a handkerchief over his face, jumped from the bandit car and jerked open the front door of the Mandel machine. He leveled a pistol at the occupants and ordered every one to get out. He grabbed Mrs. Frederick L. Mandel Jr., the former Lois Klafter, and dragged her out of the car.

Watchman Fires at Robbers.

At this point, Jack Bresely, watchman on the yacht, the Buccaneer, heard the cars stop and started towards the Mandel car. He saw the robber hauling Mrs. Mandel out of her car.

"Here, you can't do that," yelled Bresely. He jerked out his pistol and shot into the air. As the watchman fired one of the bandits seized Mrs. Mandel and swung her in front of him as a shield from Bresely's bullets.

Then the gunman backed towards his own car as his companion turned the sedan around for a quick getaway. Mrs. Mandel wrenched herself from the robber's grasp and dropped to the ground.

Mandels Use Their Pistols.

This allowed Leon and Frederick to grab pistols from the pockets of their automobile. They jumped out and opened fire on the bandit, who fired again, then ran to his car. Bresely emptied his gun at the pair.

The bandit car swung west and disappeared before police arrived on the scene. Three bullet holes were found in the door of the yacht just back of where Bresely had been standing.

Leon Mandel said the couples were returning from the Stevens hotel to their quarters on the yacht when the attempted robbery occurred. He said the gunman who had grabbed Mrs. Mandel wore a brown hat, black overcoat and was masked with a grey handkerchief over his face.

The Leon Mandels reside on the yacht, and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Mandel Jr. is at 222 East Chestnut street.

SHAW DECLARES BRITISH MUSIC HATH NO CHARM

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—British music, thinks George Bernard Shaw—and makes no bones about saying so—has virtually no charms to soothe the savage breast. Quite on the contrary, says Shaw, it might easily imperil international relations.

Invited by the British foreign office council for relations with other countries to attend a luncheon for foreign music critics, Shaw declined with this explanation:

"The foreign office only wants to create or aggravate a hatred between nations by inflicting British music on them."

RUSHES STEPS TO STRENGTHEN ITALY'S DEFENSE

Enlarges Size of His Military Council.

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

ROME, Nov. 30.—Italy's cabinet rushed through measures to strengthen the nation's war machine today.

It took but two and one-half hours for the cabinet, dominated by Premier Mussolini, to approve 88 defense, economic, and financial decrees.

Membership in the supreme council of defense was enlarged to include many new officials.

An appropriation of 70,000,000 lire [about $5,600,000] was made to set up a refinery for crude oil. It will be turned over to a company which has been developing oil production in Albania, the Azinda Italiani Petroli.

Italians Must Learn to Shoot.

A measure was approved requiring all men under 32 to enroll in the National Shooting society after they have been released from compulsory military training.

The cabinet adopted 22 decrees smoothing off spots in existing financial regulations, including one to save paper by halving the supplies of taxed sheets for legal use.

Other measures included:

Extension of laws against publication of military information, designed to make secret the activities of factories engaged in making war materials or experimenting with new military devices.

Extension to survivors of the East African war victims of the same provisions applying to relatives of soldiers killed in the world war, including pension benefits.

Speed Up Gold Mining.

Extension of limited loans to noncommissioned officers in financial difficulties.

Among those to be added to the new defense council are the ministers of justice, education, public works and press, marshals, air marshals, and grand admirals, the chief of staf of the Fascist militia, and the chief inspector for pre-military and post-military training.

"This modification," said a brief communique, "is designed to assure to the deliberative committee the invaluable assistance of the participation and experience of the hierarchy mentioned."

Widows and Mothers Meet.

Widows and mothers of Italy's world war dead gathered in Rome today to hear Il Duce's call for battle against sanctions.

They came from 94 provinces, where they will carry on house to house canvasses to organize resistance to sanctions.

The task was placed in the hands of women bereaved in the world war by Mussolini himself as a reproach to the allies with whom Italy formerly fought and who are now numbered among the sanctionists.

After paying homage at the tomb of the unknown soldier, the women will parade tomorrow to the Venezia palace, home of Mussolini. Pope Pius will receive the committees Monday.

Aim Blow at Night Life.

Enthusiastic Black Shirts pressed for early closing regulations and insisted the new theater schedules, calling for earlier "curtains," made late hours for cafés unnecessary.

If the aims of this faction became general party policy—as appeared probable—the capital streets, which already are quiet long before midnight, would be deserted by then.

The newspaper Popolo di Roma, leading this campaign, asserted: "If nothing else, it will improve your health."

Further, the newspaper said, early closings would save electricity and tend to reduce bus schedules, resulting in saving of gasoline.

Laval and Baldwin May Meet.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Official French quarters said today there was a possibility of a conference between Premier Laval of France and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of Great Britain to strengthen the Anglo-French stand toward Italy.

"It is not impossible that the premiers might want to talk together," said an authoritative source, "now that Laval's position has been strengthened by the chamber's votes of confidence."

[Attaches of the British government said in London they had not heard any suggestions that Laval and Baldwin meet.]

Vittorio Cerruti, the Italian ambassador, visited Laval again today. He is reported to be concerned over the possibility of an oil embargo against his country.

See Tension Eased.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Informed sources said today that a French warning to Italy against any unprovoked aggression upon Great Britain's Mediterranean fleet has lessened international tension.

It showed Il Duce, these sources asserted, exactly where the nations of Europe stand—and France at the side of Britain. As a result, they continued, Mussolini has "changed his tune." This general attitude was expressed by the Daily Herald:

"After all the threats and high talk of 'warlike measures' and after all the theatrical troop movements, Mussolini, in the face of firmness, has climbed down."

BRITAIN'S ARMS BUSINESS BOOMS TO ALL TIME HIGH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The steel plants at Sheffield, England's Pittsburgh, are turning out arms and war materials at a rate which is smashing all records. The plants are working day and night. This was revealed today by figures made public by the city's chamber of commerce.

The speeded up production, which is expected by Christmas to top the greatest annual production figures in the city's history, involves the manufacture of torpedo blades, bomb parts, armor plating, shell cases, aircraft parts, and other materials.

So far this year Sheffield's steel production has shown an increase of 100 per cent over the figure of four years ago. The steel output for September alone reached 120,000 tons. The plant capacity is also being increased.

In connection with the part that oil is playing in the present controversy between England and Italy, it was also reported from Scotland that the Clyde shipyards are enjoying a boom in oil tanker construction which compares with the 1928 boom. The value of new work secured in tanker building in November exceeded $12,000,000. Nine tankers are now on the stocks in the Clyde dockyards with a total dead weight tonnage of 110,000.

Of the twenty producing yards on the river, at least 50 per cent have five or more vessels under order. The total number of such vessels under order is 80 and aggregate about 300,000 tons. Admiralty orders account for 20 ships.

U. S. MISSIONARIES FLEE ONSLAUGHT OF CHINESE REDS

CHINGTEH, Hunan Province, China, Nov. 30.—(AP)—American and other foreign missionaries in central and southern Hunan province are rapidly evacuating before the onslaught of Chinese communists.

The Reds are streaming southward after being dislodged by government troops from their stronghold in northwestern Hunan. Government soldiers are in hot pursuit.

The Rev. Father J. Beckes, an American Passionist Catholic missionary, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, was among the first of the fugitive Americans to arrive. He told of hiding for three days and nights on a storm-swept mountain top while the communists looted his mission.

Edwin Cunningham, U. S. Consul in Shanghai, Retires

SHANGHAI, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Edwin S. Cunningham, United States consul general in Shanghai for 16 years, retired today after 38 years in the consular service. He will leave Shanghai Dec. 21 for his home in Maryville, Tenn.

ETHIOPIAN RULER HOLDS COUNCIL WITH WAR CHIEFS

Sets Up Headquarters at City of Dessye.

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

WITH EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE AT DESSYE, Ethiopia, Nov. 30.—Emperor Haile Selassie established Ethiopia's military headquarters at Dessye today, after telling his subjects that, if necessary, he would "join the warriors in the trenches."

The populace of this city, 175 miles northeast of Addis Ababa, received the king of kings with enthusiasm as he completed his long journey by motor caravan.

All around the route Ethiopians cheered as the emperor, accompanied by many chieftains and aides, sped toward his new headquarters, riding some of the time through rugged mountain country.

Immediately after his arrival, Haile Selassie began conferences with his military leaders, including Gen. Tecle Hawariate, who will command the Ethiopian troops. Hawariate, Ethiopia's delegate at the league of nations, recently returned to Ethiopia and pledged much of his fortune to his country's cause.

Ethiopians Attack from Rear.

ADOWA, Ethiopia, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Strong forces of Ethiopians were said to be moving toward Italy's lines on the northern front today.

The Italians, said the reports, have repulsed many rear guard attacks. Fascists said the attacks were made by warriors of Ras Seyoum, Ethiopia's northern commander, on the first division of Italian native troops.

One askari of the fascists native forces and ten Ethiopians were reported slain in fighting near Abaro Pass, controling the eastern gateway to the Tembien region.

Airplanes scouting in advance of an Italian column were attacked by antiaircraft guns, the fascists announced. Scouting planes confirmed reports that strong bodies of the enemy were moving northward, between Amba Alaji and Lake Ashangi.

Claim Tembien Area Subdued.

MAKALE, Ethiopia, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Practically the whole of the difficult and mountainous Tembien region of northern Ethiopia, which was the stronghold of Ras Seyoum, northern commander for Haile Selassie, today was in Italian hands.

Three complete divisions and three light Italian columns penetrated the Tembien area. Ras Seyoum's men continued to harry the fascist flanks and rear.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the Italian commander, remarked that Tembien, as large as an Italian province, "contains only mule paths." Therefore military activity of a complex order is necessary to guarantee an effective conquest.

Bombard Daggah Bur.

ROME, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Bombardment of Ethiopian fortifications at Daggah Bur, on the southern front, and destruction of an Ethiopian motor column were claimed today by Marshal Pietro Badoglio in his first report from the front.

The new fascist commander in chief said air bombers had taken off from a new aviation field at Gorahal, a town which the Ethiopian government has asserted the Italians had evacuated.

Ten Ethiopians were killed in a skirmish in the north, on a range west of Gagheba Torrent, Marshal Badoglio also asserted.

Marshal Badoglio, addressing newspaper correspondents at Asmara, said the war would move more swiftly under his command.

Claim 183 Italians Slain.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The Ethiopian government announced today an Italian column had been surprised and routed by tribesmen east of Mount Mussa Ali. It listed 183 Italians and 20 Ethiopians killed in the engagement.

"Three hundred Italians were surprised on Nov. 25 before dawn between Odoso and Alegergera by Aussa tribesmen," said the government communique, "and 183 Italians were killed. The attackers lost 20. The Somalis fled, abandoning 50 camels, 151 rifles and provisions."

30 Missionaries Wounded.

HARRAR, Ethiopia, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Prince Ismail Daoud, nephew of the king of Egypt, who offered his services to Emperor Haile Selassie, said upon his return from Jigjiga today that 30 Maltese missionaries were among the wounded in an Italian attack on the southern front. Most of the casualties were caused by bombs, he said.

Italians Buy 44,301 Tons of Scrap Iron, Steel in Month

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—While administration officials waited to see what November figures on exports would reveal, new statistics released today amplified in one respect the large October increase in sales of "war materials" to Italy.

The commerce department made known that shipments of scrap iron and steel to Italy in October—the month marking the actual beginning of hostilities in the Italo-Ethiopian war—totaled 44,301 gross tons, more than half of all European purchases of such materials in the United States.

September Sales Also High.

This compared with 40,432 tons sold to Italy in September and 18,021 tons in October, 1934.

Previously the commerce department announced the dollar value of scrap iron and steel exports to Italy increased to $472,455 in October from $179,458 in the same month last year. Large increases in exports of oil, copper, tractors, and trucks, airplanes and engines also were reported.

Already aware that shipments of various cargoes have been continued to Italy in November in defiance of official pressure against all "abnormal" trade with either belligerent, the state department today was compiling daily reports to determine whether October increases are being maintained or exceeded.

Try to Curb "War Trade."

The administration, through both President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, has made repeated pleas to industry to halt shipments to either Italy or Ethiopia of materials useful for war purposes. The shipping board has taken positive action in that direction where vessels in which the government has a financial interest are involved.

Further government action directed at "abnormal" exports to the belligerents has been hinted in semi-official quarters.

While Japanese purchases of scrap iron and steel were at lower levels than in previous months, Japan still was the largest single purchaser, buying 52,992 tons in October.

ITALIAN VETS TO GIVE IL DUCE ALL MEDALS RECEIVED FROM ALLIES

ROME, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The directorate of the Italian National Association of Combatants decided today to give the government all medals its members received from allied nations in the world war. Every world war veteran in the country belongs to the organization. The action was taken because the medals "lost their value as a symbol of the solidarity which the sacrifice of the dead for a common cause should be assured among survivors," the announcement said.

Garner and His Junketers Sail for Home from Japan

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Vice President John N. Garner of the United States and his congressional party sailed for Seattle aboard the liner President Jefferson today, returning from the inauguration of the Philippine commonwealth government.

FIX SOME RULES FOR YOUR WAR, EUROPE WARNED

Illinois Educator Decries "Chaotic Laws."

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—"Now that the nations are proceeding on the assumption that Europe is confronted by the prospect of another war, I appeal to them to make an effort to reach an agreement as to the rules they will observe in carrying on war if and when it comes.

"The failure of the nations to ratify the excellent code of rules for the regulation of warfare adopted and recommended by the international commission of jurists at The Hague in 1922 indicates that a new war will be fought in large degree without any rules at all."

Warning by Illinois Professor.

This warning was given today by Prof. James Wilford Garner, head of the department of political science at the University of Illinois, in an address to the Academy of German Law. Prof. Garner spoke at the invitation of Reichsminister of Justice Franz Guertner.

The Illinoisian particularly criticized the distinction now drawn between neutrality of the state, as such, and neutrality of its citizens.

"The idea that while a government cannot furnish belligerents with money and implements of war its nationals may is illogical, if not immoral," he said. "It should be abolished as a dangerous anachronism. The absence of an international interpretation of neutrality may draw nations into war in case they insist upon their own interpretations of rights denied by belligerents."

Calls Maritime Law Chaotic.

Prof. Garner said he fears that a new conflagration would find the nations of Europe slithering into steadily increasing complications unless they agree to rules to be applied to all modern weapons.

"The law is in a chaotic state as to maritime war," he said. "Some of its rules are illogical, inadequate, and ill adapted to the new conditions and new instruments from which war will be carried on."

In any case, he said, "the world is unlikely to witness again the spectacle of the United States being converted into a veritable arsenal" for belligerents, while at the same time trying to remain neutral.

ALLIANCE REPORTED CONCLUDED BETWEEN AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

VIENNA, Nov. 30.—Diplomats speculated today upon the possible formation of a "new central European power" after discussions this week between Austrian and Hungarian statesmen here. In official quarters it was said a unity of objective has been established between the members of the pre-world-war empire.

Representatives of the two considered common military, political and economic problems and officials said fundamental and far reaching agreements had been reached. These agreements, it was reported in well informed quarters, include an understanding amounting to a mutual military assistance pact, a decision to stick to the league of nations even if Italy withdraws from Geneva, and upon trade and financial coöperation.

Officials of both Austria and Hungary insisted that friendship with Italy remained an essential principle of their foreign policy. The plan of coöperation was developed by Premier Julius Goemboes of Hungary, who visited here, and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, Vice Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg and the Austrial foreign minister, Baron Egon Berger-Waldenegg.

VOCATIONAL OFFICIALS TO MEET.

Ways of improving coöperative measures among state bodies interested in fitting youths into vocational work will be considered tomorrow at a meeting of the National Association of State Directors of Vocational Education at the Stevens hotel.

LIVERMORE BOY IS OPERATED ON; MOTHER JAILED

Battle for Life Slated to Decide Charge.

Santa Barbara, Cal., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Surgeons operated tonight on 16 year old Jesse Livermore Jr., son of the stock market plunger, who was shot early yesterday by his mother, Dorthea Livermore Longcope, after a midnight drinking bout. Dr. Irving Wills pronounced the operation as "probably satisfactory."

The operation was performed to drain fluid which had congested one of the youth's lungs. No attempt has been made to remove five pieces of the shattered rifle bullet lodged in the boy's liver and one lung near the spine. Earlier today the boy was reported as gaining slightly.

Arrested at Hospital.

Meanwhile the boy's mother, the socially prominent divorced wife of Jesse Livermore Sr., was in the county jail, booked on suspicion of assault to commit murder. She was arrested at the hospital where her son is fighting for his life. She told officers tonight she couldn't remember anything about the shooting, although yesterday she had admitted it. She was not informed of the operation.

Efforts to obtain Mrs. Livermore's freedom on bond are in prospect. D. B. Nevelle, a friend, and Fred D. Schauer, an attorney, conferred with her at the jail. It was considered unlikely, however, that any action would be taken before Monday.

Mrs. Livermore was taken from the hospital shortly after she recovered from opiates administered to quiet her hysteria immediately after the shooting. District Attorney Percy Heckendorf announced that she will undergo questioning as soon as possible.

Youth Defends Mother.

Despite the pain of his wounds the boy continued to defend his mother. "She didn't mean to shoot me," he frantically told physicians attending him.

His father, who learned of the shooting last night at St. Louis, arrived at the hospital this morning after a dash by plane. His presence seemed to cheer the youth.

The shooting occurred in Mrs. Livermore's 14 room mansion, where, according to her son's tutor, D. B. [Bill] Nevelle, the only witness, Mrs. Livermore was delivering her son a lecture on excessive drinking after a gay evening in the home.

As his mother spoke, the boy grabbed a quart bottle of whisky and tilted it to his lips, according to Nevelle. "I'll show you!" he shouted.

Rather See Him "Dead."

Mrs. Livermore slapped the bottle from his lips. "I'd rather see you dead than drinking that way," she cried.

Young Livermore marched from the room and procured a small bore shotgun. "You haven't the nerve to shoot me," he taunted, handing his mother the weapon.

The woman rushed to her son, but Nevelle seized the gun, he said, and took it to a bedroom. When he returned he heard a shot, and saw the boy stretched on the floor. A few feet away were the whisky bottle and a .22 caliber rifle.

Mrs. Livermore huddled over her wounded son, screaming: "I've shot my son!"

"Don't Blame Mother."

As the boy was carried to an ambulance he murmured: "I'm all right, it's nothing. Don't blame mother."

At the hospital physicians said the boy was shot through the liver, and that both he and his mother were intoxicated.

The boy was kept under opiates through the night to alleviate his pain. Shortly after 4 a. m. his father arrived at the hospital.

Dr. Neville Ussher, attending him, issued the following bulletin:

"Jesse Livermore Jr. is slightly improved, but little change in his condition is expected for several hours."

If the boy dies Mrs. Livermore will be formally charged with murder, Heckendorf declared.

Mrs. Livermore was trimly attired in a tailored costume, and she appeared well groomed as she was taken from the hospital. She was calm as she was taken into custody, but only a few moments before, as the opiates administered during the night wore off, she had screamed: "I've killed my son!"

Livermore Sr., with his third wife, went to a hotel near the hospital. He declared that he would do everything possible to save the life of his son. "Fight, son; I'm standing by you," he told the boy.

Divorced Livermore in 1932.

Mrs. Livermore divorced her financier-husband in Reno in 1932. She then married Walter Longcope, a New York prohibition agent. She divorced Longcope in 1934 in a suit which involved the name of Lassie Honeyman, daughter of a New York attorney. She dropped the name "Longcope" shortly after, and came here to live with her two sons, Jesse Jr. and Paul.

Shortly after the shooting she told officials that she had become hysterical because of a letter Livermore Sr. had written her.

WEATHER BUREAU SHEDS LIGHT ON A GLOOMY RECORD

November Darker than All but 3 Recorded Months.

Forecaster C. A. Donnel searched the records of the weather bureau yesterday and found that never had there been a darker November than the one just closed. Records on the amount of daily sunshine have been kept for only 41 years. Last month there was but 26 per cent of the possible amount of sunlight.

The month, it also was revealed, was darker than all but three other months in the 41 years of recorded weather history. Only two months on record ever have had less sunshine. There was 25 per cent sunlight in January, 1914, and in December, 1929. February of this year, as November, had only 26 per cent.

Last month's almost constant gloom was broken on only three days, when the bureau recorded clear weather. There were 6 partly cloudy days and 21 cloudy, including yesterday. Normal for the month is 8 clear, 8 partly cloudy, and 14 cloudy.

The mean temperature for the month until yesterday, when Mr. Donnel made his computations, was 40 degrees, which was as near normal as has ever been noted. Normal for November is 40.3 degrees.

On the 3d, the mercury touched 65, the highest for the month, and on the 22d it dropped to 17, the lowest. There were nine days on which the temperature was 32 degrees or below. Yesterday's maximum reading was 35 at 9 p. m.

Ah! We Get Less Snow.

Rain and snow brought the total precipitation for the first 29 days of the month to 3.62 inches, an excess above normal of 1.32 inches. On 14 days there was .01 of an inch or more. The snowfall of .5 inches, however, was not up to the normal of 1.6 inches, according to the bureau records. Snow or a trace of snow fell on five days.

Miss Jessie M. Livermore Seriously Ill at St. Luke's

Miss Jessie May Livermore, well known before her retirement as a teacher of art in Chicago high schools, was seriously ill in St. Luke's hospital yesterday. She was stricken at her ranch near Leedy, Okla., three weeks ago and was brought to Chicago for special care. Miss Livermore, who is a member of the Chicago Woman's club, graduated from the old Dearborn seminary and later taught in the Medill, Phillips, and Englewood High schools. Her father, Darius Livermore, was an officer in the civil war and, as an early architect in Chicago, built the Saratoga hotel.

SURGEON REMOVES AN OPEN SAFETY PIN FROM GIRL'S INTESTINE

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—An open safety pin was removed tonight from the small intestine of Lillian Lennehan, 15 year old Ramsey, N. J., school girl, by surgery.

Her condition after the operation was reported "good."

Surgery was decided upon after X-rays disclosed a change in the pin's position had put its point against an intestinal wall. The operation was performed by Dr. Arthur Wright, attending director of the hospital's third surgical division.

GIRL EXPLAINS HOW SHE SHOT DRIVER OF TAXI

Miss Diana Krause, 28 years old, 4720 North Racine avenue, appeared at the Town Hall police station yesterday and explained how she happened to shoot Charles O'Connor, 26 years old, 5211 Glenwood avenue, a cab driver, in the wrist Wednesday night.

She said that she met David Groh, a former federal agent who served a term in Joliet penitentiary for manslaughter, in a cabaret Wednesday evening and later accompanied him to his apartment at 4145 Broadway, where they drank some whisky.

"When I became alarmed over his getting rough," she said. "Mr. Groh handed me a pistol and told me to use it if he wasn't a gentleman. I put it in my handbag and forgot about it. While I was riding home in O'Connor's taxicab I reached into the bag for a cigaret. The gun was accidentally discharged."

O'Connor, the woman said, was mistaken in the belief that she intended to hold him up. Groh was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct, and released on bonds.

40,000 THRONG STOCK SHOW ON ITS OPENING DAY

Canadian Entries in All Classes Shine.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Forty thousand people attended the opening day of the 36th International Livestock exposition held in the new amphitheater at 43d and Halsted streets yesterday, and approximately 20,000 remained for the night's horse show program. Practically all of the reserve seats for the first evening's show were sold in advance, according to exposition officials.

The friendly competition between exhibitors from Canada and the United States started early yesterday morning when judges began their task of selecting the prize winners from the best of North America's flocks and herds, stables and storehouses. The number and quality of Canada's exhibits in practically all divisions, including the 17th annual hay and grain show, indicate how well dominion farmers are prepared for business.

Seek Profit in Trade Pact.

Canadians are here not only to win prizes but to get more United States business in the sale of agricultural products, stimulated by tarif concessions granted to dominion producers in the recent trade agreement between the two countries.

Officials of the show announced that more than 255,000 square feet of space in the international amphitheater have been taken up by the 12,500 animals and 5,000 samples of farm products entered as exhibits. Canada's parade of contenders for animal prizes includes three Shorthorn cattle from the herd owned by the prince of Wales whose ranch is at Perkisko, near Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

Canada's strength in the show is also to be found in the hay and grain exhibits where dominion growers are well represented. They have won the world wheat king title at thirteen out of the sixteen hay and grain shows and are back with the best grain samples produced in Canada to compete again.

Cartful of Honors Last Year.

Records of the International show that Canadian farmers won last year seventeen live stock grand championships, seventeen reserve grand championships, and sixty-six first prizes.

Yesterday Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture of the province of Ontario, Canada, was a guest of the international. He has attended 24 of the last 26 expositions.

The opening day was featured by contests among the young men and women of the farm. Twenty-five student teams completed their work in the intercollegiate live stock judging contests late yesterday afternoon, but a long series of calculations must be made, delaying the announcement of winners until today.

Miss Eleanor Brinckerhoff was the only woman competing in this event with 120 young men. She is a member of the Connecticut State college team here to represent the school. In elimination trials Miss Brinckerhoff outranked several men students in her school.

Cut Fares Swell Crowds.

B. H. Heide asserted yesterday that advance sales of reduced fare tickets on railroads entering Chicago indicated that the show this year would attract a record throng of out of town visitors. He expects an attendance of a half million people during the eight days of the show.

It was announced that Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, would attend the stock show on Wednesday. He is to speak before the civic forum at Des Moines, Ia., tomorrow night and address a group of farmers at Ottawa, Ill., Tuesday afternoon.

JUNIOR CHAMPIONS AT INTERNATIONAL LIVE STOCK EXPOSITION

THE MYSTERIOUS MR. ROSS CLEARS IT UP—AND PAYS

Fined $100 for Crash in Car Loaned City.

Lawrence Ross, 32 years old, 3300 Lake Shore drive, a man of mystery who claimed he was a newspaper man and city employé following his arrest last week, was fined $100 and costs on a plea of guilty to a reckless driving charge in Judge Eugene Holland's State street court yesterday. Ross, driving an automobile which had been loaned for use in Mayor Kelly's Christmas fund campaign, crashed into a safety island at Michigan avenue and Monroe street shortly after midnight last Wednesday.

In court yesterday Ross explained that he is an employé of a tire company at 2501 South Michigan avenue of which his father, Joseph A. Rosenberg, is an official. As an advertising stunt, he said, the tire firm had installed a heater and anti-freeze solution in the donated car. At the time of the accident, Ross testified, he was delivering the car to a city chauffeur in the 3200 block on Broadway.

Shades of Paul Revere.

"This business of delivering a car at midnight sounds like a modern ride of Paul Revere," remarked Judge Holland, and he asked: "Where had you been prior to the accident?" Ross said he had taken "a few drinks" in a south side tavern, then gone to a movie.

"How did you happen to hit the island?" City Prosecutor D. A. Geroulis asked. Ross said that rain and steam on the car's windshield and smoke from his cigaret obstructed his view.

Asked why he posed as a newspaper man and city employé Ross replied he thought such a representation would get him "out of the trouble." He said he was employed by a press association on the west coast several years ago and that he still carried an old press card.

Shies From Cameras.

During his testimony Ross covered his face with one hand to shield himself from photographers. "Why do you do that?" Judge Holland asked. "I'm an outside salesman and I want to protect my job," Ross replied. He explained that he took the name of Ross instead of Rosenburg several years ago.

Policeman John Oglesby, who made the arrest, testified that Ross was alone in the car, was orderly, but apparently had been drinking.

Asked about "a beautiful blonde" who appeared at Central police station and demanded Ross' release, Ross said:

"She's a stenographer and has nothing to do with the case."

RUSSIA ARRESTS FIVE AS SPIES FOR ESTONIA AFTER LEADER IS SLAIN

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Tass, official soviet news agency, today announced the "liquidation" of an alleged Estonian espionage organization centered in Leningrad.

Five soviet citizens charged with being in the pay of the Estonian secret service are under arrest and awaiting trial. Their arrest resulted from an investigation into the fatal shooting of an alleged Estonian spy last Sept. 16.

The alleged spy, Kirishok, was slain while attempting to cross the border into the soviet union. In a running fight Kirishok, today's announcement said, killed a soviet border official before he was felled. Documents said by officials to incriminate the the Leningrad "ring" were found on his body. Those under arrest are said to be members of former kulak [wealthy peasant] families.

UNITED STATES WILL HANDLE PHILIPPINES' ACTION ON SANCTIONS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The Philippine independence law authorizing establishment of the new Philippine commonwealth directs that all foreign relations of the new government be conducted through the United States.

State department officials emphasized this today in commenting on reports that the league of nations sanctions committee was considering whether the commonwealth should be treated as an independent nonleague state or continue to be advised through Washington. The committee is chiefly interested in the Philippines because of the rubber production there.

United States handling of Philippine foreign affairs will continue through the 10 year period preceding complete independence.

RUSSIAN PLANE CRASHES ON TEST FLIGHT; 6 KILLED

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The builder and a crew of five men, testing a new twelve passenger soviet monoplane, were killed today when the plane crashed on the outskirts of Moscow.

The machine, known as "Z.I.G. 1" was flying too low to permit the six men to escape by parachutes before it plunged into a vegetable patch.

The victims were F. Speransky, manager of the test branch of the Holtzman plane factory; A. Kuleff, constructor of the plane; T. Melamed, an engineer for the test institute of the civil air fleet; Pilots N. Amlazoffsky and G. Zharkovich, and Mechanic N. Sirnoff.

YEARLING STEER OF BOY, 14, IS 4-H GRAND CHAMPION

Wisconsin Entry First and Illinoisian "Reserve."

Thereby, "Hercules Marshall," 995 pounds, of fastidiously manicured steer, and Vincent Baker of Edmund, Wis., became the cynosure of all eyes at the stockshow, and breeders, buyers and mere laymen paused to take his measure, for this perfect baby beef stands a fine chance of becoming grand champion of the entire show.

"I put a little brown sugar in with his feed," explained the champion's tall, thin young master, a freshman in high school, who is in his fourth year of 4-H club work. "That's why he grew fat so fast."

A Veteran at 14 Years.

"Barnum," a 1,050 pound Aberdeen angus steer raised by another 14 year old boy, Lawrence Morgan of Aledo, Ill., was named reserve champion of the show. Lawrence has been showing in the international exposition since he was 10 years old, and had the reserve championship in 1931.

These two yearlings were selected from among 344 shown yesterday by 4-H club boys and girls from 43 states. Walter Biggars of Edinburgh, Scotland, served as judge, and, as an exposition official said, "This was a tough day on the judge. This is a record showing, and just about the best steers ever entered."

Wins On First Attempt.

These were the championship lambs of the junior feeding contest, raised by Maxine Quakenbush, an apple cheeked high school girl of Sharpsville, Ind. The lambs were her first international showing, although she has been a 4-H member for more than seven years.

Robert Lemons, 19 years old, of Eldred, Ill., entered the prize barrow, "Silver Light," a 320 pound Hampshire, which will celebrate his eighth month's birthday today.

"I was planning to be a chemical engineer," Robert said, as he glanced lovingly at "Silver Light," but I guess I'll be a farmer now."

Prize winners in the steer classifications are:

SHORTHORN—Champion, Vincent Baker; reserve champion, Charles Loper of Lodi, Wis.; 750 to 875 pounds, William Anderson of West Liberty, Ia.; 875 to 1,000, Vincent Baker; 1,000 to 1,150, Neal Sherrick, Loraine, Ill.; 1,150 to 1,400 pounds, Charles Loper.

HEREFORD—Champion, Jerry, owned by Robert Graber of Mineral Point, Wis.; reserve champion, Mickey, owned by Jerry Graber of Mineral Point, Wis.; 750 to 875 pounds, Homer Graber; 875 to 1,000 pounds, Robert Graber; 1,000 to 1,150 pounds, Homer Graber; 1,150 to 1,400 pounds, Robert Graber.

The 4-H club congress, held annually in conjunction with the stock show, will open officially tomorrow, but most of the 1,500 delegates, each wearing the green four leaf clover emblem [development of hand, heart, health, and head] of the 4-H, will arrive today.

Get Achievement Awards.

An Arkansas girl and an Illinois boy were announced yesterday as the national achievement champions of 4-H work for 1935. The girl is Romayne Tate, 18 years old, of Paragould, Ark., who has been a 4-H club member for seven years, and William E. Hamilton, 20 years old, of Good Hope, Ill., is the boy champion. He is completing his eighth year of club work. The two will be given the Roosevelt trophy at the annual achievement dinner at the Stevens hotel Tuesday night.

Viley Johnson, 19 years old, of McAlester, Okla., and Betty Brown, 19 years old, of Emporia, Kas., were named as the outstanding boy and girl of the year in all around 4-H leadership. [illegible] Skinner of Lafayette, Ind., Anita Gronewald of Corvallis, Ore., and Audrey Fox of Verndale, Minn., were given honorable mention.

A 17 year old Montana girl, who canned 2,000 pints of food in less than a year, has been named as national 4-H canning champion. She is Isabel Travis of Sun River, Mont., and will receive a $300 scholarship at the achievement dinner.

FASTER TIME FOR TRIP ACROSS PACIFIC SEEN BY CLIPPER'S MASTER

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Capt. Edwin C. Musick, master of the China Clipper, said today the 60 hour flying time of the trans-Pacific air mail service could be greatly reduced.

At a luncheon given in honor of the clipper crew by President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines, Capt. Musick said the initial flight, completed yesterday, disclosed future flights could be made in less than the 59 hours and 47 minutes flying time it required.

Mechanics painstakingly reconditioned the 25 ton seaplane for the 8,000 mile return trip to California, scheduled to start Monday [Sunday in the United States].

CHEMIST'S BURNS FATAL.

John Kruger, 54 years old, 5737 West 63d street, died in the Holy Cross hospital yesterday of burns he received Nov. 18 in an explosion in the Ohmlac Paint and Refining company, 6540 South Central avenue, Stickney, where he was employed as a chemist.

HONOR MEMORY OF MARK TWAIN ON CENTENNIAL

Chicagoans Who Knew Him Tell of Life.

BY PERCY WOOD.

Mark Twain's birth, 100 years ago, was celebrated in Chicago yesterday by a group of enthusiasts who met at luncheon in the Palmer house to hear personal recollections of the great humorist and interpretations of his matchless writings.

Speaking as one of Twain's generation was Opie Read, now turning 83, who last saw and talked with his contemporary writer in a setting both loved—the upper deck of a Mississippi packet, steaming down the great river.

Another speaker was John T. McCutcheon, THE TRIBUNE's cartoonist, who told of Twain's, or Samuel L. Clemens' 70th birthday dinner in New York, in 1905, where the list of guests—which Mr. McCutcheon repeated—was a veritable Who's Who of American writers at the beginning of the century. Mr. Clenems died five years later.

Governor Gives Eulogy.

Gov. Horner, honorary chairman of the Chicago celebration committee, gave the eulogy of Mark Twain as an American. The fact that yesterday was the governor's own birthday, his 57th, was not of sufficient import, he said, humorously, to cause him to include its mention in the proclamation which he issued calling for observance of the Twain centennial.

Gov. Horner remarked upon the proximity of Twain's birth to Thanksgiving, declaring that "if Mark Twain had been born on Thanksgiving the country would have had two reasons for celebrating the day.

"There would have been in that conjunction a particular fitness. For Thanksgiving day is a uniquely American holiday and Mark Twain was as uniquely American.

"Mark Twain—what dynamic syllables they are! He chose them from his river experience; a leadman's call, signifying two fathoms. The name had a richness of suggestion about it. It had the native quality that was the essence of a young man's river born philosophy. Twain said: 'It was always a pleasant sound for a pilot to hear on a dark night; it meant safe water.'"

From Light to Sardonic.

The literary evaluation was made by Prof. Percy H. Boynton of the University of Chicago's English department. With copious quotations from Twain's writings, Prof. Boynton traced his career from its first, "light hearted" stage, through the Victorian period and the more serious writings, and down to the final stage of sardonic humor "where he became a man of sorrows, perplexed by what he saw about him."

Twain's literary greatness, Prof. Boynton said, in conclusion, placed him, in stature, alongside two other famed middle westerners of his day—Grant and Lincoln.

Another Famous Dinner.

As toastmaster, Dean Gordon J. Laing of the Humanities division, University of Chicago, recalled that Twain was the principal speaker at another dinner in the old Palmer house in 1879, given in honor of Gen. Grant by the army of the Tennessee. Generals Sherman and Sheridan were also present, and it was on that occasion that Twain, being called up, at last, at 2 a. m., gave his famous "toast to the babies."

Mrs. Janet A. Fairbank, the novelist, whose father was Mark Twain's friend, told the group how much was his contribution to the literature of the Mississippi valley and drew smiles when she added: "He meant as much to me when I was little as Shirley Temple means to the children of today." Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university, and general chairman of the centennial committee, also spoke briefly.

Opie Read Is Favorite.

But most appreciation seemed reserved for Opie Read's rambling reminiscences. Tall and picturesque, with flowing tie and white, undisciplined hair, Mr. Read recalled evenings in Chicago with Mark Twain, Peter Finley Dunne, James Whitcomb Riley and others—evenings of uproarious anecdotes. At his last meeting with Twain, on the steamboat, he told how an amiable, if somewhat simple, man approached to shake Twain's hand.

"Has the river changed much since you used to be a pilot, Mr. Twain?" he asked.

Clemens looked appraisingly at the bluffs on either side and then at the broad stream between them. Finally he replied, with a twinkle and a smile, "Bank's have changed a little, but the water's about the same."

More than a little sadly, the old man who had known him, concluded: "Mark Twain was the true humorist and Samuel Clemens the true philosopher."

DOPE ADDICT ASKS AND GETS FINE.

Judge Eugene J. Holland in the South State street court yesterday granted the request of Claude Lejune, 47 years old, 811 South State street, a confessed dope addict, for a maximum fine and hospitalization by fining him $200 and costs for panhandling in the loop.

HEED WARNING TO SHOP EARLY FOR CHRISTMAS

This scene, looking north on State street from Madison street, shows how Chicago's great shopping center was jammed yesterday. Merchants estimated the crowds on the two days following Thanksgiving were the largest since 1929.

N. Y. POLICE TO SHOW GRATITUDE TO TAXI DRIVER FOR HIS AID

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The police department returned a favor today when two patrolmen were made available to give blood transfusions to Orla V. E. Nielsen, 54 years old, taxi driver. Nielsen, who once aided police in the capture of three holdup men, is in a hospital suffering from an undetermined chest condition.

The taxi driver, who is married and the father of five children, has been in the hospital since Sept. 9. Last Monday Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine received a letter from Mrs. Nielsen, explaining that her husband was in the hospital and that the family had no money for transfusions. She recalled that Nielsen had been cited by the police department for his coöperation in apprehending criminals and felt the department would be glad to do something for him.

Valentine notified the chief surgeon and two patrolmen of type 3 blood were placed on call in case the transfusion was needed.

PRINCETON CHIEF GOING TO CUBA AS AN ADVISER

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Princeton's youthful president left the direction of the university's affairs in other hands today when he resumed a rôle he has filled many times, that of political adviser to foreign governments.

President Carlos Mendieta of Cuba called Dr. Harold Dodds on an emergency mission to that republic. His assistance was asked in settling a controversy over the presidential election originally scheduled for Dec. 15. It has been postponed indefinitly until the Cuban electoral code is modified.

The rôle of political adviser is as familiar to him as teaching. In 1922, when 33, he was electoral adviser to Nicaragua. He later served as technical adviser to the plebiscitary commission which delved into the complicated dispute between Chile and Bolivia over Tacna-Arica. Other Latin American nations have sought his advice on complicated governmental problems.

"Republican, Presbyterian, married, and a fair golfer," is the description he once gave of his status in society.

OUSTED LAKE CO. CLERK SUED FOR $38,000 PROFITS

Successor Asks Damages, Costs in Addition.

A charge that Lew A. Hendee, former county clerk of Lake county, collected $38,000 in "fees, gifts, and bonuses" from operating a marriage mill at Waukegan during the eleven months when he held the office "illegally" was made yesterday by Russ Alford, present county clerk, in filing a suit for $50,000 damages against Hendee. The bill was filed by Attorney J. E. Bairstow in the Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan.

Alford, a Democrat, defeated Hendee, a Republican, in the election of November, 1934. Hendee continued to hold office on the basis of a canvass by the election board which declared him the winner. Alford took his case to the courts and, after being sustained by the Illinois Supreme court in a mandamus action, took over the clerk's office last month.

"Gin Marriages" Abolished.

Alford on taking office made several important reforms, the most notable of which was abolishing marriages during the midnight hours, thus doing away with the alleged "gin marriage mill."

Alford's suit declares that the canvassing board was controlled by Hendee, who was one of the members, said that it "fraudulently, willfully, and maliciously" declared Hendee elected.

The damages asked by Alford include 11 months of the annual $4,000 clerk's salary, $2,845 spent by him in attorney's fees and court costs, and $38,000 which he claims Hendee received during the 11 month period from "fees, gifts, income, and bonuses."

Marriage Fee Cut.

Attorney Bairstow amplified this legal language with the statement that this sum was Hendee's revenue from the marriage mill. Hendee has admitted in other court hearings that he exacted an extra $5 for a marriage license issued after hours, and charged $2 for a regular license and a "certificate." Alford has reduced the fee to $1, cut out the certificate, and refused to issue any licenses after his office is closed.

A recount of the ballots cast in the 1934 election, instituted by Hendee, will begin tomorrow in the court of County Judge P. L. Persons. Next Monday Hendee will appear before the same court on a citation to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for "knowingly certifying a miscount."

356 Licenses in 21½ Days.

Alford declared yesterday that during the last month he issued 356 marriage licenses on 21½ days, his office remaining closed on Sundays, holidays, and Saturday afternoons. Last year Hendee issued 530 licenses during all of the 30 days.

The daily average for Alford was 16 and for Hendee 17. On this basis of 174 less licenses issued for one month, Alford estimated that the county would receive $2,088 less in revenue.

"But the marriage mill has gone and marriages in this county now are the sacred matters they should be," he added. "My office is interested more in this than in getting money."

FUMES OVERCOME FAMILY.

Mrs. Angeline Staffa, 33 years old, 3326 Congress street, and her five children were overcome yesterday when a flueless gas hot water heater in the kitchen exhausted the air in their bungalow. Members of a fire department inhalator squad revived them.

MINNEAPOLIS CHICAGO ST. PAUL

FIGHT N. Y. BILL BARRING PRESS FROM ANY TRIAL

Even Attorneys Could Not Talk About Cases.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A proposal to restrict newspaper coverage of courts so sharply that attorneys might be barred from discussing cases with reporters drew such a protest at a meeting of the state judicial council here today that Chief Judge Frederick E. Crane of the Court of Appeals later commented "perhaps this is too broad."

Photographers could be barred from courthouses under the proposal and statements on a trial would be limited to "a statement of the issues involved as the latter are shown by the pleadings, indictment, or information" filed in the case.

Saying "the public is the first to be concerned in this," Harvey Deuell, managing editor of the New York Daily News, denounced the proposal as a violation of the freedom of the press. "It is the entering wedge to bar reporters from the court," Deuell said. "This seems to me a dangerous thing."

Sponsors to Reframe Bill.

Justice Francis Martin, presiding justice of the Appellate division in the First judicial district, said he understood the sponsors would reframe it because they considered it too broad.

The proposal was made by the County Lawyers' Association of New York City.

Judge Crane, as chairman of the judicial council, an advisory body on matters affecting the courts, explained its purpose was "to preserve the court as a court; to help us keep courtrooms in order so that courts do not become simply an adjunct to the press."

He insisted it was not intended as a muzzle to the press, that there was no intention to keep photographers from taking pictures in corridors outside courtrooms, nor to keep attorneys from talking to reporters about cases.

Could Stop All Discussion.

Deuell replied "a law is a law as it is written. This is so broad that photographers could be barred by order of the judge from the building where the court was sitting or even from the sidewalk outside. A paper might even be stopped from discussing a case."

Federal Judge John Knight of the western New York district commented it was "pretty strong." He said "it might even prevent an attorney from making any statement about a case."

Judge Crane said it was intended to strike only those "who have been making a circus of the courts."

Proposals for jury service for women and to reduce the exemptions for jury duty also were discussed before the council.

It gave no indication whether it would make any recommendations to the Appellate division or to the legislature on the matters discussed.

SOCIALIST CHIEF FREED AS LEADER OF SPANISH RIOT

MADRID, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Francisco Largo Cabellero, Socialist leader and former minister of labor, today was acquitted by the supreme tribunal of charges of instigating the bloody riot of October, 1934.

A general strike precipitated the outbreak which led to an officially estimated 3,500 deaths and the wounding of 10,000 persons.

His contention was he favored "social, revolution through evolution, but not by violence."

Rail Employe Is Retired After 52 Years' Service

George R. Seavert, chief clerk of the motive power department of the North Western railway, ended 52 years service with the railroad yesterday and was retired on a pension, having reached the retirement age of 70 last month. Mr. Seavert lives at the Oak Park Arms hotel. He started work for the railroad on March 26, 1883, in the motive power department and was made chief clerk in 1890.

MOTOR LICENSES FOR 1936 ON SALE HERE WEDNESDAY

100,000 Plates Sent Out Already.

BY HAL FOUST.

Automobile license plates for 1936 will be placed on sale at noon next Wednesday at the Chicago office of the secretary of state at 120 South Ashland boulevard. Yesterday approximately 100,000 plates were sent from Springfield to motorists who have filed applications by mail.

"The law requires car owners to display the 1936 licenses on Jan. 1," reads a press announcement from Secretary Hughes' office. "There are no provisions for any days of grace. Car owners failing to comply are subject to arrest."

The "I Gotta Drag" Parade.

Almost all of this initial mail consignment consisted of low numbers or "poker hand" combinations of numerals, reassigned at the specific requests of "I gotta drag" holders. There are so many motorists with political, social, or business influence and with an attachment for their favored licenses that Secretary Hughes has been reluctant to reform the Illinois numbering system.

Again in 1936 Illinois plates will bear numbers with as many as seven digits, difficult to read and difficult to remember and without any geographic significance within the state to aid the police.

Authority—But No Action.

Other states have shortened their plates by using a combination of letters and numbers, each letter designating some county or counties. The 1931 legislature authorized the secretary of state to reform the numbering system but this authority never has been exercised.

The 1936 plate is of the same size as for 1935. The numbers are white on a black background.

The license fees are lower, due in part to Secretary Hughes' and Mayor Kelly's efforts before this year's legislature, overcoming the opposition of Gov. Horner to any reduction.

Find Signs of Whisky Trade at Indiana Prison

Michigan City, Ind., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Police who made a liquor raid on a house near the state penitentiary today said they found 200 prison made shirts and 150 pairs of shoes in addition to a quantity of bootleg whisky. They believe trusties trade shirts and shoes for liquor.

Suicide Wave Hits Flood Refugees; Appeal for Aid

SHANGHAI, Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—Officials at Pishien, in northern Kiangsu province, appealed for aid today, reporting a suicide wave among 300,000 flood refugees there. They said they feared others would turn bandits.

THREE NEW SUPERIOR JUDGES TO TAKE OATH OF OFFICE TOMORROW

Three new judges of the Superior court will be inducted into office tomorrow morning, the first day of the winter court term. Tomorrow also marks the end for Judge Marcus Kavanaugh, 76 years old, of a 37 year career on the Superior court bench. He failed of renomination in the July 1 judicial primary election.

The new judges are Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th], who is to hear contested divorce cases; Municipal Judge John J. Lupe and Robert C. O'Connell, former Superior court master-in-chancery. Lupe and O'Connell are to be assigned to the Criminal court.

Friends of Judge Lupe gathered yesterday in the city hall to bid him farewell. Last night at the Morrison hotel, after tendering his resignation as alderman, Judge Nelson was honored with a farewell dinner by Mayor Kelly and members of the city council with whom he served for 12½ years.

Judge Kavanaugh's career began in Des Moines, Ia., his birthplace, which he served as city attorney. He was elected to the Superior court here in 1898. Judge Kavanaugh served as colonel of the 7th Illinois infantry during the Spanish-American war and is known for his interest in criminal law and legal reforms.

Parents Attend Discussion on Children's Education

The use of the modern "activity" method of teaching children, by assisting them in enjoying and profiting by their leisure time, was stressed yesterday at a conference of parents, teachers and members of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs held on the ninth floor of Mandel Brothers loop store. The conference was the third of a series dealing with the development in children's reading material. Mrs. William S. Heffernan, member of the board of education, was chairman. Miss Mary B. Day, librarian of the Museum of Science and Industry. Miss Elizabeth W. Robertson, art director in the Chicago public schools, and Miss Marie A. Foley, director of the Jack and Jill players, were speakers.

TRANS-ATLANTIC AIRLINE BACKERS SEEKING SUPPORT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—New impetus for a move to link North America with Europe by a commercial airline will be sought at an international conference next Wednesday between American and British experts.

At that time, it was revealed today, the United States government's interdepartmental committee on international aviation will meet with delegates who have been attending a Trans-Atlantic Airways conference in Ottawa, Canada. The group will discuss various projects under consideration.

The meeting was suggested by the delegates to the Ottawa conference, consisting of representatives from Canada, the United Kingdom, the Irish Free State, northern Ireland, and Newfoundland. It was readily agreed to by R. Walton Moore, assistant secretary of state, who heads the inter-departmental committee.

MISS SNOWDEN'S PRINCE DENIES A RECONCILIATION

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Prince Girolamo Rospigliosi denied today published reports that a reconciliation had been effected between him and Princess Rospigliosi, 23 year old heiress to the Snowden oil fortune.

"There will be no reconciliation as far as I know," the prince said. "You can quote me as saying that I anticipate my wife's divorce in the near future."

The former Marian Snowden and her husband dined at a hotel here last night.

"Merely having dinner together doesn't mean we're back together again," he added.

The prince said that "I understand Marian plans to become sometime the bride of Mr. Reed [Louis F. Reed Jr.]."

12 Mexican Rebels Slain in Battle with Soldiers

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Federal trops, continuing their drive on rebel forces in the mountains of Jalisco, killed twelve insurgents in a battle today. The leader of another rebel group, Simon Urrutia, was reported to have surrendered with several of his men.

COUNTY'S AUTO DEATHS CUT 21% FOR 11 MONTHS

The number of Cook county automobile deaths which occurred in the first eleven months of this year was 21 per cent less than the death toll for the same period last year, Coroner Frank J. Walsh reported yesterday. The decrease was attributed to Mayor Kelly's safety campaign.

So far this year, up to 2 p. m. yesterday, there have been 911 automobile fatalities in Cook county. In the first eleven months of 1934 there were 1,153 deaths. There was a decrease every month this year as compared to the same month last year, except February, in which case the figures were the same.

Urges Elevated Highways.

The figures for each month follow:

	1934.	1935.
January	122	66
February	76	76
March	106	81
April	93	82
May	97	63
June	92	83
July	104	88
August	109	75
September	98	90
October	133	98
November	123	100

"The most effective way to carry out the safety campaign and further reduce the terrible and needless death toll is to build elevated highways," said Coroner Walsh.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday, according to the coroner's office, 706 persons had been killed and 16,146 injured within the Chicago city limits this year.

Vincent Burns, 31 years old, 4048 West Van Buren street, a clerk for the American Railway Express company, was killed yesterday when he was struck by an automobile at Harrison street and Pulaski road. The driver of the car was Charles Shanker, 21 years old, 640 14th avenue, Maywood.

Other Cook county deaths were:

Michael Rusin, 48 years old, 5203 South Carpenter street. Killed when his truck collided with a street car in front of 4330 South Ashland avenue.

James Schimek, 45 years old, 4039 West 21st place, a painter. Killed by a Santa Fe Trails System bus as he was walking across the street in front of 3281 Ogden avenue. The bus driver, Myles Haynes, 1812 Washington boulevard, was held.

Albert Marshall, 82 years old, 1428 East 66th place. Fatally injured while crossing Marquette road at Blackstone avenue by an auto driven by Thomas H. Newman, 32 years old, 8553 Rhodes avenue, an artist.

Mrs. Irene Keating, 42 years old, 1050 West 51st street. Died at her home last night of injuries suffered Nov. 10 when an automobile in which she was riding crashed into a post at Garfield boulevard and Elizabeth street.

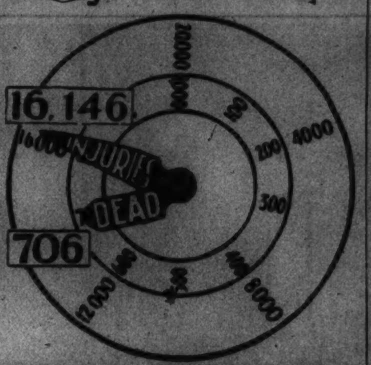
Frank Fons, 55 years old, 2618 West 105th street. Killed last night when the automobile in which he was driving alone was struck by a fast freight train on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at 105th and Rockwell streets.

Truck Wrecks Building.

A small frame building housing the fruit store of Frank Dremon at 200 East 130th street was nearly demolished and a watchman, Peter Horch, 50 years old, seriously injured, when a large trucking van crashed into the place yesterday.

THE MASSACRE

Chicago's 1935 Trafic Toll



Over 98 per cent of the city's automobile fatalities are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

Dremon estimated the damage at $2,000. Kensington police said the driver, Charles Sullivan, 24 years old, of Carleton, Ky., whom they held, had been drinking.

The automobile of Michael Jancovic, 53 years old, 2657 Clybourn avenue, a tavern keeper, collided with a street car at Clybourn and Fullerton avenues last night. The street car was derailed and Jancovic's sedan was thrown into a department store truck and trailer driven by Edward Casperson, 4611 Kasson avenue. The truck jumped the curbing and overturned, spilling bundles of merchandise into the street. Jancovic and Casperson were both injured.

CAPITALISM MUST NOT DIE, SCHACHT WARNS GERMANY

Stresses Need of System to Feed Nation.

"In a time when desirable traditions and things like folk dances, spinning wheels, and the like are being called into life again," he said, "let us not forget that capital goods, like grain silos, harvesting machines, and motor plows are indispensable in an agricultural process which aims to feed 65 million."

Dr. Schacht, minister of economics, praised what he called "the leadership principle" as applied by Adolf Hitler.

"Leaders Must Be Controled."

Although asserting even leaders must be controled, Schacht told the Academy for German Law:

"The leadership principle is the best and happiest idea under one condition—namely: that the leader be a real leader. If all who were being named as leaders were truly leaders what a paradise we would live in."

Hitler, he said, was a true leader.

"In the subconsciousness of every mass phychosis," Schacht continued, "there are anti-capitalitic feelings because the mass, without being aware of it, confounds capitalism with riches."

Stresses Need for Army.

Dwelling on Germany's need for a strong defensive force the economics minister declared:

"Nothing more imperatively demands a capitalistic substructure than a modern defense force. Cannon, airplanes, submarines—everything belonging to modern defense—are things that are unthinkable without industrial superefficiency in the capitalistic sense."

He expressed the opinion that the "urge to earn" must ever remain the foundation of economics and that the state must interfere only if this urge develops into mere lust for gain at the expense of the common good.

He declared "the great part of our population has no conception of the pauperization that has taken place in Germany."

Few Earn More Than $8,000.

He revealed that there were less than 45,000 persons in Germany with an annual income of over $8,000 each.

Schacht pleaded that laws governing shares of stocks should be so liberal that a change of hands could be effected easily.

"It would be ideal, of course, if stockholders never sold their shares, but unfortunately the realities of life are different," he said.

Schacht said only by keeping shares in a liquid state and making possible their quick sale can investors be encouraged to place their savings at the government's disposal.

"Whoever can today divest himself of money for three months must have the assurance that after that period he can get his money back," he declared.

Recluse, Found Injured in Boston Home, Is Dead

Boston, Mass., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Twenty-five years ago Miss Anne Louise Reinzi, master of seven languages, barred the threshold of her home to all comers. One by one gas, electricity and water were turned off as meter readers were refused admittance. For 25 years she spoke to no neighbor. This week the neighbors did not even see her. They called the police who battered down doors and found her lying on the floor. She had a fractured leg. Today, still apparently a victim of the delusion of persecution, she died at City hospital. She was about 90.

WIFE HELD FOR SLAYING BROKER

WIFE, 50, TELLS OF KILLING MATE OVER LOVE RIVAL

Blames Self for Being 'Short and Fat.'

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Amy Dumbrell, crying "I don't believe in divorce," was arraigned today on a charge of murdering her broker husband in a quarrel over the "other woman."

"You see what I am—short and fat," she wept. "That's why I lost my husband."

The broker, 59 year old John H. Dumbrell, was shot as he and his wife argued over Dumbrell's asserted attention to a red haired telephone operator, officers were told. Mrs. Dumbrell identified the woman only as "Mrs. Gladys Jones."

Asks Rival to Step Aside.

"I went to the woman's apartment and had a showdown with her," Inspector William Stanton said the 50 year old matron told him.

"She refused to give up my husband. I suffered in silence for 20 years, but I should never have gone to that woman's house. I knew she was living in a luxurious apartment that she certainly was not able to provide for herself."

Her Son's Gun Used.

"I shot my boy's own father with my boy's own gun," the inspector quoted her. "I did it for the boy's sake, just as I have spent 20 years in torment."

Mrs. Dumbrell said she learned of the "other woman" three years ago through an anonymous telephone call.

"I don't believe in divorce," she explained as she appeared before Municipal Judge George Schonfeld. "I believe divorce cuts the child astray. This outcome was inevitable."

HOLD LODGE MEMORIAL TODAY.

Barnet Hodes, city corporation counsel, will be the principal speaker at 3 p. m. today at annual memorial services to be held by Chicago lodge, No. 4, of the Elks at 174 West Washington street. The list of honored dead of the lodge will be read at the ceremonies.

CITY TO PRESS "JOB SALE" CASE AGAINST WOMAN

The city will press the case against Mrs. Mary Conroy, 36 years old, 5925 South California avenue, a board of education clerk, who is charged with obtaining $1,000 from J. Edward Cordon, 4441 Lowe avenue, on the pretense that she would get him a job with the board of education, Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes said yesterday.

Mrs. Conroy, who was arraigned in the Municipal court Friday, was alleged to have said that she would have to split the $1,000 with city hall officials, who would produce the job. She pleaded not guilty.

"If Mrs. Conroy is guilty as charged we want her punished, and we will take similar action against any one pretending they can buy city jobs," Mr. Hodes said. "I understand there are many complaints of that nature, and we're going to stop it." The next hearing in Mrs. Conroy's case will be held on Wednesday in room 921 of the city hall.

Sales Tax Collections $5,403,952 in November

Collections under the 3 per cent sales tax law totaled $5,403,952 during November, an increase of $250,171 over the previous month, K. L. Ames, state director of finance, announced yesterday. The November collection is the largest so far since the 3 per cent levy went into effect July 1. One-third, or $1,801,317 will be used for relief, about $1,083,000 for the schools throughout the state, and the balance for relief of the blind, the University of Illinois, sinking funds for soldiers' compensation, the waterway bonds, and the general revenue fund.

SOCIETY MATRON DEATH DUE TO LEAP OR FALL

Helen Fahnestock Case Becomes Mystery.

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The death of Mrs. Helen Fahnestock of New York and Newport last night became the subject of investigation today. It was learned her injuries resulted from a fall or leap from a third story window.

Mrs. Fahnestock, 34, was the divorced wife of Snowden A. Fahnestock. She died in New York hospital of fractures and internal injuries, according to Dr. Charles Cassassa, assistant chief medical examiner. The police learned of the doctor's report from newspaper men.

Detectives investigated and said that she was injured fatally on Thanksgiving night in a fall at the home of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Spring Knapp.

Treated for Her Nerves.

The police learned, they reported, that Mrs. Fahnestock had been a patient in a Connecticut sanitarium and had been taken to New York hospital several weeks ago for treatment of a nervous disorder. Hospital officials allowed her to go to the home of her aunt and uncle, at 158 East 64th street, for Thanksgiving dinner. She arrived at the Knapp house at 1 p. m.

Besides the Knapps, her brother, Charles Moran Jr., who is a guest of W. E. Chisholm, was present. After dinner, the police said, Mrs. Fahnestock went to the third floor, presumably to visit a cousin who was ill in bed. She jumped or fell from a window.

Two Physicians Are Called.

Two physicians were called from New York hospital. They sped Mrs. Fahnestock to the hospital in a taxicab, her brother accompanying them. The police said one of the doctors was Dr. Ralph Bower.

Charles Moran, her father, arrived in New York yesterday from his home in Red Cross avenue, Newport.

The Fahnestocks were much in the public eye earlier in the year when she sought to recover custody of their two children while divorce proceedings were pending. Mrs. Fahnestock swore out a writ in the District of Columbia Supreme court, charging that her husband had removed the children illegally from a train en route from Aiken, S. C., to New York.

The court awarded temporary custody to the husband's mother, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock of Washington, until the divorce suit had been heard in Newport. Mr. Fahnestock accused his wife of being infatuated with another man. He demanded permanent custody of their daughters, Clara, 7, and Mary Lee, 6 years old.

At Newport, on Oct. 7, Mr. Fahnestock won a divorce in Superior court on a charge of desertion. It was his second marriage. He divorced his first wife, daughter of Samuel R. Bertron, at Paris in 1924.

Mrs. Fahnestock's great-grandfather was Mathew Moran, minister to Russia and founder of a New York banking house.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Dr. Howard Hyde Russell, 80, founder and associate general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, is to be retired. Dr. Russell's retirement, after his 42 years' of service, is to take place at the league's convention which opens tomorrow.

WOMAN PLUNGES TO DEATH FROM HOTEL BALCONY

Mrs. Ruth Harris, 40 years old, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon when she plunged from a balcony outside her second floor apartment of the Hotel Grasmere at 4621 Sheridan road to the ground. She died soon afterward in the Lake View hospital.

Shortly before the tragedy she had been playing cards in the apartment with Burt Ryan, a resident in the hotel, and Mrs. Kay Bresley, 921 Eastwood avenue. Her husband, Samuel Harris, owner of a loop cigar store, had left the trio a few minutes before she went out on the balcony, with the remark that she "wanted some air."

Ryan and Mrs. Bresley, looking out, saw her climb onto the low balcony rail and ran out. Just as they attempted to seize her she went over, striking her head on the concrete walk beneath. According to the pair, Mrs. Harris had been weeping over a letter she had received informing her that her mother, a Mrs. Davidson of Post, Tex., had become blind.

NEW RUBLE LAW TO CURB LAVISH BULLITT PARTIES

U. S. Envoy's Spending Is Hit by Stabilization.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Nov. 30.—Lavish entertainments staged by Ambassador William Bullitt in Moscow for the new bolshevik aristocracy will be curtailed during approaching Moscow social seasons if M. Grinko, soviet commissar of finance, succeeds in his plan to stabilize the soviet ruble and abolish the "black" [illegal] exchange where for many years Russian currency could be purchased for a fraction of its nominal value.

Grinko has announced that, effective next Feb. 1, one ruble will equal 20 cents. At present $1 has been quoted by the Moscow State bank as worth 1 ruble 13 kopeks.

Ambassador Bullitt, with other foreign diplomats in Moscow, has been purchasing unlimited quantities of rubles for 3 cents each. Before he arrived at his diplomatic post in Moscow rubles could be purchased for 2 cents each. His diplomatic colleagues complain that his princely entertaining and the large expenditures of his huge staf in Moscow was responsible for the 1 cent appreciation of the ruble in the black exchange.

Occupies Private Palace.

Bullitt's large staf of uniformed servants is expertly managed by a housekeeper imported from France. The envoy occupies one of the most beautifully appointed private palaces in Moscow. Once the residence of the former "sugar king" of Russia, the palace was formerly used by the commissariat of foreign affairs to house important guests. Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov lived there during the early years of militant communism when Mme. Litvinov cooked meals on a kerosene stove in the bathroom.

Bullitt and his staf will not be affected by the decision to liquidate the "torgsin" stores, which sold a department store variety of goods for foreign currency and gold, silver, and jewelry.

The American diplomats have a store of their own which supplies their needs. Until recently the diplomatic pouch was used to import other articles, but the exposé of THE TRIBUNE that the pouch was being used illegally to carry rubles and goods into Moscow caused the Washington state department to take action. American diplomats who cannot satisfy their requirements at the embassy commissary must now do their shopping in Finland.

Staf in Five Story Building.

The chancery of the American embassy in Moscow and the staf occupies a five story apartment building. It was constructed by the soviet government to house the families of the members of the central executive comimttee, but was turned over to the American government, which is paying the extraordinary high rent which the soviet charges to foreign representations.

Moscow is considered the softest berth in the American foreign service since it is one post where the government pays the rent of its employés. Rents in Moscow are high, even for those paying in "black rubles." However, clerks at the United States embassy are in a position where they can maintain an establishment with two servants.

Visiting American diplomats and Americans who have relatives employed in the embassy are warned not to exchange their money at the official rate of exchange and are supplied with rubles at 4 and 5 cents each.

Embassy Has Own Doctor.

Because the soviet government only permits two physicians in Moscow to have a private practice and attend medical requirements of the foreign colony, Bullitt arranged for the embassy to have its own doctor. Since the Kremlin apothecary will only fill prescriptions for the chiefs of the foreign missions, the ambassador persuaded the American navy to supply a hardboiled pharmacist mate who presides over a well equipped drug store and untiringly but fruitlessly recommends Brown's mixture and castor oil, the standard remedies of the navy, to delicate diplomats.

Moscow's gay social season is now in full swing and more soviet officials have appeared in full dress this year than ever before. A short five years ago a white collar was still considered bourgeoisie by the Reds, but today in the stafs of the bolshevik commissariats a Russian blouse or semi-military jacket buttoning up to the neck is a rarity.

Last April the climax of the diplomatic colony's round of entertainments was a party staged by Bullitt which rivaled the exploits of the grand dukes.

Story of Reception.

The following account of the reception was cabled abroad:

"The American embassy here was turned into a fair replica of a zoo, or, as some would have it, a collectivized farm for the official reception given yesterday by Ambassador William C. Bullitt to high soviet officials, the diplomatic corps and the American colony.

"More than 400 guests on their arrival found the residence of the ambassador had been made the temporary abode of a flock of farmyard fowl, a miniature herd of young goats, two bear cubs, and a large assortment of song birds.

"The roosters which had been brought in for the occasion had ceased crowing long before the gala affair broke up in broad daylight. The flowers in season which decorated the spacious rooms supplemented the birds and young animals in supplying a spring motif.

Uzbek Dancers Entertain.

"The entertainers included a Caucasian orchestra, Caucasian and Uzbek dancers, Russian accordion players. Two jazz orchestras alternated in the ballroom. A number of ballerinas from the Bolshoi theater, who were guests, danced.

"The soviet guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Litvinov, Commissar of Foreign Trade Rosengoltz, Commissar of Light Industry Lubimov, Assistant Commissar of Defense Tukhachevski. The arrangements were in charge of Charles Thayer, secretary to the ambassador, and Mrs. John Wiley, wife of the counselor of the embassy."

Ambassador Bullitt's efforts to cultivate good will and friendly relations among the bolsheviks have thus far proven barren of results. The only evidence of the million dollar embassy and its thirty car garage which the Roosevelt administration decided to erect in Moscow is a few piles of brick and lumber which were piled on the site last spring. Work has not begun even on the foundation and the ambassador's efforts to persuade the soviet government to supply workers failed.

Mrs. Frederick L. Mandel Jr. was used as a shield by robbers attempting holdup at yacht dock early today, and her husband joined watchman in opening fire on holdup pair. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Mandel Jr. are pictured above. At the right are Leon Mandel, brother of Fred and owner of the yacht, and his bride of two months. Leon Mandel also participated in the shooting and he and his wife were endangered by bullets. Nobody was wounded. The attempted holdup and battle occurred near the south end of the Michigan avenue bridge.

LATIN SOVIETISM CALLED CRIPPLED BY REVOLT CRASH

See Brazilian Action Aiding All S. America.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 30.—(AP)—First-ranking diplomats shared the opinion of other informed observers tonight that communism as a continental force in South America has been devitalized by the crushing of Brazil's five day rebellion.

Out of the conflict a stronger liberal democracy had emerged in Brazil, these quarters felt. Even opponents of the administration agreed that President Getulio Vargas in quickly meeting the challenge of a leftist revolt had shown the vigor of his democratic régime.

Seeks to Oust Officers.

The newspaper Anoite stated that Vargas would send a message to congress on Monday asking for modification of the law of national security in order to authorize the government to dismiss temporarily officers involved in the revolt.

The paper said the president sought such power until the military courts decided definitly whether the dismissals were justified. Vargas was reported seeking similar authority over public functionaries, and the right to punish extremist newspapers.

Capt. Triffino Correa, prominent member of the communist national liberating alliance, was brought here from Bello Horizonte, in the state of Minas Geraes. Police said he had a letter from the head of the rebels which implicated him as leader of the uprising in that state.

Chief of Revolt Jailed.

Dispatches from Sao Paulo said Gen. Miguel Costa, accused as a revolutionary chief, had been arrested there. Maj. Alceu Cavalcanti, an instructor at the army general staf school, whom the minister of war called the supreme chief of the revolt, was imprisoned here.

Police were seeking several rebels of the Praia Vermelha barracks outbreak who were reported hiding in the woods in nearby mountains.

Former President Arthur Bernardes, in an interview, said all true Brazilians repudiated the doctrins of the rebels and united on the government's side. He added, however, that his party would continue its opposition to the government because the program which his group advocates was not fulfilled.

HANNIBAL CLOSES CENTENARY RITES FOR MARK TWAIN BIRTH

Hannibal, Mo., Nov. 30.—(AP)—This quiet Mississippi river town, immortalized by Mark Twain, tonight ended its year long centennial commemoration of his birth.

It was here, with the swirling river, Cardiff hill and cave and countryside, that Samuel Clemens spent the boyhood years that so markedly influenced his writings.

It was from the river, on which he later became a pilot, that Clemens took his pen name for the writings that made him world famous.

Hannibal's homage to its most famous son began Jan. 15. Then President Roosevelt pressed a key at the White House that lit a perpetual beacon on Cardiff hill.

SLAIN BY WIFE.

Neon Ky., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—As a result of deep ax wounds, which, police said, were inflicted by his wife, Anna, 45, Jess Caudill, 50, Dry Fork farmer, died at his home.

MOTHER, 43, HAS 4TH SET OF TWINS; 14 CHILDREN NOW

Mrs. Cora Hausen, 43 years old, 5647 Windsor avenue, gave birth to her fourth set of twins, both boys, last night at the County hospital. Each weighed seven and a half pounds. Birth of the two boys makes a total of 14 children now in the Hausen family roster. They now have nine sons and five daughters.

Mrs. Hausen's husband, William, is a chauffeur, and they are rearing their family on his $33 weekly wage. Mrs. Hausen said she was a little disappointed because the latest twins were not girls so she would have had seven children of each sex.

The mother and the new twins are doing nicely, according to Dr. Joseph Cangelosi, who is attending them.

2 Boys Held to Grand Jury in Former Official's Death

Edwardsville, Ill., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Ronald E. Rambo and James Jarrett, both 15, were held to the Madison county grand jury here this afternoon after statements of five witnesses testifying before a coroner's jury in the death of John C. Higgins, former deputy treasurer, who was shot to death early Tuesday morning.

GOOD FELLOWS TO GET TOGETHER ON WGN PROGRAM

Cartoonist M'Cutcheon to Be Chief Speaker.

BY PHIL MAXWELL.

With an address by John T. McCutcheon and an all-star musical and dramatic cast, a half-hour Good Fellow radio program will be heard over W-G-N next Sunday evening during the weekly evensong period, 6 to 6:30 o'clock.

The broadcast will be witnessed and heard in studio 1 of the new W-G-N radio building by 600 persons who each year join in this Christmas movement, giving hundreds of baskets of food, toys, and candy to unfortunate families.

Christmas songs will be presented by the sixteen members of the carol group of the Chicago A Cappella choir directed by Noble Cain, who also is general choral conductor of THE TRIBUNE's annual Chicagoland Music Festival held in Soldiers' field. W-G-N's staf organist will play, and a dramatic cast will enact a Good Fellow playlet, written by Morrison Wood, W-G-N staf writer, who will direct the entire program.

First Meeting of Good Fellows.

This will be the first time in the history of the Good Fellow campaign that a general meeting has been planned for Chicago Good Fellows. Those who have already enlisted in the work and those signing up early this week will be sent two tickets for the broadcast. Enrollment as a Good Fellow may be made by filling in the coupon on this page.

Beginning tomorrow morning the Good Fellow bureau will be opened at THE TRIBUNE'S Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, and names of unfortunate families to which the Good Fellow is asked to take a Christmas basket may be obtained. The telephone number is Superior 0100.

The broadcast next Sunday night will be the first of two Good Fellow programs to be given this season. The second will be held Monday afternoon, Dec. 23, from 4 to 4:30 o'clock, around a huge Christmas tree to be placed in the entrance between Tribune Tower and the new W-G-N building.

More than 100 of the outstanding church choir singers of this city will present a recital of carols. Fifteen minutes of this program, from 4 to 4:15 o'clock, will be broadcast over W-G-N.

Two important meetings in connection with the Good Fellow campaign are scheduled to be held this week in the conference room off Tribune Tower lobby. Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock a group of choir and choral directors will discuss the possibility of taking more than 100 baskets, and Wednesday afternoon at the same time the annual aviation Good Fellow committees will confer. John Casey, manager of the Chicago airport, has been named chairman for the aviation industry. For two years, under the leadership of Capt. Ben Lipsner, this group has distributed nearly 200 baskets.

CHIDES TEACHERS FOR 'BUY BRITISH' LITERARY TASTE

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A charge that too many teachers "buy British" in assigning literature studies came today from Prof. Howard Mumford Jones of the University of Michigan in an address before the national council of teachers of English.

"We are perhaps the only great nation in the world that accepts uncritically its literary standards from a country thousands of miles away," Jones said.

He described American literature as "the orphan child of the curriculum."

"I do not wish to cut off the American student from reading Chaucer, Shakespeare, Milton, Wordsworth and Dickens and other English writers," Prof. Jones said, "but British literature can be overdone for American consumption."

Ely Culbertson to Compete in Bridge Tournament Here

Ely Culbertson, bridge expert, yesterday telegraphed from New York that he and his wife, and Al Morehead and Richard Frey, ranking bridge players, will enter the four team title play in the bridge tournament opening at the Stevens hotel tomorrow. The contest, held under the auspices of the American Bridge league, is the ninth annual national championship bridge tournament. It is the first to be held in Chicago since 1929. The play will start tomorrow and will continue for seven days. It is expected that nearly 1,000 players will participate.

40,000 TEACHERS TAKE BAY STATE ALLEGIANCE OATH BEFORE DEADLINE

Boston, Mass., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The deadline of midnight found some 40,000 Massachusetts public and private school and college teachers tonight sworn to uphold the state and federal constitutions, a compulsory allegiance to which few objected, but they loudly.

A statute so drawn that numerous rulings were required to clarify it, the state commissioner of education, Dr. Payson Smith, found tonight still further clarification was needed to decide if students who taught while studying teaching also were required to pledge allegiance.

The most conspicuous objector to the law, Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, eminent Harvard geologist, continued "simply sitting tight" in his refusal to subscribe to any teachers oath except his own.

The law was passed at the insistence of patriotic and veterans' organizations. It was bitterly opposed by nearly every college president in the state.

HUGE AIR BEACON DEDICATED IN N. Y. TO ROGERS, POST

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Towering high in the sky, an airway beacon of 1,800,000 candle power blazed tonight atop George Washington bridge in honor of the late Will Rogers and Wiley Post.

As the huge revolving beam was turned on, pilots of planes flying overhead dipped their wings and army homing pigeons were released from the top of the huge span.

Mrs. Post, the flier's widow who flew here from Ponca City, Okla., to attend the dedication, spoke briefly.

"I am glad to be here at this expression of appreciation for Will and Wiley," she said.

A 14 passenger Douglas transport plane, flying fast and low through heavy skies, was the first commercial aircraft to fly over the lighted memorial beacon. The beacon's beams will be seen for 64 miles.

Ring Lardner Jr. Takes Hollywood Screen Test

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Ring Lardner Jr., who came here to write movie publicity, has been given a screen test, it became known today. David Selznick, president of a producing company, is said to be undecided whether to make Lardner an actor as well as a writer. Lardner, 24 years old, is a Princeton graduate.

COMMUNITY FUND STILL SHY $280,000; ONE WEEK TO GO

The 1935 Community Fund campaign will enter its final week tomorrow $280,000 short of the goal of $3,200,000. The success of the campaign now depends on the response from corporations and employé groups who have taken pledge cards but have not yet made any return on them, said Philip D. Armour, general chairman of the drive.

"The 1,100 business men who volunteered in this campaign job have now been at it for more than two months and they have a right to be relieved of it and given a chance to get back to their own affairs," Mr. Armour stated. "Therefore, I ask coöperation with them by all who intend to subscribe."

Many donors to the fund in previous years are still missing from the list of contributors, according to an analysis of the returns to date. "This is a little hard to understand because the need this year is greater and we believe this is generally understood," Mr. Armour said.

Clarence B. Randall, chairman of the trades and industries division, urged a 100 per cent attendance of workers at the final report luncheon next Friday.

MUSIC, CHRISTMAS and LYON & HEALY
Just Naturally Go Together

Someone has aptly said, "Christmas is 90% music." For 70 years, Lyon & Healy has been doing its best to spread this jolly spirit abroad by the music route. . . . For a little boy, there's Christmas in a bright red drum; Christmas for his mother in the piano she has coveted for her home (and she'll be glad to know prices are much lower this year!); Christmas sings in the mellow-voiced Violin; Christmas pops out of Musical Toys; it reflects good cheer from Junior's shiny new Saxophone; Christmas lives forever on Records and the Phonograph-Radios which play them. . . . Music is the Mood of Christmas and you'll discover it in a hundred different gift-ideas at Lyon & Healy's tomorrow.

PROCESSING TAX AMENDMENT IS DECLARED FRAUD

Cotton Mill Brief Filed in Supreme Court.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Receivers for the Hoosac Mills corporation of Massachusetts hurled the charge of "fraud" today against AAA amendments with which congress attempted to strenghten the constitutionality of processing taxes.

Their written arguments in the test case, which will be debated orally Dec. 9, in the Supreme court, were followed quickly, however, by a "friend of the court" brief in which the American Farm Bureau federation defended the taxes and held them comparable to protective tarifs for industry.

"Taxation without representation," "insidious effort," "congress has abdicated," and "burocrats" were among the phrases denouncing the AAA in the 116 page document filed with the nine justices by the milling company.

Call First Act Invalid.

Expressing a willingness to have the court consider both the orignial AAA act and the later amendments in deciding the case, based on taxes imposed prior to amendment, the company argued that congress conceded the original act was invalid by amending it.

The brief asserted the amendments were "a fraud, in essence, upon the powers delegated to congress by the people," and constituted a "rubber stamp of acts" by the secretary of agriculture. It charged the amended law was a "bare-faced attempt to collect and keep proceeds of these taxes whether they are legal or not."

The farm bureau's brief insisted that AAA developed from a congressional study which began in 1924, and argued that the protective tarif, upheld by the court, obtains for industry a higher price for products in domestic comsumption, while processing taxes have the same objective with respect to surplus agricultural commodities "regarding which the protective tarif system is wholly ineffective."

Counsel Gives Opinion.

Counsel for the New England mills had this to say about the action of government attorneys in citing the "general welfare" clause of the constitution as upholding processing taxes:

"It is unnecessary to answer because it is clear to us that it cannot possibly include a power to control through use of the tax money, the conduct and activity of business otherwise beyond congressional control."

Farm bureau lawyers, however, insisted that the taxes are intended to provide for the general welfare, and asserted that the determination of congress as to what constitutes the general welfare "is one for which courts will rarely, if ever, substitute their own judgment."

Power Is Delegated.

To uphold the amended act, contended Hoosac Mills, would be "to reduce our government to a par with continental states where the executive functions as he pleases . . . and summons on acquiescent legislature for solemn ratification of his acts."

The brief argued that if the "colosal system" of AAA is upheld "we may no longer have a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, but a government by a burocracy, for the benefit of the burocrats effected not by orderly amendments to the constitution, but the legislature encroachment and judicial interpretation."

"Congress Has Abdicated."

Striking at the powers of the secretary of agriculture, the Hoosac lawyers said he was "not limited to paying and collecting" the taxes, but also was given "unlimited discretionary powers in expending their proceeds."

"Congress has abdicated its function of making laws for the people it represents," the brief added.

It said farmers "were driven to accept the program" because "they will suffer in competition if they do not."

"Reduced to the lowest terms," the Hoosac brief continued, "the AAA contended that the government may come to the relief of the farmer by purchasing from him with public money an agreement to limit his production and to subject himself to an elaborate system of federal control."

It contended the act attempted to do indirectly by "purchase" that which congress could not do directly by "penalties."

There has been considerable speculation among attorneys whether the court will pass upon the amended act in deciding the Hoosac case, since the record in the lower courts was based entirely upon the original legislation.

The government's brief, however, contended that the original act was valid, but that should it be held otherwise, congress had "ratified" its purpose with the amendments.

The action of the milling company in challenging the amendments today was believed by some to increase the probability that the justices will take both original and amended laws into consideration.

Law Violation "Immaterial."

On that phase of the case, the farm bureau's brief contended the issue of delegation of legislative power, one of the grounds on which the Boston Circuit court ruled the taxes invalid, has "become immaterial because of the action of congress in ratifying the action of the treasury in collecting processing taxes."

The farm bureau contended congress previously had ratified earlier actions of the President and secretary of the treasury through the emergency banking act and the Thomas amendment.

Hoosac lawyers charged the AAA was "part and parcel" of the "same school of thought" that "attempted to impose the federal will upon all business through NRA."

Hits State Rights.

Asserting the act invaded the field of state power, the brief said no argument "could change the plain fact that the farmer plants and harvests his crops . . . and the manufacturer spins and weaves his cloth within state lines."

If the act is upheld, it was said the "power of states is curtailed, authority of states diminished, and foundations laid for ultimate destruction of states and the union."

Asserting the act was not a revenue measure, but purely a farm control plan, the mills attorneys said, "after all the processing taxes are collected, the government will not have one more cent than it had before."

Court Voids Law.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Holding that the act deprived mortgage holders of constitutionally guaranteed rights, Federal Judge A. Lee Wyman today ruled the amended Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium bill unconstitutional.

Judge Wyman gave his decision in review of a foreclosure action by the Union Central Life Insurance company of Cincinnati, O., against Mrs. Elsie Buntrock of Columbia, S. D. The law also has been held inoperative in three previous trials.

COMMUNICATION BODY WILL FIGHT MOVE FOR U. S. CONTROL OF RADIO

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Chairman Anning S. Prall said today the federal communications commission would oppose any attempts in the next congress to bring radio under government ownership. He said in an interview that studies of foreign methods of government control had shown they "wouldn't be nearly as satisfactory as our present system."

Under government ownership, Prall said, "the political party in power would have almost an exclusive right to reach the people of the country by radio." This he described as "a very dangerous thing."

The cost of acquiring and operating radio stations, paying high salaried talent and other expenses, he continued, "would be a tremendous sum."

Whether it was paid from a direct tax on radio listeners, as the case in England, or whether it was financed from other government revenues, Prall said, it would constitute a new tax burden on the people.

Burglar Caught in Act Charged with 18 Raids

Eighteen complaints charging burglary were signed yesterday at the Sheffield avenue station against Raymond Paris, 17 years old, 1205 North La Salle street. Paris, who used the alias Jack Friedman, was arrested Monday night while robbing the apartment of Col. Henry A. Allen, 400 Briar place. Police held also Frank Edelman, 23 years old, 3526 West 13th place, for investigation in connection with Paris' crimes. Edelman was found in charge of a notion store at 437 North Clark street, where Paris said he had disposed of most of his loot to Frank's brother, Robert, who is sought.

MAYOR IN IOWA CHALLENGES WPA DATA IN NATION

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—A militant Iowa mayor, Edwin C. Manning of Ottumwa, challenged the Roosevelt administration today to a showdown on the number of men now at work on PWA projects in this nation.

Mayor Manning, citing statistics in his own Wapello county, took exception to statements attributed to Harry L. Hopkins, that the WPA goal "virtually is attained." In a telegram to Hopkins, Manning said: "Explain to us how WPA work goal 'virtually attained' if in Wapello county, Ia., less than one-half of 1,300 workers certified by the Iowa Emergency Relief administration to WPA are at work. Either some one's figures are incorrect or we are Roosevelt's forgotten men."

Mayor Manning's opinion that approximately one-half of the certified workers of the country are actually at work on WPA projects is directly in contradiction to estimates made by President Roosevelt in his Atlanta, Ga., speech yesterday.

NAVAL RESERVE BAND SPONSORS MILITARY BALL

The United States Naval Reserve band, composed of Chicagoans, the only naval reserve band in the country, sponsored a military ball last night at the Naval Reserve armory, Randolph street and the lake. American Legion and other military groups participated in the program, the proceeds of which will be devoted to purchase of equipment for the Naval Reserve band, according to Ralph R. Rossiter, chairman. Mary McCormick, opera star, radio performers, the Chicago Board of Trade post band, the Commonwealth Edison post drum and bugle corps, the Van Buren post drum and bugle corps, and St. Michael's High school girl's band were on the program.

1,100 FERA Employes to Get Other Jobs.

and requisitions had been sent out for a total 203,520 men. In Chicago 56,966 were at work, 81,250 assigned, and 97,250 requisitioned.

"I feel confident that with a total of 203,520 requisitions out, a sufficient number will have reported for work by midnight Saturday, so that Illinois will have fulfilled its quota of 183,400 by Sunday," said Mr. Burke.

Strikes on two WPA projects were averted yesterday when assurances were given the men that their pay checks, due yesterday, would be ready for them before they left the jobs. The intended strikers, 1,000 engaged on a park project at Wilson avenue and the lake, and 150 on a paving project at Glenlake avenue and Clark street, showed an unwillingness to work when they arrived at the jobs, but took up their tools, according to WPA headquarters, when told their checks would be forthcoming.

Checks are handed out seven days after the end of a particular pay roll period, it was explained. To make sure that there would be no additional delays Mr. Burke yesterday approved a plan to have one paymaster for every 3,000 workers. This will increase the paymaster force, he said, by thirty men.

Tentative allocations of relief funds to Illinois counties for December were made yesterday by Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. The allotments totaled approximately $7,300,000, which includes 5 millions of federal money, the last to be given the state for relief purposes.

Cook county was alloted $4,196,986, and the downstate counties $2,592,548. In addition, there were a number of small allotments for special purposes.

"The allocations are subject to change," said Reynolds, "since we cannot forecast the exact effect of WPA employment in every county. We expect there will be unexpended balances in many of the counties at the end of the month."

29 Injured in 15 Days.

The first issue of "Safety Notes," the semi-monthly bulletin of the Illinois WPA safety division, reports that 29 persons were injured on WPA projects between Nov. 1 and Nov. 15, nine of whom were working in Chicago. The average number of men at work in the state was 80,000 during that period. The bulletin says the showing was good, but could have been better.

WPA takes care of injured persons for 30 days, giving whatever immediate medical or hospital service is needed. Reports are made during that period to the United States employment compensation commission.

The Chicago Fair authority, the commission in charge of plans for the lake front exposition, will meet with architects Thursday at the Palmer house to review preliminary building plans for the lake front fair Walter S. Gregory, president of the commission, announced yesterday. Work on the landscaping of the 180 acres in Burnham park, to be occupied by the fair, is now in progress as a WPA project.

'HOT POTATO' TAX ACT BECOMES EFFECTIVE UNDER AAA TODAY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The "hot potato" act, which provides for a tax of three fourths of a cent a pound on all potatoes harvested after Dec. 1 and sold in excess of a national allotment, goes into effect at midnight tonight.

The first potato crop to which the control act will apply, according to AAA officials, will be harvested late in December. An allotment of 226,600,000 bushels was fixed by the AAA a month ago. Officials said this allotment was large enough to cover the amount of potatoes usually sold in a year and that few persons would be required to pay the tax.

Each grower will receive from a county committee tax exemption stamps to cover the amount of his allotment. The law says these stamps must be attached to packages when the potatoes are sold. Buyers and sellers of unstamped potatoes are liable to a $1,000 fine.

Mayor Will Accompany President to Notre Dame

Mayor Kelly said yesterday that he will accompany President Roosevelt to Notre Dame university at South Bend, Ind., on Dec. 9, when the President receives an honorary degree from the university, but that he and Mrs. Kelly will not go on to Washington for dinner at the White House, as had been previously reported at the city hall. President Roosevelt will go to South Bend after addressing the American Farm Bureau federation here earlier in the day.

Colored Woman, 112 Years Old, Falls and Breaks Leg

Mrs. Delia Walton, 112 years old, colored, 3439 Prairie avenue, was admitted to the County hospital last night after she fell and fractured her leg in her home. Mrs. Walton, who recalled the days when she was a slave in Maryland, is said to be the oldest patient ever treated in the hospital.

WOMAN HANGS SELF IN ROOM.

Mrs. Marie Conway, 41 years old, ended her life by hanging yesterday in her room at 1815 Winona avenue, where she had been living more than a week.

NRA BILL READY IF OPPORTUNITY FOR IT DEVELOPS

President Advised of Its Provisions.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A new NRA bill was reported authoritatively today to be ready for swift submission to congress should business show signs of wanting it.

In the same informed quarter it was stated that President Roosevelt had been advised of the basic provisions of the measure and had expressed no objections.

Its provisions were guarded, but more than one in a position to know said it would:

1. Re-state the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce and add activities which "substantially affect" interstate commerce.

2. Permit application of voluntary codes to businesses engaged in such commerce.

3. Forbid price fixing in codes except for natural resources and in restraint of monopolies. [Natural resources might be eliminated in view of the expectation of some New Dealers that the Guffey coal bill will weather the Supreme court.]

Decision on Program Delayed.

A decision on what to do with the bill will not be made, at the earliest, until conclusion of the meeting of business men called Dec. 9 by George L. Berry, coördinator for industrial coöperation.

Berry and his advisers are represented as doubting anything can be obtained beyond a possible agreement for the creation of a permanent organization of labor and business leaders to give attention to industrial problems.

"But," said one administration leader on Capitol hill, "if the meeting develops any substantial sentiment for a new NRA, the described bill will be pushed at the session beginning Jan. 3. If not, it will stay in its pigeonhole pending developments."

Similar to Earlier One.

The projected measure follows closely one which was ready for enactment last May when the Supreme court invalidated the old NRA. The ways and means committee had agreed informally to report that bill to the house with a recommendation that it pass. A formal vote was delayed pending the Supreme court decision in the Schechter case.

INDUSTRIAL AND LABOR LEADERS CONFER DEC. 9

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A proposal for round table discussions by 57 groups at his conference on industry's problems Dec. 9 was advanced today by George L. Berry, industrial recovery coördinator.

Under the plan, representatives of industry would be divided into 44 groups, and labor into 13 for discussions before spokesmen are sent to a main conference to talk over proposals for promoting recovery.

Berry emphasized that the divisions he suggested could be changed if desired by either industry or labor, saying:

"The groupings we have suggested are in no sense arbitrary. Industry and labor representatives are perfectly free to appeal from our proposed organization of the conference, and to sit with the group which they believe is most directly concerned with their particular interests."

TWO BROKERS GET PRISON AND FINES FOR FRAUD

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Motions for a new trial were overruled and sentences were pronounced by Judge Robert C. Baltzell in United States District court here this afternoon against Myron Hughel and Walter Pfaff. Those Indianapolis brokers were convicted of mail fraud. Judge Baltzell sentenced Hughel to five years imprisonment and $3,000 fine. Pfaff received a three year prison sentence and $2,000 fine. James E. Watson, formerly United States senator from Indiana, who acted as Hughel's counsel, did not appear in court today. It will be decided later whether to appeal.

Dr. Breasted's Condition 'Same'; Malady in Doubt

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The condition of Dr. James H. Breasted, Egyptologist, who is seriously ill in a New York hospital, was reported "unchanged" today. Hospital authorities said his illness, at first thought to be tropical malaria, has not been satisfactorily diagnosed.

BONUS PASSAGE OVER VETO SEEN AT NEXT SESSION

Noninflation Measure Given Best Chance.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt probably again will veto a soldiers' bonus bill but it will be passed at the next session of congress over his veto, Senator Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.] predicted today.

To this statement was added a warning from Senator Elmer Thomas [Dem., Okla.] that his group would fight against paying the bonus in "credit." Thomas, who has been bitter over the administration's buying of silver without remonetizing it at face value, notified Democratic leaders that he would oppose anything but a cash payment of the bonus.

Opposes Credit Payment.

"If the bonus is paid in what amounts to credit, that will benefit no one," he asserted. "If they pay it in cash, that will do the job."

McNary would not say what kind of a bonus measure, in his opinion, would be passed by congress, but he is reported to feel that a noninflation bill would have the best chance. He was one of the senators who last May helped to sustain the President's disapproval of the Patman plan to pay war veterans two billion dollars immediately with new currency.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau this week revealed that the administration was still opposed to a cash payment of the bonus.

May Use Stabilization Fund.

President Roosevelt's failure to cite the 2 billion dollar stabilization fund as a government asset in his Atlanta speech aroused some speculation today whether he might not be earmarking the fund for some specific purpose such as eventual bonus payment. The President noted assets of 6 billions in analyzing the treasury's condition but did not mention the stabilization fund. The fund will expire and be returned to the treasury reserves in January unless the President extends its powers for a year.

Policeman Draws Out $546 for Mother-in-Law; Robbed

Policeman William J. Carroll, 8322 Maryland avenue, drew $546 from a bank for his mother-in-law yesterday. Promptly three gunmen fired a shot at him, halted his automobile at 101st street and Commercial avenue, and took the money. The policeman was in plain clothes.

DANCER IS SHOT MYSTERIOUSLY; ESCORT SOUGHT

Clews Fail to Jibe with the Girl's Version of Case.

The Irving Park police were investigating last night the mysterious shooting early in the day of Miss Ruth Graybell, 24 years old, 221 North Lockwood avenue, dancer at the Via Lago café, 835 Wilson avenue. Miss Graybell, shot twice in the hip and back, was taken to the West Side hospital at 6 o'clock in the morning by a well dressed man who disappeared.

Miss Renee Larkes, 23, of 4708 Kenmore avenue, a friend of Miss Graybell and also an employé at the Via Lago, was seized for questioning by detectives last night as she was entering the West Side hospital.

The café dancer told the police at the hospital that she was fired upon by two men when she refused to accept an invitation to go riding with them while waiting for a street car at Cicero and Montrose avenues.

Police Find Conflicting Data.

Sergt. Leo Brandt later asserted that her account of the shooting did not agree with other facts ascertained during the investigation which disclosed two bullet holes in her dress and underclothing, but none in the fur coat that she was wearing.

After the shooting she said she called a taxicab and ordered the driver to take her to a hospital. She asserted that the cab driver took her first to the office of Dr. M. S. Petrone, 2403 West Chicago avenue.

Physician Tells of Visit.

Dr. Petrone informed the police that she appeared at his office with a well dressed man who was not a cab driver. Both were intoxicated, he said.

When the physician went to the telephone to summon the police, the two left his office. Miss Graybell's escort saying that he would take her to a hospital himself.

The police believe that she was wounded while attending a party. A search is being made for her escort.

NEW DEAL MEN GET BOSS JOBS ON WPA PROJECT

Carbondale, Ill., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—An analysis today revealed that when 800 men go to work Monday every timekeeper and supervisor of the WPA projects in Jackson county will be a loyal New Dealer, in accordance with the frank policy stated by William W. Williams, WPA director of 22 southern Illinois counties.

In the list are several former Republicans who have been wooed. The local hodcarriers' union meanwhile has announced that a state-wide strike is planned by the Illinois Workers' alliance to be called Dec. 16. The union is insisting on prevailing union wages, shorter hours, free transportation to and from the WPA jobs, and ambulance service.

Liquor Distributor Faces Price Cutting Injunction

Circuit Judge George Fred Rush said yesterday he would enjoin the Old Dearborn distributing company from cutting prices of branded products of the Seagram Distillers corporation. The injunction is asked because of alleged violations of the new state fair trade practices act. Abe Marco, president of the Retail Liquor Dealers' association, and Brig. Gen. Frank R. Schwengel, a vice president of the Seagram company, testified yesterday that Chicago is a "hot bed" of price cutting which is ruinous to the industry. Judge Rush said he would hear arguments tomorrow on whether the injunction should remain in effect pending an appeal from his decision.

MAURICE L ROTHSCHILD

MINNEAPOLIS STATE AT JACKSON—CHICAGO ST. PAUL

Needham Free Tomorrow; 4 Others' Plea Heeded.

Four former officials of H. O. Stone & Company, defunct real estate firm, who were convicted in 1934 of using the mails to defraud, are to be paroled by the government on Dec. 20, after serving a little over 20 months of a three year sentence at the Federal detention farm at Milan, Mich. They are Henry F. Norcott, president at the time the concern failed in 1934 with a loss of $14,000,000 to investors; Harold D. Bennett, vice president; W. Scott Carroll, controler, and Charles P. Packer Jr., treasurer.

Needham Goes Free Tomorrow.

A fifth official of the company, Leslie A. Needham, general counsel, will be freed at the Milan farm tomorrow. He was sentenced to serve one year, beginning Feb. 1, 1935, and—with the usual allowance of five days a month off for good behavior—has completed his term.

The four to be paroled made their applications in person last September when Arthur D. Woods, chairman of the Federal board of pardons and paroles, visited the Milan institution. Under federal law, any prisoner may apply for parole after serving one-third of his sentence.

Although no official announcement of the parole grant was made from Washington, it was disclosed yesterday by Walter K. Urich, chief probation officer for the Chicago district, that he had been notified of the impending event so that he could make arrangements for supervision. The parolees must report to him regularly until April 7, 1937, three years from the date of their commitment. Needham also will be under supervision for the next two months.

History of the Crash.

H. O. Stone & Company was formed in 1835 and until the late years of the last decade had a successful career. It passed out of the hands of the original owners and into those of the Norcott group long before its failure in 1930.

Up to that time it had sold $7,500,000 of stock and had underwritten bonds for a total of $30,000,000. In bankruptcy proceedings it was disclosed that the entire assets left were only $137,500.

When the officials were tried for mail fraud, the principal allegation was that they had sold securities of the company when they knew it was insolvent.

Convicted Two Times.

In January, 1933, they were all found guilty and Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward sentenced each to 20 years in prison and fined them $15,000.

The case was taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which ordered a new trial. On March 16 a second jury found the officials guilty. Judge Philip L. Sullivan, two weeks later, imposed the three year sentences on the four and decreed one year for Needham.

Courtland S. Dines Engaged to Marry a Fourth Time

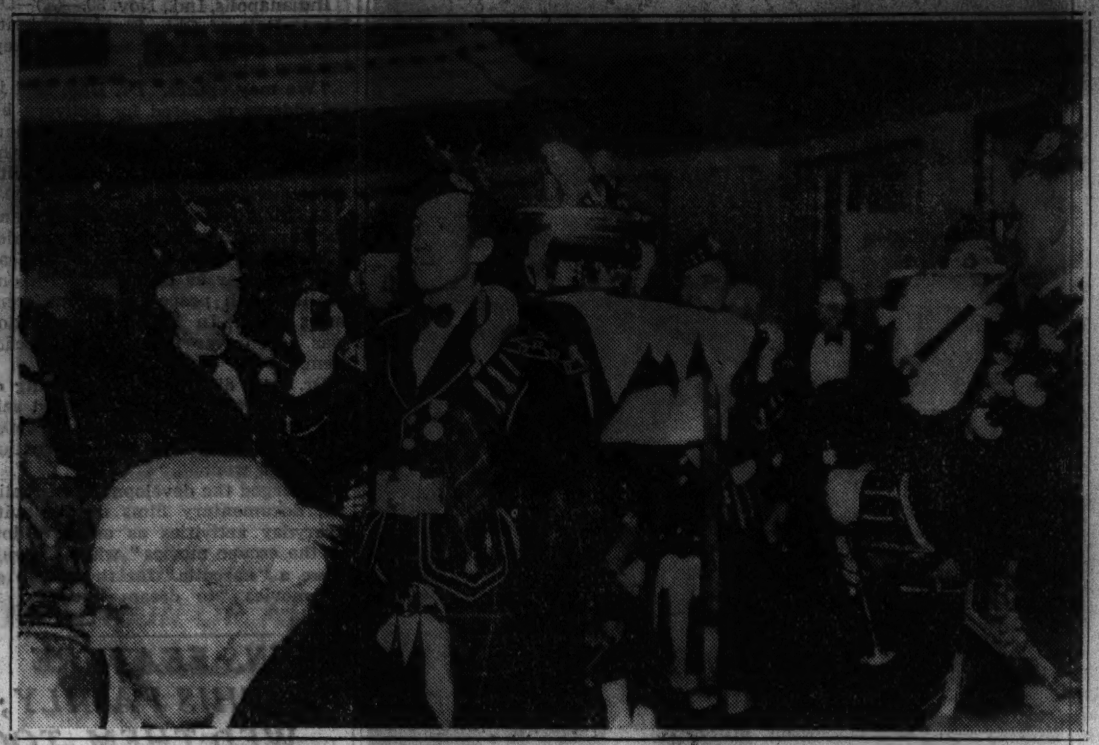
Denver, Colo., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Courtland S. Dines, Denver oil broker, announced tonight that he is soon to marry Mrs. Betty Arbon of New York, widow of Capt. Paul Arbon of the British Royal Flying corps. Mrs. Arbon is here and the couple planned to leave in a plane for Palm Beach, Fla., and stop on the way for the ceremony.

Dines has been married and divorced three times. On Jan. 1, 1924, he was shot and seriously wounded in Los Angeles, Cal., by Horace Greer, chauffeur for Mabel Normand, moving picture star who has since died.

First Warehouse Operator Convicted Under New Law

The Illinois commerce commission yesterday obtained the first conviction under the new state warehouse law, enacted July 1, which requires warehouse owners to purchase a $50 state license and post a $5,000 bond. William R. Miller, owner of the ABC warehouse at 2525 Madison street, pleaded guilty and was fined $100 by Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland.

PIPERS ACCOMPANY SCOTS BEARING HAGGIS



To the music of bagpipers, kilted Highlanders bore in the haggis on their shoulders when the Illinois Saint Andrew society held its dinner in the Palmer house last evening. The proceeds of the annual "Feast of the Haggis" go to the maintenance of the Scottish Old Peoples' home in Riverside.

1,300 Attend Ancient Tribal Ceremony.

The Illinois' St. Andrew society held its annual "feast of the haggis," [an ancient Scottish ceremony] last night in the Grand ballroom of the Palmer house. The feast marked the ninetieth anniversary of the Illinois society and was attended by more than 1,300 guests of Scottish origin.

The ceremony, which dates back to the tribal days in Scotland when the clans gathered to give tithe of their goods to the poor, is usually held on St. Andrew day [Nov. 30]—the traditional day of Scotland's patron saint. St. Andrew societies in other American cities and in British cities similarly observed the day.

Aids Old People's Home.

All of the societies are charitable organizations, and the entire proceeds of the Illinois society's dinner will go toward maintenance of the Scottish Old People's home at Riverside. The society is one of the oldest philanthropic organizations in the state, having been founded in 1845.

Haggis, a meat pudding, was served as a delicacy during last night's dinner. It is made from sheep hearts, livers and kidneys, onions, barley and wheat, and spices. The mixture is boiled in the stomach of a lamb.

With all the tribal ceremonies of the Scottish hills, the "haggis" is carried into the banquet hall on the shoulders of two "braw" Scots, preceded by Highlanders in kilts, playing bagpipes. During the ceremony all the diners stand until the food is brought before the toastmaster, who represents the tribal chieftain.

Many Prominent Guests.

Attending the dinner were persons prominent in the city's business and professional ranks. John T. Cunningham, formerly of the Cunningham Ice Cream company, president of the society, was in charge of the feast.

Malcolm Shaw MacLean, University of Minnesota dean, was the guest speaker. His subject was "The Land We Left." The Rev. Paul A. Wolfe, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Evanston, spoke on "The Land We Live In." Thomas C. MacMillan, 87 years old, president of the society in 1906 and 1907, who has attended every banquet for the last 45 years, also spoke. He is a former state senator and for 25 years was clerk of the United States District court here.

Bernays Among the Guests.

Others who attended are the Rev. Allison A. McCracken, pastor of the Ingleside Methodist Episcopal church, who acted as toastmaster; Lewis Bernays, British consul general; Robert Black, Alexander G. Shennan, vice president of the International Tag company; Albert L. Tossell, secretary of the Peoples Gas company, and Dr. Gerson B. Levi.

Dr. MacLean said it was at the "feast of the haggis," that the rival clans, the MacLeans and the Campbells forgot their tribal differences.

SEEK GREATER RANGE FOR RADIO-TELEPHONE GREAT LAKES SERVICE

Lorain, O., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The Lorain County Radio corporation asked the federal communications commission today for radio frequencies of greater range to provide radio-telephone service with boats on any of the Great Lakes.

H. E. Hageman, manager, said the frequencies would give lake vessels the same service as ocean liners.

The corporation claimed tonnage on Great Lakes ships is greater than all American owned vessels on all other navigable waters.

Henry Ford's Wayside Inn Scene of $5,000 Gem Theft

Sudbury, Mass., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Henry Ford's Wayside inn, which was first made famous in Longfellow's poems, was the scene of a $5,000 jewel theft this afternoon. In addition to the jewelry, about $1,000 of other valuables and clothing was stolen. The stolen property was luggage which had been left in an automobile while the owners, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Mufly and their daughter were lunching at the inn.

Builds "Flivver" Plane Costing Less Than $100

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Edward Nirmaier, Cincinnati pilot, tinkered today with his own version of a "flivver plane," built, he said, at a cost of less than $100, except for the motor.

He has been flying it through initial tests and reported a maximum speed of 75 miles an hour.

CHICAGO WOMAN IS CHARGED WITH MARRIAGE FRAUD

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Meyer Gordon, who says he spent $1,400 trying to answer the question "What's home without a woman?" charged a Chicago woman with obtaining money under false pretenses today.

Gordon, pawnbroker, widower and father of four children, told the district attorney he met Mrs. Gertrude Friedman last April through a Chicago marriage broker. Gordon had been intrigued by the broker's question about "What's home," etc.

Love bloomed and Gordon proposed. Between the first and fifth proposals, he said, he gave Mrs. Friedman cash, jewelry and luggage costing $1,400. He said she asked for more time on Nov. 12.

"So I asked her then," he told the prosecutor.

"'What is this, a moving pitcher?'"

Her answer was:

"'I'm sorry, Meyer, but I can't marry you. I'm married already and my husband wouldn't like it.'"

Two policemen accompanied Gordon when he met Mrs. Friedman in Chicago yesterday. He said she didn't return the gifts, so he asked her arrest today. The Milwaukee district attorney issued the warant.

Six Filipino Bandits Slain; 30 Surrender to Troops

MANILA, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Six members of the bandit gang led by the notorious Jose Encallado were reported killed today in a clash with the Philippine constabulary near Sampaloc, Tayabas province. Thirty others of the band were said to have surrendered.

175 Guilty and 15 Freed in November.

A new record for convictions was claimed yesterday by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney at the close of the fall term of the Criminal court, which also marked his completion of three years in the prosecutor's office. Figures announced by First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley show that last month convictions were obtained in 92 per cent of the cases brought to trial.

There were 175 persons convicted during November and 15 found not guilty. Only 171 indictments were left pending for the winter term of court which starts tomorrow.

Juries returned fourteen convictions and eight acquittals. In bench trials 44 defendants were found guilty and seven were acquitted. Pleas of guilty were entered by 117.

Classification of Crimes.

The following table itemizes the disposition of the major cases concluded last month in the Criminal court as shown in the state's attorney's report:

CRIME—	CONVICTED.	FREED.
Murder	17	2
Robbery	59	2
Automobile thievery	15	1
Burglary	28	1
Assault	8	0

Two important murder cases were brought to trial last month. For starting an incendiary fire in the building at 558 West Taylor street, Sept. 29, which took the lives of ten persons, Joseph Vitale was sentenced by the court to 199 years in prison on a plea of guilty, and his uncle, Frank Vitale, and Joseph Di Chari, were convicted by a jury and each was sentenced to 99 years in prison.

Edward Ryder and John Whelan, found guilty by a jury, drew 14 year terms in the penitentiary for the wanton murder of William Barry, 69 years old, a watchman at the Hickory Hills Golf club. Three members of the gang still are sought.

Chief Justice Gives Report.

Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Criminal court also issued a report yesterday showing the work accomplished by himself and associate judges during the fall term of the court which began in September.

Of the indictments pending when court opened the 714 returned by grand juries during the three months the judges disposed of 543. All but two of the 171 pending for the winter term of court have been assigned to judges.

During the fall term there were 557 convictions and 84 acquittals, according to Judge Normoyle's report. Those convicted were disposed of as follows: 307 to the penitentiary, 4 women to the woman's reformatory at Dwight, 79 to the Bridewell, 25 to the county jail, 73 granted probation, 13 to state mental institutions, and 56 defendants were fined. There are now 83 persons in the county jail awaiting trial.

French City of Versailles Sends Gift to Versailles, Ky.

Versailles, Ky., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The city of Versailles, Ky., accepted a spontaneous gift today from Versailles, France. A silver vase containing earth from over the grave of an American soldier who died in France arrived in this Kentucky town, addressed to the mayor, to perpetuate "with the memory of so many centuries of French glory, the memory of the French town which was the cradle of the Independence of the United States."

SHORT SESSION OF CONGRESS IS ROOSEVELT'S AIM

Wants Time to Work on 1936 Campaign.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Plans for an abbreviated session of congress were mapped this afternoon by President Roosevelt in a conference with Charles West, undersecretary of the interior.

In the hope of getting congress out of the way about the time national conventions meet so that the administration can begin a sustained campaign to hold the Democratic majority in both houses of congress and concentrate on Mr. Roosevelt's reelection it was indicated that the New Deal will submit only a brief program to the second session of the 74th congress.

Three "Must" Bills.

On the must list, which will be presented in the annual message the President is required to deliver to congress, will be the appropriation, neutrality, and ship subsidy bills. It was indicated that the administration may seek again to drive through passage of the controversial pure food and drug bill, sponsored by No. 1 brain truster Rexford Guy Tugwell.

In the appropriation bill the administration will seek to convince voters that the New Deal will cost less. The ship subsidy bill, which was cast from the must session of the last session of congress, will seek to adjust financing of the American merchant marine.

Neutrality legislation was placed on the must list because the present act under which the President has proclaimed embargoes against Italy and Ethiopia and warned American traders that trade with either of the belligerents is carried on at their risk expires in February. Unless the act is extended the American neutrality policy will collapse.

Bonus Payment Discussed.

During the conference the President discussed with the former Ohio congressman, who was rewarded with the interior department post for his lobbying activities in behalf of the administration's holding company legislation, the question of the bonus. No indication was given of any change in the White House stand against veteran payments.

Also under discussion was legislation to provide funds for payment of crop control benefits in the event the Supreme court holds the AAA unconstitutional. No hint was given on administration plans.

During the day the President eagerly followed reaction to his speech at Atlanta yesterday in which he struck at his critics and promised to decrease the deficit. A flood of telegrams, chiefly from Democrats, praised the address. The President is eagerly awaiting replies from those he attacked and the reaction of the press of the country to judge his speech.

Denials of No Concern.

No concern was expressed at the little White House over the denials of leading bankers throughout the country that they were among the "leading bankers" who, the President said in his speech, advised him shortly after his inauguration that the public debt could safely be expanded to 55 or 70 billion dollars. There was no indication that the President intends to name those who gave the purported advice. The White House secretariat displayed no worry over the banker denials.

PERSIAN ENVOY WOULD PUNISH A POLICEMAN

Nice, Hull Regrets Not Enough.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—For calling him a "damn fool" and pushing him back into an automobile seat, as well as placing handcuffs on him, Ghaffar Djalal, Persian minister to the United States, demands the punishment of a policeman who arrested him at Elkton, Md. The envoy made this clear today, thus indicating that he was not satisfied with the apologies of Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, and of Cordell Hull, United States secretary of state.

[A. P. Wirephoto.]

Wife Insulted, He Says.

The minister declared that when his wife remonstrated, the arresting policemen called her a foreigner and told her to shut up. She is an English woman. The diplomat raises the point that the policeman should have addressed the chauffeur, William E. Collier, who was driving, and not the passenger who was in a rear seat. The chauffeur agrees with the envoy's story of rude treatment.

They both said that when the diplomat was arrested he asked for the use of a telephone to call Washington and his legation and was told, "Shut up, you damn fool."

Jacob Biddle, a constable of Elkton, still sticks to his story. He said the envoy's car was speeding. He declares he stopped it and in the dispute following he received a bruise on his face; that the minister grabbed at his tie and badge, that therefore he applied handcuffs. But before he could do that he had to call to his aid Constable Clayton Ellison. Constable Biddle denies he refused to allow the use of a telephone.

The Elkton mayor has sent a report to Washington and Secretary Hull has announced:

"I am exceedingly sorry that the incident occurred. Representatives of foreign nations are not only entitled to immunity from arrest but to courtesy from and the respect of officers of the individual states."

The Persian envoy was en route from Washington to New York when his auto was stopped at Elkton.

Miss Dewes Bows

Three young women were presented to society at two parties, a tea and a dinner-dance, yesterday on Chicago's near north side. They are the Misses Shirley and Loraine Logan, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan, and Miss Elisabeth Dewes, youngest daughter of Mrs. Edwin P. Dewes. Mr. and Mrs. Logan introduced their daughters at a tea from 4 until 7 o'clock in their residence at 2344 Lincoln Park, West, and Mrs. Dewes' daughter made her bow at a party at the Casino which began at 8 o'clock. Receiving with the Logans and their daughters yesterday afternoon were the debutantes' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Granger Logan.

MARGARET WELLS BECOMES BRIDE OF JAS. N. HYDE

Marriage Solemnized at St. Chrysostom's.

BY JUDITH CASS.

A wedding of interest to Chicago society took place at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at St. Chrysostom's church where Miss Margaret Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wells, became the bride of James Nevins Hyde, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cheney Hyde of New York. The church was filled with white chrysanthemums and greens and lighted by candles for the pretty ceremony which was performed by the Rev. Dudley Stark.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of cream satin and the wedding veil of her aunt, Mrs. May Wells Noyes. Some of the lace trimming on the gown came from the wedding gown of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Robert Warren of Barry avenue, who is 88 years old and who was present at yesterday's service. The bride carried gardenias and lilies of the valley, and the veil was fastened to her head with a band of orange blossoms.

The Bride's Attendants.

Miss Mary Frances Bestor of New York, the maid of honor, wore a velvet gown in an unusual shade of crimson, with a tiny matching velvet hat and carried token roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Elizabeth Hyde, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Alice Durgins of Bronxville, and Mrs. Charles Howe, cousins of the bride, and Miss Charlotte Mayer, wore similar gowns of gray-blue velvet with matching hats and carried Johanna Hill roses.

A small reception to which relatives and close friends were invited followed the church service in the Wells apartment at 1530 North State parkway. Among those present were the bride's paternal grandmother, Mrs. Thomas E. Wells of Winnetka; Wilson M. Wing of Washington, D. C., who served Mr. Hyde as best man; Whitman Knapp, Daniel B. McCook, Laurens Rhinelander, Nathaniel Rogers, and John L. Caskey, who came from the east to serve as ushers; Mrs. Knapp and several of the bride's relatives, including Mrs. Winifred D. Fleck and her daughter, Miss Norah Fleck of Ottawa; the Luther E. Robys and Edward and Isabel Roby of Peoria, and the William P. Lindseys of Hamilton, Ont.

Mr. Hyde, who is a grandson of the late Dr. James N. Hyde and a grandnephew of the late Bishop Charles Edward Cheney of Chicago, will take his bride to New York to make their home after a few days' honeymoon in Virginia.

Cooper-Huston Wedding.

At a ceremony yesterday afternoon in Buena Memorial Presbyterian church, with only the immediate families present, Miss Margaret Davidson Cooper became the bride of Ward Noyes Huston. Miss Cooper is the daughter of Mrs. Winfield Scott Cooper, 1514 North Shore avenue, and Mr. Huston's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ward T. Huston of Evanston.

Immediately after the wedding Mr. Huston and his bride left on a motor trip to Mexico. They will be at home at 151 Carl street after Jan. 1.

WHITE HOUSE'S KITCHENS PUT ON MODERN PLAN

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Now the secret's out—it was really the utilities that played a heavy hand in the remodeling of the White House kitchens.

The neghbors told the story. That section of Washington, fast developing with the erection of the new interior building, is being changed over from direct to alternating electric current.

To the Girl Scout little house, a block away, came the electric company, saying there was no choice, the change had to be made. To other places around the White House went the same edict, until at last the President became just another householder who had to remodel for progress.

MOVIES TINGED BY PROPAGANDA, PROFESSOR SAYS

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Dr. Edgar Dale of Ohio State university charged today propaganda was creeping into motion pictures.

"We may expect," Dr. Dale said in an address prepared for delivery before the national council of teachers of English, "to see more use of the news reels in political campaigns with consequent fakery."

Alleging that war propaganda found its way to the screen, Dr. Dale said: "In 1931-'32 there were 12 shots dealing with war as compared with one dealing with peace in two different news reels. In 1933 the proportion was seven war items to one peace item."

Dr. Dale discussed the teaching of motion picture appreciation and said the fight to make it widely accepted as a regular part of school instruction had been won.

He urged the development of realistic, documentary films dealing with everyday activities as an "antidote to the escape movies" which he said were a "narcotic" for those who go to movies "to dream but not to think."

TWINS FEATURE OF THIS FAMILY; WED THEM, TOO

Noblesville, Ind., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Moses C. Martz, 78, died this afternoon. He was a twin brother of Clayton Martz of Tipton. They were the oldest twins in this state. Their parents, Moses and Tabitha Martz, were twins. The grandparents of the Martz twins on the Martz side of the house married twin daughters of John and Bethiah McCormick, early settlers of Indianapolis.

No member in the Martz family except M. C. Martz has died under 80 years of age.

The family record shows there are eighty-five great-grandchildren and forty-five great-great-grandchildren. In the first generation there were two sets of twins and in the second generation there were six sets.

Better Educated High School Teachers Urged

Within the next few years teachers in high schools and secondary schools will be required to have masters' degrees in order to qualify for the teaching profession, Dr. E. J. Moulton, chairman of the mathematics department of Northwestern university, told members of the Central Association of Science and Mathematics Teachers yesterday. The association's convention is being held in the Palmer house.

Elizabeth Arden

ARDENA SKIN TONIC
ELIZABETH ARDEN
Ardena CLEANSING CREAM
ELIZABETH ARDEN

● Every woman knows cleanliness is essential to beauty. And every woman should know the best possible method of cleansing. Elizabeth Arden says you should use Ardena Cleansing Cream and Skin Tonic together. The cream liquefies on touching your skin. This makes your skin fairer and finer than you've ever seen it. And the Tonic is so aged and blended that it washes away every trace of cream without drying your complexion. This gives a cool, firm finish and stimulates clear, fresh color.

After cleansing, you should soothe with luxurious Velva Cream. (Or dry skins may need the richer Orange Skin Cream.) And your skin will acquire a soft, rich texture. In fifteen minutes you've helped yourself to radiant loveliness.

Ardena Cleansing Cream, $1 to $6 • Ardena Skin Tonic, 85c to $15 • Ardena Velva Cream, $1 to $6 • Orange Skin Cream, $1 to $8

SEES GULLIVER SAILING ANEW IN ROOSEVELT TALK

Spangler Gives Facts on Debt and Bank Panic.

"Gulliver has started his travels again and we'll all be hearing some more tall stories." This was the remark of Harrison E. Spangler, director of the Chicago headquarters of the Republican national committee, when asked to comment yesterday on President Roosevelt's speech at Atlanta on Friday.

Spangler said it wasn't necessary to say anything more to those familiar with the most extraordinary voyages of Gulliver as told in Jonathan Swift's satirical romance. But he did go further with his criticism of the Atlanta speech.

The 70 Billion Mortgage.

"President Roosevelt told us a good one at Atlanta," said Spangler, "when he quoted astronomer-bankers as saying it would be all right for him to go right ahead and pile up a national debt of 70 billion dollars.

"That would be a mortgage of only $2,000 on every one of our 35 million American families. Who could possibly complain about that?"

Director Spangler inquired if President Roosevelt intends to conduct his campaign "with fairy tales." "His tale about the 'mechanics of civilization' coming to a dead stop on March 3, 1933," he continued, "won't go down with the people. The bank panic of 1933 was caused by fear of Mr. Roosevelt and his schemes to debase the currency.

A Few Matters of History.

"What happened during the closing months of the Republican administration—between the election and the inauguration—is no longer a subject for fairy tales nor for dreams. It is all in the record and the history of that period has many things in it that will haunt Mr. Roosevelt during this campaign.

"Among them are statements that he gave to the press, letters that he wrote, and conferences that he held. One of the most interesting of all is the record of the meeting of Democratic congressional leaders he called in January, 1933.

"At that meeting Mr. Roosevelt, in effect, usurped the powers of the presidency. from that time forward congress followed his lead, and the Republican President in Washington found his hands tied.

"The fight to overcome the causes of the depression was well on its way to victory in the summer of 1932 and would have been completely victorious except for interference by Mr. Roosevelt.

America Lags Behind World.

"America at that time began its upward climb and all the principal nations of the world began their ascent out of the pit. The other nations continued to move upward. Only in America were the forces that were building recovery halted and thrown back.

"The first setback was the Roosevelt bank panic in March, 1933. Following that came the long list of Roosevelt experiments, the alphabetical schemes that kept the American people in jitters until the decision of the Supreme court in the NRA case brought the mad program to a halt.

"No, Mr. Roosevelt cannot conduct this campaign with stories from 'Gulliver's Travels.' Facts will rule in this fight. We are all down out of the clouds now except possibly those dream-banker friends of Mr. Roosevelt who dispersed into the stratosphere in quest of that 70 billion dollars."

In a different tone, Spangler said that the Atlanta speech showed Roosevelt in a defensive attitude, making "a defense that lacked confidence."

OUT OF STATE G. O. P. LEADERS TO GIVE TALKS

Two well known Republican congressmen, Ralph O. Brewster of Maine and Dewey Short of Missouri, will address six meetings in downstate Illinois during the next ten days.

According to the itineraries announced yesterday by William E. Hull, former congressman from Peoria, Representative Brewster will address evening meetings as follows: Monday, Carbondale; Tuesday, Macomb, and Wednesday, Carbondale. Congressman Short is to speak at Rockford Friday evening, at Libertyville on Dec. 9, and at Cairo on Dec. 11.

Hotel Auditor Is Robbed of $450 Pay Roll Satchel

Wendell P. Sherrick, auditor of the Whitehall Apartment hotel, 105 East Delaware place, withdrew $457 for pay roll purposes from the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank, 605 North Michigan avenue, yesterday noon. He placed the money in a satchel, walked north in Michigan avenue, and turned into Delaware place. A few yards from the door of the hotel two gunmen drove up and demanded the money. When Sherrick resisted, one of the men slugged him on the shoulder, seized the bag, and fled.

TALMADGE TO REPLY TO ROOSEVELT ON FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, who absented himself from a speech here yesterday by President Roosevelt, said today he had heard the address over the radio and would "answer it" on Dec. 6.

The governor spent the day on his farm in Telfair county.

Hugh Howell, chairman of the Talmadge-controled state Democratic executive committee, said the governor will speak over a national hookup on "Georgia's Answer to Roosevelt," Dec. 6, from 2 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., eastern standard time.

Talmadge announced yesterday he was on his farm "hunting for something to plan that there's no processing tax on."

G. O. P. LOOKING TO UNION OF ALL NEW DEAL FOES

Texan Urges Platform to Lure Democrats.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Adoption of a resolution by the Republican national committee suggesting the writing of a platform by the national convention that will appeal to "all classes irrespective of previous political affiliations" will be urged by R. B. Creager, veteran national committeeman from Texas, when the committee meets here Dec. 16.

This program, originally suggested by Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, is planned to enlist the support of dissatisfied Democrats and independents who are opposed to the New Deal. It already has the support of many western national committeemen, and others feel that if the Republican party makes its platform declarations broad and conservative enough, many of the independent voters will support the party in 1936.

Such party leaders as Senator Vandenberg and former Senator Reed of Pennsylvania early advanced the idea of a coalition ticket to win wavering Democrats, but now have abandoned the idea. They profess to see an increasing sentiment favorable to the Republican cause and are counted among those standing with Creager and Edge.

Question of Authority.

Creager, who has been in touch with his colleagues, finds them favorable to the plan, but not convinced that the national committee has the power to adopt a resolution that might seemingly pledge the national convention.

His proposed resolution follows:

"The Republican national committee well recognizes that its function and responsibility in the past has been generally confined to the details of preparation for the national convention.

"Because, however, of the unprecedented economic situation, with its existing challenge to American institutions, facing the nation, the committee has decided that a departure from tradition and precedent not only was justified but demanded.

"The committee is of the opinion that the forthcoming contest for the election of President and Vice President of the United States transcends the usual political divisions, and in an effort to preserve the recognized American system, calls for a campaign national in force and character.

Rap Roosevelt Repudiations.

"It is a well known fact that the Roosevelt administration has repudiated all the major planks of the Democratic platform and therefore cannot justly claim to represent the Democratic party. In its place it is endeavoring to circumvent the constitution and set up a socialistic state, honeycombed with waste and extravagance, with a dictatorship entirely foreign to American customs and policies.

"Recognizing this unusual and highly critical situation, the Republican national committee appeals for the coöperation of all types and classes of citizens, irrespective of previous political affiliation, who are opposed to the destructive policy now clearly defined in Washington.

"The committee invites the assistance and coöperation of the electorate in the hope that their frank advice will be of practical help in formulating an American creed and platform upon which all opponents of the so-called New Deal can unite."

PEEK REPORTED READY TO BREAK WITH PRESIDENT

Friends Say He Will Hit Canadian Treaty.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—George N. Peek has offered President Roosevelt his resignation as president of the Export-Import bank of Washington and as foreign trade adviser to the administration. He is expected within a few days to end all connections with the administration with which he has been identified since its inception.

Formal announcement of the move and the President's reluctant acceptance of the resignation is expected by friends of Mr. Peek to be made within the coming week from the temporary White House at Warm Springs, Ga. Mr. Peek himself refused today either to confirm or deny the fact of his resignation.

Making Report on Treaty.

Mr. Peek would only say he is drafting a report at the President's request on the recently negotiated Canadian trade agreement in which he would set forth his views as to its probable effects on industry and agriculture. Close friends of Mr. Peek, however, expected him to quit the administration even before completing that analysis.

Formerly administrator of the agricultural Adjustment administration and special adviser to the President on foreign trade, until the Supreme court decision invalidating the NRA, Mr. Peek has been at odds with the administration on one or the other of its agricultural or commercial policies since he first accepted the AAA appointment.

Although a warm friend and admirer of President Roosevelt and a potent factor in swinging the farm vote to the Democratic standard in 1932, Mr. Peek has consistently denounced the voluntary adjustment method of controlling farm production and the program of unconditional most favored nation treatment in foreign trade policies which the President has insisted held the only sure key to recovery in both fields.

For Reciprocal Buying.

In his opposition to the latter policy, Mr. Peek openly condemned the state department and held up as an alternative course the negotiation of exclusive pacts with foreign powers willing to trade on the basis of "buy from those who buy from us."

Unlike his criticism of the administration's agrarian policies, however, Mr. Peek's differences with the state department and Secretary Hull never reached the point where the President was forced to choose between a cabinet officer and a political ally he could ill afford to lose.

Secretary Hull never openly and directly replied to Mr. Peek's thrusts, content to see the gradual triumph of his program as expressed in the various trade agreements with Latin-American countries and more particularly in the successful negotiation of the Canadian pact.

Balks at Canadian Treaty.

That last development, according to close friends of Mr. Peek, was what finally clinched his decision to divorce himself completely from the administration.

On at least three other occasions Mr. Peek had gone to the White House to ask for his release, to devote his time entirely to his own business of manufacturing farm implements, but each time he came away with some new study or analysis of foreign trade or balance of payments to be undertaken at the President's urgent request.

This happened most recently upon the publication of the Canadian trade agreement about a fortnight ago. Even then, however, it was not thought that Mr. Peek's resignation was quite so imminent. It had been generally supposed that the survey of the treaty had to do chiefly with its actual effects on Canadian-American trade and that he would thus remain in the administration fold at least until after the 1936 campaign. It was a subject of considerable speculation in capital salons tonight what course Mr. Peek might pursue during the coming campaign.

HOOVER WARNS U. S. AGAINST SPREAD OF AGNOSTIC INFLUENCE

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A warning against the spread of agnostic influences was sounded here by former President Herbert Hoover.

"If ever a nation is to be founded on agnosticism," he said in an informal talk at a Y. M. C. A. gathering last night, "this civilization must fall, for it is founded principally on religious faith.

"The influences which are spreading into the world are, many of them, agnostic."

The former president avoided reference to political questions.

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."—Chicago Tribune.

A NATION OF STATES.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson took the subject of state rights for a recent talk at the Union League club. The judges of the country, both state and federal, should be historically buttressed to give sound advice on this question because it has come before them in so many forms on so many occasions. It may be difficult to make it a living question in the mind of the average American, although there is hardly another which goes more directly and more deeply down to the foundations of what most concerns the citizen.

It is readily appreciated that there is a perpetual conflict whenever a government, composed in one respect of a centralized authority and in another of various component units, tries to meet the test of time in these two forms. There is an innate tendency on the part of the one to suppress the others and on the part of the smaller units to disintegrate the comprehensive one. The trend on the one side is toward the centralization which smothers diversity and on the other side toward a disintegration which shatters the comprehensive unit. History is a long record of coalitions and their dissolution. The American people have tried to maintain their theory that as a people they can delegate some of their powers to a central government, delegate others to a state government, and reserve some for themselves. A safer theory for a large and highly diversified domain has never been devised.

Perpetuation of this idea has not been won easily. In the first place, the states were chary about forming a union. Then some of them were reluctant to remain in it. Now the weight is in the central government. The balance is thrown against the states. The effort is to keep them in full possession of their powers. Frequently the issues between the federal government and the state governments are intricate and require profound judicial inquiry and decision. There is a distinction between a citizen of the United States and a citizen of any one state. The courts have had to define what each right was and they have laid down general rules enabling the citizen of the nation to enjoy his privileges and at the same time permitting the state to exercise its own particular authority over its own people.

Sometimes a citizen of the United States finds that when he comes in contact with a state law he has lost something which he would think a privilege in his own or another state. This is regarded as consistent both with what is rightfully his as a citizen of the nation and with what is rightfully the authority of the state.

By the decisions of the courts and by the will of the people the United States still remains a national organization of 48 self-governing states. In this form it offers the best check ever designed against any general attempt to impose centralized personal government on the whole people. Modern instances have repeated their warning to all people who would listen that the worst political occurrence is an autocratic personal government. Each autocratic government must be personal because it works not by fundamental law but by governmental edict. Every American can feel confident that his country is in a position to withstand the pressure of political times toward autocracy so long as the 48 states retain their integrity and their sovereignty.

The New Deal has gone further than any other American government in administration of the intimate affairs of the citizens of the various states. Many of the states have been brought to rely upon Washington for the conduct of their affairs. They have submitted to centralization in return for subsidies. They have weakened their position, but the structure of the dual government is not yet seriously impaired and it can't be so long as the constitution remains as it is and so long as the preponderance of judicial opinion sustains the rights which the people have reserved in their state governments.

The American doctrin simply and essentially is that the power remains in the people. "We, the people of Illinois, represented in general assembly," enact the laws of the state. The United States itself is a creation of the people of the various states. Its powers are enumerated and delegated, and so long as it is understood that the people of the United States are the government of the United States autocratic government can never maintain a foothold in this country.

FAMILY MAKING GOOD!

The Chreissler boys are doing right well for themselves. Walter, who is in the automobile business at Detroit, has been selling so many cars that he has been able to pay off all the money the bankers let him take the time he bought Mr. Dodge's property. Fritz Sr., who is the most popular of the journeyman fiddlers, is having an exceptionally good season on the road. And Fritz Jr., who gives pigskin lessons at Princeton, taught his pupils so well this term that they have licked all comers down east.

HORACE TELLS THE WORLD.

Various preparations are being made for an anniversary celebration which goes back 2,000 years to find its subject. The anniversary is of the birth of Quintus Horatius Flaccus, Horace to the modern world into which he has survived, as he said he would.

The scholars' interest in the poet is understandable. He is an instrument in their hands, once with also the birch, for the discipline of the young mind, although an instrument now much less used than in the days when the liberal arts, illuminating a way of life, were more the final ends of education. There is also a popular interest which itself is probably within the understanding. A birthday party going back 2,000 years, with the surviving words of the child in evidence to prove veritability, is such a survival as would stir an interest in any mind. Then perhaps there is something deeper, even if more illusory, in the spell, if it be a spell, which the Augustan poet has thrown over much of mankind.

The stern and hard faced Roman cavalry soldier who was his tutor, Orbilius Pupillus, taught the youngster, brought to him by a freedman father, many things in which discipline of the mind and spirit entered. This attribute, joined to the joyous, graceful lyricism of a poet of both the world of nature and the world of man, produced a durable human being whose spirit and whose works seemed always to say that life was dependable in its benefactions if one had the perseverance and the insight to treat its secrets in the wise way. Thus he conquered the ephemerality of things, and although conceding that life slipped through the fingers, that the rose faded, that fire died down to ashes, yet affirmed that good was good while it lasted, and although the day would flee another would appear.

The poet's day had been tempestuous and uncertain. Rome was changing, the Cæsars had made their appearance, the barbarian was strong and never far away, and yet the man who wrote of ambitions and wine skins, of wars and the newly turned earth, of the frost leaving the ground, the sailor tossed by winds, the lover singing to his lady, the soldier home from the wars, was still a prophet of the triumph of the moderate joys of life.

Possibly we think of him now back over the centuries so filled with human terrors as the indomitable cricket on the harth who made the minor key of human life survive all the trumpet blasts and all the sound of rushing feet and clashing forces. The myrtle chaplet on the brow, the snow chilled Falernum, the tender goat's flesh in the pot, a group of friends, genial discourse around a genial fire, could inspire the philosopher to seize the day, even if upon the morrow the company sailed upon the unknown seas. The Epicurean modified the Stoic, the Stoic moderated the Epicurean, and a disciplined mind slipped serenely between voluptuousness and frigidity to round out a life and leave it forever etched in poetry. So the world remembers his birthday and observes what it may learn.

THE NEW DEAL HOT POTATO.

December is the month when the heat begins to go on the potato. The control act then becomes effective. The frost being off the pumpkin and in the ground, the quotas for the time being are academic. Folk may read them and weep for the morrow. The hot potato, or Al Capone special, will come later with the new potatoes. Illinois, for instance, having an average crop of 4,500,000 bushels, has been allotted 600,000. These may be called small potatoes for so large a state.

Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota have their crops cut about in half. These are great potato states. Maybe bananas will grow in northern Wisconsin, indigo in Michigan, and sugar cane in Minnesota. The farmers should diversify their crops. The consumers can eat cake. The potato will become a collector's item unless the Al Capones can handle the situation.

Next year along about Thanksgiving time the head of the family in his office will have a 1921 worried look, and he will be busy on the telephone. He will be running through a list of telephone numbers. The commodity he seeks will be known as the merchandise. It will be just off the boat or will have come down from Detroit by truck. Hi-jackers may get the merchandise. If it comes through and if the householder succeeds in placing his order for a dozen he'll be able to go home in a state of mind with a glint in his eye. He's got the potatoes.

We see this successful citizen coming safely to his house. No federal man has spotted him. His wife looks at him anxiously. See his pride as he takes out of his pocket what appears to be an orange and removes first the pink paper and then the skilfully contrived covering of orange peel, disclosing—a potato. Twelve in all. At the dinner party the wife will endeavor to dissemble her triumph, but the guests will understand. Meat and potatoes. The party's a success from the start.

"LOVE LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD."

[Illinois State Register.]

To the average run of the citizenry, to whom the film colony at Hollywood betokens a realm of romance and colorful human interest, the element of make-believe is brought home with special vividness as they view the kaleidoscopic parade of estrangements and divorces from day to day.

The failure of the Clark Gables' romance, just now in the limelight on the score of "temperament" is typical of the trend in screenland marriages. But the term is too general to satisfy the avid popular taste for the details of Hollywood's divorce records.

Here are a few of the complaints as recently compiled by an enterprising journalist at the film capital:

Jean Harlow's lament: "Hal likes to read in bed. It keeps me from needed rest." Dorothy Lee: "Marshall liked sailing and I liked tennis." Mrs. Arthur Lowe: "My husband shook his golf sticks at my canary." June Knight: "He took his boy friend on our honeymoon." Elissa Landi: "He didn't like California."

Verna Hillie: "His folks didn't like me." Dr. Franklin Thorpe—of Mary Astor: "She earned more than I did." Gertrude Messinger: "He was a tumbler and he paid more attention to that than he did to me." Helen Morgan: "He squirted sparkling Burgundy all over the walls of our apartment." Adrienne Ames: "He prefers the carefree career of a bachelor." Joan Blondell: "He preferred a book and a highball to talking to me." Patricia Perin, dancer: "He said I had the mentality of a 10 year old child."

And so they were all divorced—and in many cases new nuptial knots were tied within 24 hours. Write your own commentary!

WHY AMANA AND THE REST HAVE FAILED

BY WILLIAM HARMON NORTON, LL.D.

Amana, colony of pious German Socialists, with its 28,000 acres of richest Iowa lands and its famous mills, was long the pride of all believers in community socialism. After the rest of the 150 American socialistic communities were either dead or dying, Historian Hinds could write of Amana in 1907: "If communism can be applied with such beneficent results in the case of seven villages, why not over an entire county? Why not over a state? Why not over a nation?" Yet in 1932 Amana, socialism's model for county, state, and nation, saved itself from dissolution only by adopting capitalism with its horrendous profit system, wage slavery, and private ownership.

Recently I spent a little time visiting with the kindly people of Amana and they told me frankly why they had abandoned the socialistic life. Said one of the elders: "You know that a socialistic community like Amana has to have a strong leadership; really, I may say, an autocratic leadership. Well, once we had that kind of leadership, and when we lost it things began to go wrong." Lack of competent leadership was a common cause of the failures of the rest of the American communities. Any early successes which they may have had were largely due to the powerful personalities of their founders and the unquestioning obedience the founders demanded and received. And when such leadership failed them they collapsed. An autocratic controler seems indispensable to a controled economy. The coöperative community and the coöperative commonwealth need an unbroken succession of competent dictators.

Another of the elders of Amana gave me a different reason for its failure. "It was because we lost the spirit of socialism," said he. "You can't have socialism without its spirit, the spirit of sharing." Even a little group of idealists finds it hard to maintain the spirit of sharing—from each according to his ability, to each according to his needs. There is the stubborn fact of inequality in the value of individual services. And also the irrepressible sense of a social justice which gives to every man according to his work. Men soon lose the spirit of sharing when that sharing is compulsory and takes from them what they feel is justly their own because amply earned.

The members of these small communities found themselves far from equal in their desires and ambitions. There were some who were not content with the common food and shelter, who coveted education, books, travel, well furnished homes of their own, full scope for all their powers, their own careers—the prizes which capitalism offers the successful. When socialism denied to any what could not be shared with all, the ambitious found the yoke of coerced sharing hard.

At Amana I found another factor in socialism's downfall. The "we" and "ours" of the community had unduly repressed the "we" and "ours" of the family, and in the conflict familism finally had proved the stronger. Housewives have joyfully given up the community kitchens, and they now are mighty pleased to show their friends their new family kitchens with such unshared gadgets as a porcelain sink, aluminum pans, and even a new gas stove with its individual tank supply. An exuberantly eager familism is "decorating" the plain old houses, now privately owned, with fancy porches.

The older people, alas, as they sadly told me, find individualism's new responsibilities heavy on their unaccustomed shoulders—taxes to pay, home gardens to plant, meals to get, family supplies to buy, budgets to balance, and every day all sorts of decisions to make. Gone is the old planned economy when decisions were made for them and it was not theirs even "to reason why."

A lethal factor in Amana's socialism was parasitism. The socialistic society parasitizes itself by making dependents of its members. In organic nature an accommodation is sometimes reached. The parasite, supported by its host, thrives mightily. The tapeworm attains without effort economic well being, security, shelter, a conditioned temperature, and predigested food—at the price of its own degeneracy. And the host may grow tolerant of the parasite. But a parasitized society inevitably perishes, for the parasites are themselves members of the body social on which they feed. As soon as the preying members become too numerous or too voracious for the workers to support the society dies of inanition. It was chiefly of parasitism that Amana sickened unto death. In the words of sympathetic Historian Shambaugh, "Shirking of the common burdens of the community became more frequent as the number of drones increased, and 200 laborers from outside were employed to do their work. A rapidly increasing deficit approached half a million dollars." Amana then resorted to capitalism's tested remedies of the profit incentive, private ownership, and wages proportioned to work done. A capitalistic corporation was formed and a business manager brought in. Laborers from outside were dismissed. Shops were sold to the highest bidder, orchards and some farms were rented. Under the new incentives all business enterprises have leaped forward, the new corporation made a profit, and even at the depths of the depression. The tempo of life was quickened. "Women who formerly dropped out of the kitchen and garden routine on the slightest pretext," writes Mrs. Shambaugh, "learned for the first time what it meant to prepare three meals a day for a family. Deduction in wages for time out resulted in a marked improvement in the general health of men who had formed the habit of being too sick to report for work in the field or factory."

Because of its strong religious bond Amana was little affected by dissension—the cause most commonly assigned for the failure of socialist communities. The famous Icarian community at Nauvoo, Ill., for example, split into warring factions, while "pandemonium and chaos reigned."

Obviously dissent is as fatal to community socialism as is the pip to chicks. The collectivist order is like a brittle solid such as glass. Strain is resolved by fracture, dissent by schism. Freedom of speech and action must therefore be put down by force, as in soviet Russia. Unfortunately the communities had no force at their disposal under the American constitution and readily broke to pieces. The individualistic democratic order, with liberty as its framework, tolerates dissent. It makes use of variant opinions, competing interests, and clashing wills.

Socialism today calls the socialistic communities "Utopian," "a total failure," and this because "they attempted to isolate themselves from an indivisible society. They were forced into constant dealings with the outside world" [Hillquit]. But Amana and the rest found the outside world friendly or at worst indifferent. There were no persecutions such as the Mormons suffered—and survived! The communities failed because of the inherent weakness of the socialist setup, not because of the hostility of the environment. They were weighed in nature's balance and found wanting. They died because they were unfit to survive.

Will not the lethal factors of socialism be as fatal in the coöperative commonwealth as they proved in the coöperative community? The socialized state will be parasitized by an army of hungry burocrats, as well as by that large host taught to claim "an equal birthright in the nation's wealth." Dissension will be still more virulent. It can be put down, as in sovietdom, by resistless and implacable force, but only at the cost of personal liberty. It is still an unsolved problem in genetics whether the needed succession of able autocratic leaders for the new business-state can be obtained by crossing the business man and the politician. And if socialism failed among the gentle, religious folk of Amana for lack of the spirit of sharing, it seems unlikely to succeed among the people of America at large until much preparatory work is done in regenerating human nature.

MENTAL STABILITY—A POINT OF VIEW.

In describing an individual who exhibits unusual mental poise we are wont to say that he has nerves of steel, or that he hasn't a nerve in his body. These expressions intend to convey that there is a sense of complete control over the nervous reactions of the body. In periods of emergency or stress many opportunities are offered of observing the play of emotions. Some persons will react in a perfectly cool, orderly manner, carrying out their duties with efficiency. Others will be nervous, jumpy, or apprehensive; they may chatter away like magpies and as a result accomplish little. The first group we characterize as possessing stability, character, judgment, and control; the second, as unstable, excitable, and on occasions undependable or unreliable when it comes to doing the right thing at the right time.

Perhaps behind the scenes, even with the stable persons, there is fully as great an emotional response but with this difference, that in one it is controled and in the other it is not. I had a casual acquaintance with one of America's greatest orators. Contacts with him extended through my high school and college years. Regardless of the type of audience, the time, or the place, I was never able to detect the slightest trace of embarrassment. Much to my surprise I learned later that he never rose to speak without an overwhelming sense of timidity for which he was able to compensate only by saying to himself, "I am advocating the right, I am pleading only for truth, and I must have courage to carry through."

As a people we are emotional. We do some thinking, to be sure, but relatively little when compared with our emotional response. We are far more inclined to feel than to think. A clever lawyer makes an emotional appeal to a jury and a dangerous criminal is freed. Under the sway of sentiment sinister motives are brushed aside and criminal acts excused. "Restore this man to the bosom of his sorrowing family" is a plea that has freed many a culprit.

Most of us, at one time or another, seek emotional stimulation. Were this not an inherent characteristic the theater, the movies, and most of our novelists would cease to function. Not long ago on leaving the theater I noticed an attractive, intelligent appearing woman. Tears were streaming down her face and I overheard her remark to her companion, "What a lovely, lovely play. How I did enjoy it."

What a drab world we would live in were we not possessed of sensibilities and capable of indulging in sentimentalities at times. For the sake of our nerves we must recall that we cannot live life always and forever in a world of dreams, but that we must consistently face the facts of existence. To do this we must cultivate emotional control. We must learn to evaluate the "play"—to distinguish it from reality; the puppets from real men and women.

Students of nervous diseases tell us that there is an ever rising tide of mental instability. Perhaps this is true and it may account for the fact that many persons are willing to drift with the current of events rather than make the exertion necessary to resist a steady undermining of the personal qualities of the individual. I wonder if mental character is not neglected in our childhood training, the core of which should be the teaching of self-control and self-reliance.

Every one has to live in a world of people, for only the coward—or in rare instances the genius—will seclude himself and live the life of a recluse. We must not accept any social order that has for its objective mental obliteration. For the mental health of a great nation we must cultivate those qualities that will enable us to face unpleasant situations, grief, and disappointments, not with indifference but with courage and understanding.

HEART VALVE LEAKAGE.

D. E. E. writes: Since early childhood I have had heart valve leakage. The condition resulted from infected tonsils followed by rheumatism. After spending three years in bed I gradually became able to be about and learned the routine I would have to follow to live with my heart. That was 20 years ago. For 10 years of this time I supported myself doing clerical work. About 3 years ago it became necessary for me to rest again. Now, even after a prolonged period of quiet, my heart does not seem to recover sufficiently for me to resume former activities. I went to one of our largest clinic centers and was told that in order to retain the heart power I now have I must remain inactive, as the heart muscle is losing its tone.

My particular problem now is to overcome the severe pain which strikes me in the pit of the stomach, making it very inconvenient, as I have to stop all movement for the time being. The doctor states that it is not angina, although it is from the heart. Absolute quiet, with a drink of hot water or hot coffee, relieves the pain. The symptom is brought on by exertion, fright, excitement, or even by food disagreeing with me. But what I do not understand is that the thing which may bring on the pain at one time may at others not cause it. Sometimes I can walk 10 to 15 blocks on level sidewalks and at other times walking a block or two will bring on pain.

Please tell me truthfully what I can do to get the most use out of my damaged machinery. I am 38 years old.

REPLY.

Heart pain usually means that the muscle of the heart itself is not receiving sufficient nourishment [blood]. You can save the heart—that is, bring about actual rebuilding of heart muscle—by rest. This means complete rest in bed. The heart is a powerful organ and has great reserve power, and under prolonged rest you may regain considerable heart efficiency. When you exercise the heart is working harder than when you are lying down. Again, under fright or excitement, the heart may beat more rapidly and hence exhaust itself if rapid pulsations continue for a long time. Use a nourishing diet and resign yourself to the fact that rest under the direction of a competent physician is your salvation.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY HENRY BUCKLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID.—Spain's commercial air service, an official monopoly, is up against travelers with political pull who manage to dodge paying full fare. A recent check showed that of 6,800 passengers, 3,800 paid full rates, 1,190 had rebates, and 784 paid nothing.

This problem becomes more important now that Spain is taking more interest in aviation. The new Madrid-Barcelona service, for which the schedule is 1 hour 55 minutes, and which the pilots fly in 1 hour 40 minutes over 300 miles of mountainous country across which the "de luxe" express toils in 13 hours, has impressed travelers. The fourteen seats on the daily planes in each direction are invariably sold out.

New American Douglas planes have revolutionized Spanish aviation. By nosing up to 10,000 or 12,000 feet they miss the bumps and give not only speed but comfort, which is important in Spain, this not being a country of business men with urgent appointments to keep.

Spain's five air routes are long compared with most European lines: From Madrid to Las Palmas [Canary Islands] is 1,000 miles; Madrid-Paris, 600 miles; Madrid-Balearic Islands, 350 miles, and Madrid-Barcelona, 300 miles. "Bee lines" make unusual comparisons with ordinary routes in Spain. From Madrid to Valencia by air is 180 miles, but by road 220 and by rail 300 miles. The trip by express train to Valencia takes 9½ hours compared with 1 hour and 50 minutes by plane.

Each plane gets a subvention for every mile flown. Thus the air liner which flies to Paris and back draws $2,000 from the state for the trip.

Figures show that about five times as much air mail enters as leaves Spain, which is to say that Spaniards have for the most part not the custom of answering by air mail the letters they receive by that means of transport.

The commercial air company has flown 400,000 miles without a single accident causing loss of life or limb; no mean feat considering that one route involves flying along the edge of the Sahara for several hundred miles, while the trip from Valencia to Palma [Mallorca Island] means 150 miles across the open sea and is flown by land planes. Seaplanes have been purchased, however, for the Barcelona-Palma route, which is to be inaugurated soon. New international lines are to be added to next year. The Lufthansa is to inaugurate a Madrid-Berlin line, the Ala Littoria, a line with Rome by way of Marseilles and Genoa, and the Spanish company a route to the neighboring capital of Lisbon.

RECORDING MORTGAGE.

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I notice in your column that mortgage renewals must be recorded. Is this compulsory and when did this law go into effect? Will mortgages renewed in 1934 come under this requirement? What would happen if I did not record it?

K. M. P.

We have received several requests for the reasoning back of our answer published Nov. 12 to the effect that it is wise to record all current mortgage extensions.

The general purpose of the 1935 statute [Ill. Bar Stats. Chap. 83, Sec. 11] [1] appears to be to cut off old mortgages as clouds on real estate titles. The general ten year statute does not accomplish this, since by judicial construction the limitation period does not run as long as interest payments are kept up and it is difficult in examining titles to exclude the possibility that a mortgage, no matter how ancient, may be still a valid lien.

The purpose is stated with reasonable clearness in the first paragraph of the new statute as follows: "On and after July 1, 1940, when more than 20 years has elapsed . . . after the indebtedness . . . is due . . . as shown by . . . trust deed . . . or according to any extension . . . on record, filed . . . by the owners . . . of the indebtedness . . . and . . . of the real estate . . . the . . . trust deed shall cease by limitation."

The difficulty appears in the second paragraph, which is presumably aimed to extend the principal of the first paragraph into the future. The wording, with our numbered comments, is as follows: "Any such [1] extension agreement hereafter recorded [2] shall show the time . . . and shall continue the lien for . . . ten years [3] from . . . the time . . . due as shown by such extension agreement. Such extension agreements shall be . . . recorded [4] in the same manner as . . . trust deeds. . . ."

1. The antecedent of "such" is not clear.
2. We draw from this the somewhat doubtful inference that paragraph one applies only to instruments not "hereafter" recorded, i. e., to instruments "heretofore" recorded.
3. Surely this does not mean that if the extension is not recorded the lien will be barred in less than the ten year period of the general statute of limitations. It would follow that this wording adds nothing to existing law unless it is interpreted as implying that the lien cannot be continued beyond the ten years by interest payments as heretofore. If this implication is the primary purpose of this paragraph, it is unfortunate that it is not directly stated.
4. If "such" means "all," this wording might seem to supply an off-hand answer to our main question. The difficulty is that the statute does not state what happens if they are not recorded.

To sum up, we are of the opinion that the legislature intended to provide that a title examiner need look back no farther than 20 years as to the old liens and extensions covered by the first paragraph and no further than ten years on instruments "hereafter recorded"; that since the wording is involved and ambiguous, all parties should assume that it may be construed against them; that it is probably safe for an attorney or broker [despite the closing sentence] to skip recording a first five year renewal, relying on recording the second during the ten years from the recorded due date, and that the safe rule of thumb for laymen is to record all current extensions.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONTEST OF WILL.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My parents died, leaving a will in which every one was remembered except me. In this will they stated I got my share when I was married twenty-three years ago when they gave me a lot as a wedding gift. 1. Can I protest this will, or [2] can they hold the wedding gift against me?

H. H.

1. Not unless you can prove undue influence or lack of testamentary capacity.
2. Yes. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SENATOR HOAR'S FORESIGHT.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—The spectacle at Washington of officials of Illinois and its governmental subdivisions soliciting abjectly funds which belonged to the state in the first place and which, therefore, never should have gone to our imperial city, brings to mind the warning by Senator George F. Hoar of Massachusetts in 1898 when an income tax amendment to the constitution was the subject of popular call. Three years before the Supreme court of the United States had held the income tax act of 1894 unconstitutional for conflict with the clause commanding that direct taxes be apportioned among the states according to population—that Illinois, for example, should never be required to pay to the national government $34 per head of population while the people of Alabama were paying only $3 each. In consequence of that decision, socialists, sociologists, and many half-baked lawyers were running high temperatures.

Senator Hoar addressed himself to the lawyers who were clamoring for an amendment authorizing congress to levy income taxes. He asked the American "to read the contemporaneous history and to ask himself if he believed that any single state would have adopted the national constitution if it had been believed that the central power would ever have been permitted to invade this domain for the purposes of taxation."

What evil genius had possessed the legislatures when they ratified the amendment?

Hoar was of those statesmen who adorned the senate when it was a body representing sovereign states before this wise purpose of the constitution was frustrated by the seventeenth amendment for the election of senators by popular vote. He foresaw the position of degeneration to which lack of education and leadership had brought Illinois and the other states in 1935:

"May we not also profitably reflect that it is likely to be found highly oppressive and inexpedient that the two authorities [nation and state] shall be found taxing the same thing at the same time?"

No, they could not see it. So the pumps of the central city are exhausting the wells of revenue of the states. And when the states seek some of their own money it is permitted to them only upon terms of further self-abasement and surrender of proper sovereignty.

THOMAS JAMES NORTON.

IMPORTED STEEL.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—How come such a big stink about the fact that a German firm has underbid all our own steel barons? After all, they asked for open unrestricted competition. They said the NRA cramped their style; so because of the frets of big business the NRA was found to be unconstitutional. They insisted that open competition was the very lifeblood of industry. They got just what they asked for. But still they yelp.

Here is the other side. If the NRA were still in force the government would have had to let the contracts to American firms for the simple reason that all government purchases needed the NRA stamp. And where was this NRA located but right here in the United States?

JOHN KAKAR JR.

INGRATITUDE.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—In your issue of Nov. 22 Mr. John J. Mangan asks this question:

". . . or will our President prove to be just another politician by remaining silent and smilingly watch Gov. Horner, the man who sacrificed his political future in his behalf, be sacrificed in order to better his own chances?" . . .

Alfred E. Smith dug Mr. Roosevelt out of the political ash can and made him governor of New York. In return for that kindly act Mr. Roosevelt did his friend out of the Democratic nomination for the Presidency. From such was the New Deal born. So wadda you think?

H. E. PHELPS.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1936.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Last week I received a letter from a Democratic ward committeeman and I went to see him the same as hundreds of others. He told us that he had O. K.'d our applications for WPA work and that we could expect a call within a few days.

T. F.

A GIRL ASKS ADVICE.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—I have been looking for a position for months in Chicago, and, I should say, from casual observation and inquiry, that about 70 per cent to 90 per cent of the office and professional stafs are composed of married women and divorcées.

Being more or less of a stranger, may I raise my voice to ask if there is a ban on single girls working in this town? I've never heard Chicago referred to as the married women's Eden, and confess that I am just a little puzzled to run into so many wedding rings and divorcées in jobs, and so much antagonism, opposition, and indifference to a single girl.

To make matters more confusing, I have a suitor who points out that if I had a job we could get married. I'd rather have a job minus a husband, but I'm beginning to wonder if I won't have a better chance at landing a job if I get married and then get a divorce to secure it. Can any one give me any practical advice on the subject?

INQUISITIVE.

RUBBER STAMPS.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Please find some other expression than "rubber stamp" for a nitwit, or a person of low intelligence. After being over forty years in Chicago in the business of manufacturing rubber stamps I am rather fed up with using our industry in this way.

Possibly you are not aware that a rubber stamp is the most economical in first cost, also in wearing qualities, and is quicker to use than any other duplicating device. It is therefore an economical factor in the conduct of every known business. This is so well recognized by business men that there are about 800 rubber stamp manufacturers in the United States who employ close to 10,000 people and do a business of approximately $12,000,000 a year.

Why don't you use the word "hectograph," which is also a duplicating device made of a jellylike substance, and would probably better define the congress mentioned in your editorial?

CHARLES L. SAFFORD.

ENFORCED DONATIONS.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—I would like to state my objection to the situation that exists in the Chicago park district in regard to donations to the Community Fund. Donations should be given willingly and not forced upon the employés. I was asked to give $11.61. I could not afford this amount, but was willing to give $4. I was told by my superior to give all or nothing, and if I didn't give the amount set by the commissioners of the Chicago park district I would most likely be transferred from one part of the city to the most extreme distance from my home. Now I am not in politics and would not like to get sent away. Charity did not help us when we went from July 1, 1931, to March 1, 1933, with only six weeks' pay. We worked hard for this consolidation, but we were better off under the old west park board.

FORMER WEST PARK POLICEMAN.

PROPAGANDA.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Haile Selassie has proven himself such an able propagandist, with the aid of England, and the American people, including myself, are so eager to be hoodwinked that it is no wonder we feel sorry for "these poor, oppressed Ethiopians," and highly praise England's "humanitarian spirit."

On Nov. 22 you state in a report from Addis Ababa that "two Italian tanks were captured and their 12 Italian occupants immediately beheaded by the Ethiopians." Are these Ethiopians really the civilized people we have been led to think? Apparently so, for in the next paragraph you quote Haile Selassie as saying, "I believe that with the help of God our righteous cause will prevail."

A READER.

AT THE OLD STAND.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Two years ago I resided at one of the near north side hotels and was greatly annoyed by street beggars, both men and women. After an absence of a year I have returned to the same hotel and am much surprised to find one of the same men still plying his trade. One afternoon recently he accosted me three times—twice on Michigan avenue and once on Pearson street.

2 ITALIAN WORKS WELL PRESENTED BY CITY OPERA

Edith Mason Is Warmly Welcomed Back.

"LA TRAVIATA."

[Presented by the Chicago City Opera company in the Civic Opera house, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 30, 1935.]

THE CAST.

Violetta Valery	Edith Mason
Flora Bervoix	Janet Fairbank
Alfredo Germont	Frank Forest
Giorgio Germont	Jean Fardulli
Gaston	Lodovico Oliviero
Baron Douphal	Wilfred Engelman
Marquis d'Obigny	Teodor Lovich
Dr. Grenvil	Norman Cordon
Annina	Maud-Key Shelton

Conductor, Henry Weber.

"MADAME BUTTERFLY."

[Presented by the Chicago City Opera company in the Civic Opera house, Saturday evening, Nov. 30, 1935].

Cio-Cio-San [Madame Butterfly]	Hilda Burke
Suzuki	Ada Paggi
Lieut. Pinkerton	Joseph Bentonelli
Kate	Janet Fairbank
Sharpless	Frederic Jencks
Prince Yamadori	Wilfred Engelman
The Bonze	Norman Cordon
Goro	Lodovico Oliviero

Conductor, Otto Vandsburger.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Two Italian works of different vintages crowded the Civic Opera house yesterday as the Chicago City Opera company concluded the second last week of its season. Verdi's "La Traviata" in the afternoon offered Edith Mason's followers a long delayed opportunity to see and hear the famous diva again; after dinner Puccini's "Butterfly" was sung by a cast whose soprano and tenor principals, Hilda Burke and Joseph Bentonelli, were the same as in last year's performance.

Edith Mason has recovered from the illness which kept her off the opera stage through so much of the season. Her zestful enactment of the rôle of Violetta brought plenty of applause from a house that was eager to welcome her back after her long absence. Mason is one of those few singers whom Chicago likes to think that it owns. There is always great friendliness in the contacts as well as sincere admiration.

Frank Forest as Young Dandy.

Frank Forest [who never sings here except on a Saturday, it seems] played opposite her in the character of the young dandy who finally throws the flowers. He does nicely with Verdi's dainty tunes. Forest's performances here in "Mefistofele," "Gale," and "Traviata" should do much to break down that rather silly distinction between dramatic and lyric tenor. He is both kinds in one.

Our Greek newcomer, Jean Fardulli, counts restraint among his virtues. He took the cue perfectly from the conductor and principals and used his big voice quietly and skilfully to fit the mellow coloring of the pattern his colleagues were weaving. Although I had never heard him before [his entrance in "Aida" comes very late] the general impression has been that his voice is very robust. Fardulli was loudly applauded at the end of "Di Provenza."

Glowing Stage Pictures.

The performance went smoothly. Verdi's melodic fertility more than makes up for the brilliance and bigness that "Traviata" lacks. The opera gives the technical director more opportunity for special effects than the musicians. The glowing stage pictures were a credit to Verdi and Beatty both.

Puccini's tragedy of east and west enlisted Hilda Burke of the Metropolitan as Madame Butterfly and Joseph Bentonelli as Pinkerton. The always reliable Ada Paggi played Suzuki.

Director's Choice Vindicated.

It was good to see Frederic Jencks in an important part. He usually has to get all dressed up as a herald or something equally brilliant to sing sixteen bars. His Sharpless last night justified the casting director's choice.

Otto Vandsburger handled the powerful and emotional music successfully. It is hard to imagine where the company got any rehearsal time for "Butterfly" with all the preparations that are being made for "La Fiamma" tomorrow."

Found Unconscious

LOUISE LUCKEY.

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 30.—[U.P.]—Louise Luckey, who created a sensation at the University of Missouri a year ago when she described morals among undergraduates as "deplorable," and her escort were found today in the rear seat of a parked automobile. They were suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Officers discovered the car parked in an exclusive residential district. Both were unconscious. Miss Luckey was taken to Boone county hospital. Her escort, James Scammon, Rockport, Mo., was given emergency treatment by a fire department pulmotor squad and taken to the hospital. Physicians said both would recover.

Miss Luckey, now teaching school at Alton, Mo., told delegates at the southwest Baptist student conference at Memphis, Tenn., last October that student morals at the University of Missouri were at low ebb and that "a member of the faculty came to class too intoxicated to stand." Her talk was entitled "Spiritual Needs in the Social Life of Students."

The Missouri student body was cleared of the charges after an investigation.

INDIAN PRINCESS HITS TRAIL FOR HOME; SAYS OPERA HURT FEELINGS

Mrs. Daisy Maud Underwood, who on Friday sued the Chicago City Opera company and Manager Paul Longone for $10,000, left Chicago for Kansas City last night. Mrs. Underwood, who is billed as the Indian Princess Pakanli, said her feelings on departing were "those of deep humiliation and wrong."

She charged in the suit that Mr. Longone promised her opera rôles, publicized her, and then demanded that she put up $5,500 in order to have the opportunity to sing. She said she would go back to voice teaching and singing in a church in Kansas City, "that is, if I can get pupils and job back." The suit probably will not be heard until next fall.

Charles S. Peterson, president of the opera, commenting on reports of financial difficulties, announced that definite assurance had been given that the $15,000 appropriated by the city council for the current opera deficit would be forthcoming this week. On the strength of this, he said, assignments against it will be given to the opera employés for wages.

FAVORS AIDING ONLY STUDENTS OF HIGH ABILITY

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Russell T. Sharps, secretary of student employment at Harvard university, today told the Eastern Association of College Deans that student aid should not be "wasted" on those who do not have marked ability.

Privately endowed colleges, he said, must correct the "fallacy" of confusing more equality of opportunity with equality of opportunity contingent upon individual ability.

Sharps cited a recent Harvard survey report which concluded it was no longer practical for a student to work his way through college. The report found the time left after classes could be spent more profitably in social activities, tutoring or recreation.

"The current belief that every boy and girl has a right to a college education regardless of ability must be corrected," he said.

The ultimate and logical solution of the problem, he asserted, is control of admissions.

MAKE YOUR DREAMS COME TRUE

This Christmas

UNCLE SAM PLAYS Santa

. . . HINES POINTS THE WAY

Make this Christmas the best Christmas you ever had—best for you and every member of your family. Give yourself and them a roomier, cozier, more modern, more attractive home. Could anything be a finer gift? A more wanted gift? Could anything bring more enduring happiness? A modern, step-saving kitchen; a more attractive living room; a cozy extra bedroom in place of wasted attic space; a den for Dad; a recreation room in the basement for the youngsters (and "oldsters" as well!); a remodeled room for Mary Lou.

NOTHING DOWN
5 YEARS TO PAY ON FHA TERMS

Now is your chance to have these improvements made in your home—the best chance you ever had, probably the best you ever will have; with payments spread over one to five years on FHA terms, the family budget will never feel any strain.

HINES WILL GET YOUR LOAN FOR YOU

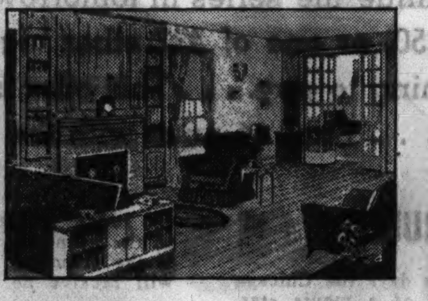
Don't miss this opportunity. It may never be offered again. FHA loans for remodeling and repairs won't be available after March 31, 1936. Call your nearest Hines yard today. Hines will send a man who knows how to handle these matters to your home to talk things over with you. Hines will get your loan for you—quickly and without red tape. Hines will put you in touch with a contractor who guarantees his work. You won't have to worry about any of the details—no running around hunting this and that or what-not. Hines service attends to all such matters.

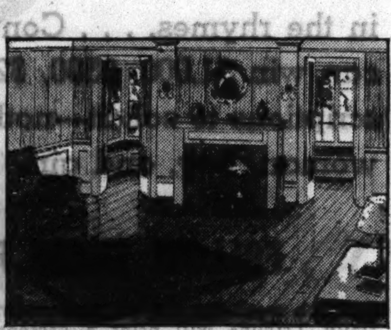
ONLY 25 DAYS 'TIL XMAS!

Time enough, however, to make it a real Christmas if you let Uncle Sam play Santa and Hines point the way!

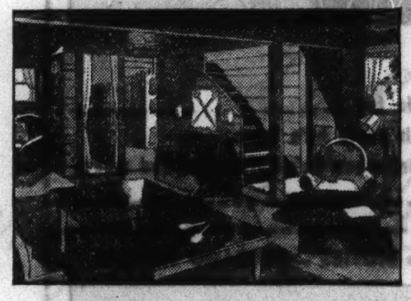
"Remember, Mother, how we longed for a modern home of our own when we were 'newlyweds'? We couldn't afford it then—but we can afford to make that dream come true for our children now. Isn't that the answer to our gift problem for Mary and John?"



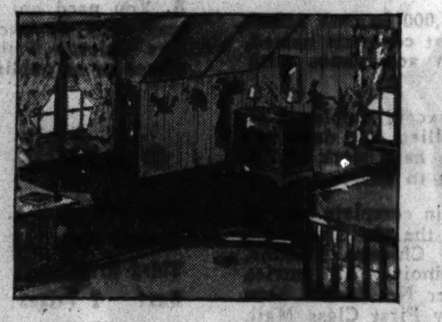
Often an out-of-date living room can be made as inviting as this one for as low as $10.00 per month. Let Hines show you how.



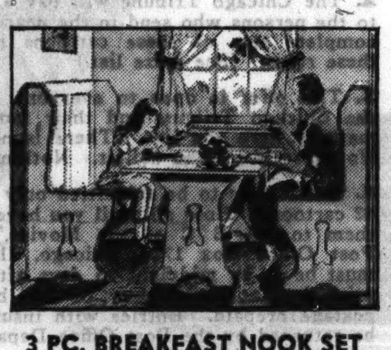
A new den for Dad—fireplace and all, and an added sunroom in place of an open porch which didn't benefit anyone. Average cost—$8.68 per month.



Won't the kids have fun in a recreation room like this which can be inexpensively built into what is now wasted basement space! For $9 monthly.



Instead of wasted attic space, a cozy bedroom as warm and snug as any room in the house. The cost is less than you imagine—about $9.50 per mo.



3 PC. BREAKFAST NOOK SET

Two benches and colonial type table, 26"x48". Comes knocked down, which makes finishing in enamel, lacquer, varnish or stain much easier. Finish it yourself and you will have a $30 set for $13

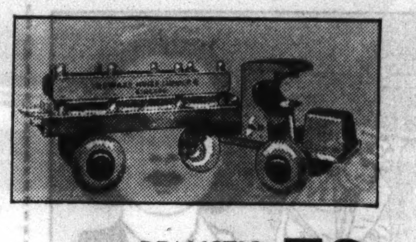
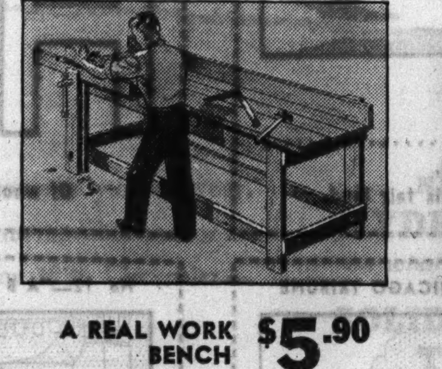
CARPENTER'S KIT 98c

Give the boy who wants to make things an opportunity to develop his creative talents. Dozens of articles from a chiffonier to an airplane model can be built with this kit. It contains assorted sizes of soft pine lumber and directions. Box is 6¾"x4⅜"x27¼".



REALISTIC HINES TRUCK 79c

When youngsters reach the age where they want toys like this, they want them to look like the real thing—and this one does. Loaded with Ponderosa pine.

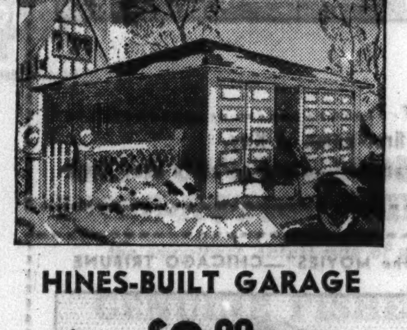


A REAL WORK BENCH $5.90

Here's a wonderful gift for "boys" who have a yen for woodcraft—whether they are 16 years old—or 60! It's a real work bench—not a toy. Made of heavy Douglas fir—6' long, 42" high, including back. Screw for vise—75c.

BIG BOX OF BLOCKS 65c

A big box of fun for a little fellow. Blocks made of clean white pine in natural finish with fragrant scent of the north woods. Contains 64 blocks in seven different sizes, up to 1½"x1½"x6". Size of box 4"x8"x18".



HINES-BUILT GARAGE

for only $8.99 per month

This price includes erection on your lot by a certified contractor. Hines garages are not sectional, flimsy shells. They are built. Can be heated. And you pay for them on rent-like terms. Call your nearest yard for details.

No subscriptions to solicit—nothing to pay. . . . This offer is open free to every man, woman, boy, and girl. . . . Start at once with the 12 Cartoons printed here.

FOLLOW THESE RULES:

1. Each week-day for 42 consecutive days the Chicago Daily Tribune will print a cartoon of a movie star. With it will be published the first letter of the last name of the star and a verse. A space in the verse will be left blank for the star's last name. The public is invited to fill in the names.

2. The Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000 in cash prizes to the persons who send in the nearest correctly named, complete sets of these cartoons in accordance with these rules. (See prize list.)

3. This offer is open to everyone except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. It does not matter where you live. There is no hard work to do. No subscriptions to solicit. Nothing to pay.

4. Entries are to be submitted only in complete sets of 42 cartoons. Hold all until you have the 42. Then send them to "A B C of the Movies," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1718, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be in by midnight 15 days after No. 42 has been printed. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department.

5. Accuracy in naming the cartoons will receive first consideration. However, you need not necessarily name all cartoons accurately to win. The prizes will be paid to those whose entries rank highest.

6. The last line of the verse published with Cartoon No. 42 will be left blank for you to fill in. However, the Judges will give consideration to such last line only in the event of ties. Accuracy in naming the cartoons is the principal requirement. Highly decorated entries will receive no more consideration than simple ones.

7. The judges will be a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Their decision will be final. In case of ties duplicate awards will be paid.

8. You need not purchase the Chicago Tribune. You may copy or trace the cartoons and use your copies. The Chicago Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

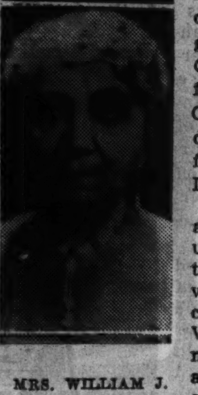
SALE TO BENEFIT CHILD CRIPPLES OPENS THIS WEEK

Youngsters' Handicraft to Be Offered to Public.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

One of Chicago's most worthy charities will be benefited next Wednesday when the handicraft work of the boys and girls in the Country Home for Convalescent Crippled Children is presented for sale in the Drake hotel.



MRS. WILLIAM J. CHALMERS.

The sale is an annual affair under the direction of the board which has for its chairman Mrs. William J. Chalmers, founder and one of the chief benefactors of the home. The sale attracts not only socially prominent but also many Chicagoans who want to give their assistance to a charity that is widely known as "a model home for the care and education of crippled children."

Articles Made by Cripples.

All of the proceeds will go in a lump sum to the home, which is located 35 miles west of Chicago in Wayne township, Du Page county, Mrs. Chalmers explained yesterday. There will be Christmas toys especially designed and handmade by the little cripples—hooked rugs, swings, bird houses, tray sets, and mail boxes especially patterned for country homes.

All of these articles will be spread out, Christmas fashion, in the Drake's Avenue of Palms. Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, who makes the home one of her primary interests, is planning the display of the merchandise.

Notable men and women have made generous contributions to the convalescent home since its founding in 1911 and they have visited it on several occasions in company with Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers. These visitors always have brought away with them a lesson in fortitude and cheerfulness. What they see are smiling faces and what they hear are the song and laughter of boys and girls whom science and sunshine are restoring to health.

What the Home Does.

Mrs. Chalmers, with her family and fellow townsmen, founded the home with the idea that a long period of rest, sunshine, and cheerful occupation are just as important for tubercular boned children as surgical treatment in the hospitals. Many cases have shown that a return from the hospital to humble homes and poor surroundings means a recurrence of the disease and years of suffering, Mrs. Chalmers points out.

Richard W. Sears, founder of the Sears-Roebuck company, gave the land at Prince Crossing in Du Page county which has been developed along the lines of a model farm to supply the children's table. The late J. Ogden Armour gave the first $25,000 and before his death his gifts totaled more than $200,000. Chicago's ablest physicians and surgeons and scientists have given their advice and services gratis.

GREEK KING FORMS NEUTRAL CABINET; ALL REBELS WIN LIBERTY

ATHENS, Nov. 30.—(AP)—King George I., newly reënthroned monarch, won the first round tonight in his fight with the man who led the move for his restoration. In forming a neutral cabinet which immediately adopted a measure granting amnesty to all Greeks, George succeeded in his first move to make himself a full constitutional ruler of the whole country.

Murmurs against the king were heard in quarters close to Gen. George Kondylis, who executed the coup which led to a plebiscite for restoration of the monarchy. In most other circles, satisfaction was expressed with the appointment of Constantine Demerdjis, professor of law and former minister, as premier.

MICHIGAN BRIDGE OPENS 4 TIMES IN 50 MINUTES

Loop Trafic Tied Up More than Hour.

Football fans hurrying from the north side to Soldiers' field were delayed a total of 25 minutes between 2:05 and 2:55 yesterday afternoon when the Michigan avenue bridge and the others opened four times for boats in the river. One of the liftings, which closed the bridge to street trafic for ten minutes, jammed south bound trafic in four solid lanes of cars from the Michigan bridge north to Chicago avenue while trafic from the south was at a standstill beyond Randolph street.

Hundreds of autoists with tickets purchased for the benefit game between Lindblom and Leo High schools were caught in the tieup. The Michigan bridge tender's log showed that the first lifting was at 2:05 p. m. for the sand boat, American, which required five minutes to pass. Ten minutes later the bridge was lifted again for five minutes to allow a derrick and scow to go through.

At 2:29 the bridge was lifted a third time to allow the passage of the merchandise boat, Munising, which kept the trafic tied up for 10 minutes while the tugs Washington and New Jersey towed it through. Some motorists at the north end of the trafic jam were forced to wait while the bridge opened twice.

Eleven minutes after the bridge closed behind the Munising at 2:39 o'clock, the Gilbert, carrying sand, caused the bridge to open for the fourth time, delaying trafic for another five minutes.

The four boats followed each other so closely that at no time between 2:05 and 3:10 were all eight bridges between Michigan avenue and Franklin street open to trafic at the same time. At least one of them was up all of the time between 2:05 and 3:10 p. m., when the Franklin bridge closed behind the Gilbert at 3:10 o'clock.

So many elevated trains, street cars and automobiles accumulated on both sides of the Wells street bridge that the Gilbert was forced to stop after passing La Salle street until the congestion was cleared.

FIRE WARNING SHOTS AS STRIKE PICKETS STONE LINE OF TRUCKS

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Warning shots were fired into the air by police today as strike pickets hurled a barrage of rocks and stones at the last truckloads of goods and equipment being moved from the Strutwear Knitting company, shut down since last August.

Pickets swarmed about the plant, guarded by city policemen, while deputy United States marshals convoyed the trucks away from the plant. Later in the day the trucks were convoyed back to Winona.

The attack occurred as the trucks halted momentarily before leaving the factory site. Previously, strikers had broken windows in the building and injured four truck drivers and one deputy marshal in similar attacks yesterday and Wednesday.

So far, no arrests have been made in any of the outbreaks.

CROAT PATRIOTS SEEK FREEDOM FOR HOMELAND

Five hundred members of the National Congress of Croatian Patriots, in session at the Amalgamated center, 333 South Ashland avenue, yesterday and today, approved a manifesto to the league of nations yesterday asking that steps be taken to assist Croatia to independence from the Jugo-Slavian kingdom. According to Capt. Ante Doshen, secretary of the organization, the delegates are attending from all parts of the United States, Canada, Europe, and South America.

The manifesto asserted that "The state of Croatia was guaranteed by President Woodrow Wilson in the peace treaty of 1918 the right to determine its own destiny, but was, by the false representations of the Servian Regent Alexander, forced into the so-called state of Jugo-Slavia."

The congress attributed the assassination of King Alexander Karageorgevitch of Jugo-Slavia in Marseilles, France, in October, 1934, to the "bitter resentment against unjust oppression" by the Croats. The manifesto termed the king's slayer "a Croation patriot," but made no reference to the three Croats on trial in France for the killing.

CHICAGO STUDENT FOUND SHOT; LOVE AFFAIR IS BLAMED

Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Dean Holmes Corlette Jr. of Chicago, 21, a junior in the University of Arkansas Business college, was found shot to death in his fraternity house room today. Coroner Glenn Riggs of Springdale, Ark., returned a verdict of suicide.

Riggs said he believed the youth's action resulted from despondency over a love affair.

RIVALRY OF THREE LEADERS INCITES UNREST IN MEXICO

Nation Torn by Intrigue in Fight for Rule.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 30.—Mexico is troubled and restless today. President Lazaro Cardenas lies ill and politics are getting out of hand. Nearly every day come reports of violence and bloodshed from various parts of the country—a hide and seek revolt against a state government, a rebel raid on a town, a Fascist-communist clash, murders of school teachers for teaching Mexican Socialism, murders of local officials, plots nipped and plots executed.

It all adds up to this—Mexican intrigue. There is a strong undercurrent of feeling that Mexico soon will have a new ruler, and the collisions of leaders scrambling for the job have begun. Almost every significant event is to be interpreted in the light of these clashing political forces.

Three Men Seek Power.

Three men stand out now as probably the most influential politically in the country. Each controls large groups. Each is opposed to the other. All are close to President Cardenas.

They are Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, secretary of agriculture; Emilio Portes Gil, president of the National Revolutionary [government] party and former president of the republic, and Gen. Francisco J. Mujica, secretary of communications.

Gen. Cedillo, one of the first to back Cardenas for the presidency in 1932 against the opposition of former President Plutarco Elias Calles, is considered to represent the moderates, or right wing, of the revolutionary party. He has, for instance, publicly supported freedom of teaching in the University of Mexico against those who would make it a tribune exclusively for the teaching of socialism.

Claim General Aids Fascists.

Communists charge that Cedillo is secretly supporting the Fascist movement exemplified in Mexico by the "Golden Shirts." They have accused him of instigating the bloody Mexico City clash on Nov. 20 with parading laborers and radicals. One charge was made recently that Cedillo had bought the Fascists their shirts and otherwise aided them financially.

These charges have created consternation in Catholic circles, who have always looked upon Cedillo as one of their strongest supporters. But Catholic leaders do not look at all favorably upon the possibility of a Catholic-Fascist tie-up.

"We Catholics have no illusions about Fascism, with Germany as an example," one prominent clergyman commented.

Portes Gil Masses Peasants.

Cedillo's largest following appears to lie among the farmers of his own state, San Luis Potosi. But though he is secretary of agriculture, he has lost much support in other states recently to one of his rivals, Portes Gil.

Portes Gil, considered as much farther to the left than Cedillo, is gathering all the farmers of the country into a single organization which potentially will give to its leader tremendous power. In this connection it is pointed out that the government not only is distributing land to the farmers but is arming them so as to create a military reserve.

The constitution presents some difficulty to Portes Gil as yet, since it provides that no man can become president twice. It is generally agreed that the difficulty is not insuperable.

Gen. Mujica, the third "candidate" for Mexican power, is known to be an out-and-out radical. One of his most prominent backers, Lombardo Toledano, has predicted that Mexico will be under a soviet régime by May 1, 1936.

Rivals in Bitter Clash.

A behind-the-scenes battle between Mujica and Portes Gil has been raging ever since earlier in the year when the two men competed in the organization of rival salt coöperatives from which they expected to derive backing. [Mujica at that time was secretary of economy.]

Although this three sided political jockeying is not given outward recognition, it appears to be overshadowing in importance even the opposition to the government stirred by the anti-Catholic legislation. Some observers go so far as to charge that protests against such laws are inspired by Cedillo.

There is no petty squabble in the interior between a governor and his local congress but that immediately every party tries to ascertain which of the three political leaders supports the adversary in order to look for support from the others.

DE PAUL U. PLANS INDUCTION OF O'CONNELL DEC. 9

The Rev. Michael J. O'Connell will be formally inducted as president of De Paul university on Monday, Dec. 9. He has been president of the school since the retirement of the Rev. Francis V. Corcoran from that office last September.

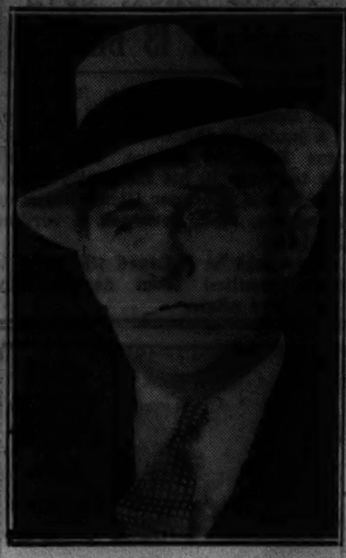
About 150 college and university presidents and representatives of middle west schools have been invited to participate in the procession on the morning of Dec. 9 from the administration building on Sheffield avenue to St. Vincent de Paul church. Dignitaries of church and state, including the Rev. William D. O'Brien, auxiliary bishop of Chicago; Gov. Horner and Mayor Kelly, have been invited to be present.

On Sunday, Dec. 8, the Rev. Father O'Connell will receive guests at the formal opening of the new music and drama studios, liberal arts library and executive offices in the downtown building of De Paul university at 64 East Lake street.

FINES WINDOW BREAKERS.

Cornelius O'Grady, 35 years old, 507 West 45th street, and Frank Rodgers, 36, of 26 West Ontario street, were fined $1 each by Municipal Judge Joseph B. Hermes for breaking the windows of a street car during a quarrel.

HERO



PATROLMAN FRANK FUERST.

SUBDUES TWO GUNMEN, WINS HERO'S AWARD

Policeman Receives Tribune Prize.

Patrolman Frank Fuerst of the detective bureau, who shot and captured two gunmen who had kidnaped him and a girl companion, and who later arrested three aids of the gunmen to smash a robber gang, has been awarded THE TRIBUNE'S hero prize of $100 for the month of October.

Officer Fuerst, who is attached to the staf of the postoffice inspector in the new postoffice building, was off duty and driving to his home at 2727 South Lawndale avenue on the night of Oct. 29. As he reached the intersection of Franklin boulevard and Kedzie avenue, a young woman hurried to the street, apparently in great fright, and motioned to him to stop.

The girl, who gave her name as Margaret McNeil, 24 years old, of the Fairfield Arms hotel, 3260 Maypole avenue told Officer Fuerst that two men were following her and that she believed they were armed.

Policeman Kept Covered.

At this moment the two men appeared, brandishing guns. They ordered Miss McNeil and the policeman into the rear seat of the policeman's car. Then they drove the car about for twenty minutes, finally stopping at De Kalb and Polk streets, where they demanded Fuerst's money.

Until this time one of the men had kept a gun on Fuerst, but, at the moment of stopping, Fuerst drew his own pistol, seized the gun pointing at him, and began firing.

He shot the gunman, Irving Stark, 26 years old, in the arm and the left shoulder. His next shot hit Walter Weglartz, 21, in the left hand. Both men surrendered without having fired a shot and they were taken to the Bridewell hospital. They said they lived at 2936 Warren avenue, and police went there and took into custody Stark's wife, Lenore, and Weglartz's wife, May, both of whom were later released.

Three More Arrests.

Both Stark and Weglartz had police records, and from them Officer Fuerst received information concerning the rest of the gang, which had been involved in a series of robberies.

With his companion officer at the postoffice, Thomas Prindiville, he acted on the information, and they arrested Mitze Sanders, 27; John Micholeb, 24, and John Spastny, 24, all said to have been involved in a robbery at 3854 West Grand avenue on Oct. 10. The five men are being held under bonds of $60,000 each on robbery charges.

Officer Fuerst joined the police department nineteen years ago after he had been a city employé in the department of streets. He has been a sergeant for five years. He served in the regular army in 1914 and 1915. He is married and has one son, who is a junior at the University of Illinois.

The officer has received creditable mention from the police department on six different occasions—in 1920, 1925, 1930, twice in 1934, and on Oct. 29, 1935. He also received mention and extra compensation on Jan. 1, 1930, when he aided in the capture of three armed holdup men.

COURT ORDERS TINKOFF FREED TO PLAN PLEA

Denver, Colo., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The Federal Court of Appeals decided today that Paysoff Tinkoff, former Chicago attorney, was improperly confined in Leavenworth prison and ordered him released on $500 bond.

The order granted him freedom for 40 days while he completes an appeal from a Chicago federal District court decision convicting him of violating income tax laws.

Tinkoff was brought here to testify that he was rushed to prison without an opportunity to file an appeal bond. He contended prison officials hampered his efforts to prepare an appeal.

He has but three months of an 18 month term to serve but he said that if he was deprived of the right of appeal he would be disbarred from practicing his profession and would lose his citizenship.

Tinkoff was convicted for giving allegedly wrongful advice to a client in a tax case.

Manx to Banquet Saturday and Settle Cat Contest

The 62d annual banquet of the Chicago Manx society will be held Saturday evening at the Palmer House. The Manx cat contest will be settled that evening by the members, each of whom claims to have the best cat of this species in the country. Marshall Keig, vice president of the Union League club, will be toastmaster. Among the speakers will be Lewis Bernays, British consul general; Dr. W. H. Watterson, Dr. J. J. Moore, Thomas Kelly, former president of the North American Manx association, and Walter Stevenson, president of the Chicago Manx society.

Survey Finds Rents Higher—More Home Loans Made in 31 States

BUILDING-LOAN BODIES REPORT BUSINESS GAIN

Collections Near Normal in 24 States.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

H. F. CELLARIUS.
[Bachrach Photo.]

Prosperity is coming back into both the building and loan and real estate fields throughout the country, according to H. F. Cellarius, secretary-treasurer of the United States Building and Loan league, who yesterday completed a survey covering 41 states, the District of Columbia and the Territory of Hawaii.

In 31 states secretaries of state leagues of building and loan associations reported that rents are higher and desirable homes hard to find. In the same number of states a high percentage increase in the volume of new loans, compared with the last few years, was reported.

While the reports were not unanimously optimistic on all phases of business, they point to several roads where progress is being made. It was found there has been a quickening in both the inflow and outflow of funds sufficient to show that the building and loan bodies of America have joined the recovery parade, Cellarius asserted.

Inflow of Funds Gains.

The inflow of funds into the home financing field is picking up in two ways, he pointed out. Twenty-four of the reporting states give definite indication that collections are near normal. This is particularly important in the field of home financing credit, since collections mean not only receipts of interest payments but monthly instalments on principal, thus providing funds which can be reinvested in new loans, Cellarius said.

In addition, 32 of the states show a gradual pickup in new investments. Some of them are unable to employ these funds in loans and are turning money back or limiting new investments. Others find that only insured building and loan associations are getting much of the new funds. In still others sale of new shares is just beginning to recover.

"States which are reporting too much money, placing limitations on the amount which they will receive from a single shareholder, are up against the proposition of insufficient loan demand" said Cellarius. "Nineteen of the states report demand is insufficient to use all available moneys. Many of these, however, report improving conditions because of strenuous efforts being made in metropolitan centers to start building of homes.

Rents Higher in 31 States.

"There also is optimism about the development of better loan demand because 31 states report that rentals are higher and desirable homes hard to find. In only 5 states is a brisk real estate market reported as yet, but the signs are in the making, all seem to conclude.

"The outflow of funds into home loans is conditioned by the lack of demand reported, but in 31 of the states there was shown a high percentage increase in the volume of new loans over the last few years."

Following are a few of the comments on loaning activities in various states:

Illinois—New loans are being made in most sections of the state.

Indiana—A recent questionnaire showed 78 associations making loans amounting to $3,904,000.

Wisconsin—Associations generally are making every reasonable loan requested.

California—Seventy per cent of the associations have been making loans during 1935, against 51 per cent in 1934.

Kansas—During 1935 the associations have loaned approximately $4,000,000.

Louisiana—The lending situation is improving. Two thousand nine hundred and eighty-six loans totaling $9,908,000 were made during the year ending Sept. 30, 1935.

In the District of Columbia, according to the survey, there is the greatest proportionate activity of any part of the country. Loans at the rate of two million dollars a month are reported.

Coal Group Leases Entire Floor at Randolph-Wells

The Chicago Coal Merchants' association, reported to be the oldest group of retail coal dealers in the country, yesterday leased the entire twenty-second floor of the Randolph-Wells building for five years from Jan. 1, 1936. Harold C. Costello and George M Braches of the Iroquois Management company, building agents, acted as brokers. The association is now at 30 North La Salle street.

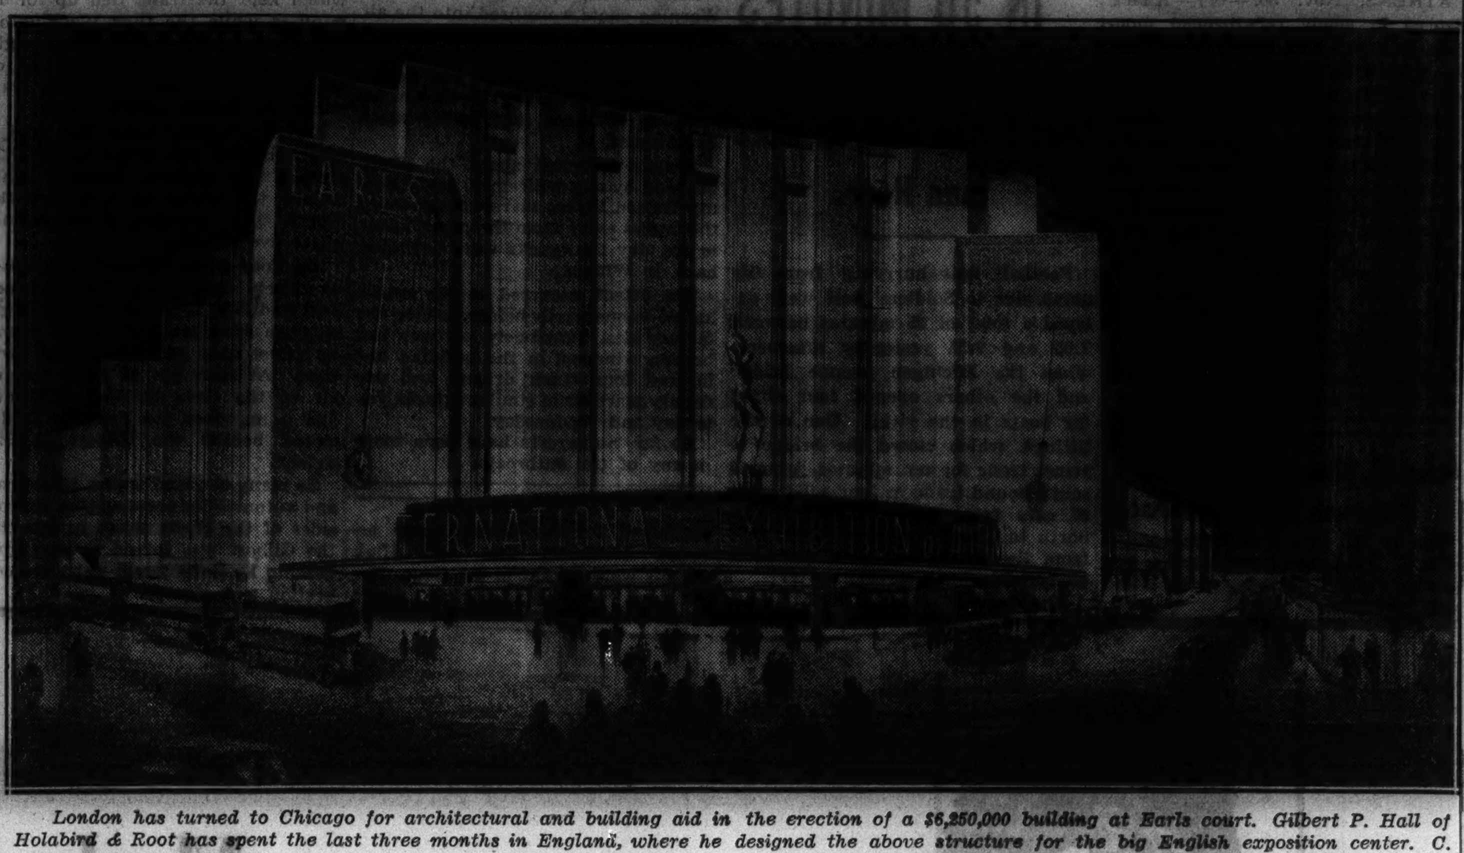
CHICAGOAN DESIGNS $6,250,000 LONDON STRUCTURE



London has turned to Chicago for architectural and building aid in the erection of a $6,250,000 building at Earls court. Gilbert P. Hall of Holabird & Root has spent the last three months in England, where he designed the above structure for the big English exposition center. C. Howard Crane of Detroit, who once maintained offices in Chicago, is architect, and the Hegeman-Harris company, which built Tribune Tower, will erect the structure. Details are given in another column on this page.

Heading the only ticket in the field, he will succeed Joseph B. Ford. In turn he will be succeeded by Fred M. Thuerk as first vice president. Joseph R. Dorfman will be second vice president, with John F. Butler slated for treasurer.

Directors will be Max M. Woolpy, Arthur Davidson, James McNichols, Miss A. O. Tessmar, and James J. Curtis.

MADIGAN BROS. LEASE BASEMENT STORE SPACE

With the leasing yesterday of the entire basement selling space in the building now under construction by Walter Powers at 4016-24 West Madison street to Madigan Brothers department store, that structure is now 100 per cent rented, according to J. E. Ehrenhalt & Co., brokers.

The space just rented, comprising 12,000 square feet, is to be connected with the Madigan Brothers basement salesroom in the adjoining building. Increased business, necessitating larger quarters, caused the Madigan Brothers concern to expand.

The lease is for a term of years at an undisclosed rental. The building is expected to be completed by Dec. 7.

Dovenmuehle, Inc., Reports Record Total of Loans Made

Mortgage sales totaling $501,000 were made by Dovenmuehle, Inc., during the last week of November, according to Harry C. Eigelberner, secretary of that firm. This total, he stated, constitutes one of the largest in the recent history of the banking house. It is exclusive of renewals.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Nov. 22 to 28, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 16, with a combined cost of $130,000. For the corresponding week of last year there were 8 contracts totaling $97,000.

William A. Sadler to Head Evanston-North Shore Group

WILLIAM A. SADLER.
[Moffett Photo.]

William A. Sadler of the Evanston realty firm of Smart & Golee will be elected president of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board tomorrow evening at the board rooms, 1569 Sherman avenue, Evanston, at the annual business meeting of the organization. He heads the only ticket in the field and will succeed H. L. McDaniel of Wirtz, Haynie, & Ehrat, Inc. He is now vice president of the realty board.

Stewart B. Matthews, vice president in charge of sales of Baird & Warner, Inc., will be elected vice president of the realty organization. Alder R. Tighe will be secretary and Gretta P. Fuller treasuer.

Cyrus to Be Director.

George J. Cyrus, former president, and William G. Ruggles, are to be elected directors for three year terms. Raymond L. Dowdall and Charles J. Connor will be made directors of the insurance division for one year and Clyde Foster and Norman Lighthart will be directors for two years on the property owners' division.

After a lapse of several years the annual banquet of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board will be revived in a new setting. This year's gathering, the first since the merger of the Evanston and North Shore boards, will be held on Wednesday evening, Dec. 11, at the Shawnee Country club, Wilmette.

Professor to Speak.

McDaniel, president of the realty board, whose suggestion to revive the custom was acted upon at the last meeting of the organization, has appointed a banquet committee headed by George Holm, and comprising Robert E. Goss, Elmer Olson, Nelson Snyder, J. F. Fisher, H. L. Hultman, Arthur Gedge, E. Sawyer Smith, David C. Malin, Alder Tighe, and Sadler. Former President Cyrus will be toastmaster.

Ralph E. Heilman, dean of the Northwestern university school of commerce, will be the principal speaker. In addition, a program of entertainment will follow.

WARD T. HUSTON.

Ward T. Huston of Ward T. Huston & Co. was elected president of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at a recent meeting held at the Chicago Real Estate board rooms.

Huston succeeds Mark Levy, who held office for two years. He is a resident of Evanston, where he is alderman of the First ward and a director of the State Bank and Trust company.

Other officers elected were Oscar L. Soderquist, vice president; Walter Kuehnle, secretary, and Kenneth Calhoun Brown, treasurer.

Whitaker Company Plans a Program of Expansion

With inquiries for new home construction and vacant property increasing rapidly, R. B. Whitaker, president of the R. B. Whitaker company of Winnetka, yesterday announced an extensive program of expansion of his concern in its various departments. He stated that service will be maintained from Evanston to Lake Forest.

BUYS FLAT BUILDING.

R. E. Edrington has purchased the apartment building at 7021 Clyde avenue from the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company for a reported $18,000. Ernest Cook & Co. were brokers.

Real Estate Bonds

During the last week trading in the real estate bond market slackened, due in some measure to the holiday. Issues that were active were mostly higher. The following quotations were provided by a Chicago dealer:

LONDON LOOKING TO CHICAGO FOR ARCHITECTURAL AID

GILBERT P. HALL
[De Gueldre Photo]

Gilbert P. Hall, of the architectural firm of Holabird & Root, identified with the design of many of Chicago's outstanding structures, including the Chrysler building at A Century of Progress, the 333 North Michigan, Palmolive, and others, has returned from three months in London, where he designed the new $6,250,000 building to be erected at Earls Court.

Hall was called to London by C. Howard Crane, Detroit architect, who with Kenneth Franzheim, designed the Selwyn and Harris theaters in this city. Crane, who is architect of the new Earls Court building, commissioned Hall to design both the interior and exterior of the main building.

Earls Court, noted for many years as a London amusement center, has been closed for some time, Hall said. The new building, work on which will start in a few weeks, will contain more than 12 acres of exhibition space on two floors and have seating accommodation for 25,000 spectators at sporting events and large scale entertainments. It will be open in January, 1937, and the three principal British exhibitions—British Industries fair, Ideal home exhibition, and the Motor show—will be held there.

The contract for its erection has been awarded to the Hegeman-Harris company, Inc., of New York and Chicago, which built Tribune Tower.

OPTICAL FIRM ENLARGES DOWN TOWN QUARTERS

Belgard-Spero, Inc., opticians, have leased and will open tomorrow new and larger downtown quarters in the Michigan Boulevard building. Organized in 1920, the firm now has branch offices in Milwaukee, Aurora, and in the uptown area.

Since its display at A Century of Progress the concern has had a steady expansion in business, it was stated. In the new quarters visitors will be able to witness the entire process of the manufacture of glasses through double glass soundproof partitions.

FIELD BUILDING PLANS LIBRARY FOR ATTORNEYS

10,000 Law Volumes for Lawyer Tenants.

GEORGE RICHARDSON.

Plans for a complete law library for use of tenants of the new Field building were announced yesterday by George Richardson, managing trustee of the Estate of Marshall Field, which owns and operates the structure.

Ten thousand volumes, one of the largest single orders for law books placed in recent years, will comprise the initial list of reference volumes. It was reported the preliminary cost will be $25,000, but it is understood that considerably more than that will be expended in future development.

Will Open Dec. 21.

With 125 attorneys already tenants of the Field building, the new library is expected to make that structure a legal center for corporation lawyers. The books are now being placed on the shelves—the first shipment received comprised over half a carload and weighed ten tons. The opening date is set for Saturday, Dec. 21.

The library is on the fourteenth floor. Experienced attendants will be in charge from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily. It also will be open on Sundays.

"For several months libraries in many cities have been studied by representatives of the estate, and the best features of all have been combined in the new Field building law library to make it a model of its kind," said Richardson.

Lawyers Aid Project.

Plans by Graham, Anderson, Probst & White, who designed the building, provide three private study rooms and ten study tables. Adjoining it is the office of a public stenographer, available to those using the library.

Three prominent lawyers have acted as an advisory committee to the Field estate to see that the project attains the greatest efficiency and benefit to the building tenants. They are Charles O. Rundall of Barthell & Rundall, Egbert Robertson of Robertson, Crowe & Spence, and Clay Judson of Wilson & McIlvaine.

"Lawyers in the building will be greatly aided by this law library," said Rundall, chairman of the committee. "Few law offices have sufficiently large libraries to meet all their needs and the only complete working law libraries available in the loop are those of the Chicago Bar association, open only to members, and the Chicago Law institute in the County building.

Plan Lecture Course.

"The Field building library will fill needs so fully that only on rare occasions will it be necessary for a lawyer tenant to go out of the building to make legal references.

"An additional service will be a series of semi-monthly lectures on 'How to Find the Law,' by prominent lawyers and librarians, designed to be particularly helpful to young attorneys."

The law books of the Field library cover court decisions in all states from 1879 to the present, together with reports from the earliest times of several states, and all important indexes and digests of legal cases, including those of England, since 1658. Several hundred of the newest and most valuable text books of the legal profession are included in the collection. The country is being scoured for desirable out of print books, Richardson said.

DR. EDWARD JUDD DIES; NOTED MAYO CLINIC SURGEON

Seized with Pneumonia Here on Way East.

DR. EDWARD S. JUDD. [Acme Photo.]

Dr. Edward Starr Judd, noted surgeon of the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., died of pneumonia yesterday at the Presbyterian hospital here. He was 57 years old.

He was passing through the city on his way to a meeting of the American Clinical society in Philadelphia when he was stricken. A cold that developed last Saturday turned to pneumonia on Monday and he was taken to the hospital at once.

Friends said he was getting along well and seemed to be recovering when he suffered a relapse.

At the deathbed were two of his five children, Mrs. Eleanor Kirklin of Rochester, and Edward Jr.; a brother, Cornelius; a brother-in-law, Dr. Henry Plummer, and Mrs. Plummer.

Second of Staf to Die in 3 Days.

Other survivors are his widow, Mrs. Helen Berkman Judd, a relative of the Mayos, whom he married in 1908; and two other daughters, Misses Helen and Mary Jane Judd, students at Sweetbriar college, Lynchburg, Va., and another son, David, who is studying at the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Judd was the second Mayo staf physician to die of pneumonia within three days. Dr. George E. Brown, authority on blood vessel diseases, died Thursday.

Nearly every surgeons' organization has paid tribute to Dr. Judd's surgical skill and at one time or another he headed almost every national society of surgeons. He was best known in the field of abdominal surgery.

He was born at Rochester, Minn., on July 11, 1878, the son of Edward and Emma Judd. After graduating from the University of Minnesota in 1902 and serving his interneship at St. Mary's hospital in Rochester, he became first assistant to Dr. Charles H. Mayo at that family's famed clinic.

The "Surgeon's Surgeon."

Later he was put in charge of a division of the surgical department and finally was made chief of the staf. During the last two years he devoted most of his time to teaching and consultation and less to operative surgery. He was widely known as "the surgeon's surgeon" because of other doctors' faith in his ability to operate on them.

Dr. Judd held memberships in the American Medical association, American College of Surgeons, the American, Southern, Interurban and Western Surgical associations, Minnesota Pathological society, Minnesota Academy of Medicine, and the American Clinical Surgical society.

He also was an honorary member of the Urologic Society of Brazil and a correspondent of the Royal Academy of Medicine of Rome.

His two sons, Edward, who is a senior at Rush Medical college, and David will carry on the family tradition.

ISAAC FRIEND DIES; LONG WITH BOSTON STORE

Isaac Friend, former merchandising manager of the Boston Store, died last night in his apartment at 2828 Pine Grove avenue. He was 84 years old.

Mr. Friend was born in Frankfort, Germany, and came to the United States at the age of 16. He was graduated from the Lake Forest university and started work at the Boston store as a bookkeeper and salesman in 1874. He became a buyer in 1898 and was resident buyer in New York from 1904 until 1918 when he was promoted to merchandising manager. He retired in 1927.

Mr. Friend is survived by his widow, Ella, and a brother and two sisters in Germany. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Bernard Weinstein's Widow Dies; Jewelry House Head

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Mrs. Eda Weinstein, 69 years old, 6920 South Shore drive, head of Bernard Weinstein, Inc., jewelers in Chicago for more than half a century. She died Friday at the Michael Reese hospital after a long illness. She had been head of the jewelry concern since the death of her husband, Bernard Weinstein, about fifteen years ago. Surviving her are two sons, Morris of Los Angeles and Mooney, an official of the jewelry firm. The funeral service will be held at the home.

U. S. Controler's Brother, Michael M. O'Connor, Dies

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Michael M. O'Connor, 63, manager of the Northern hotel here and resident of this city since childhood, died in a hospital tonight three hours after suffering an apoplectic stroke. Member of a prominent pioneer family, Mr. O'Connor was a brother of J. F. T. O'Connor, Washington, D. C., United States controler of the currency.

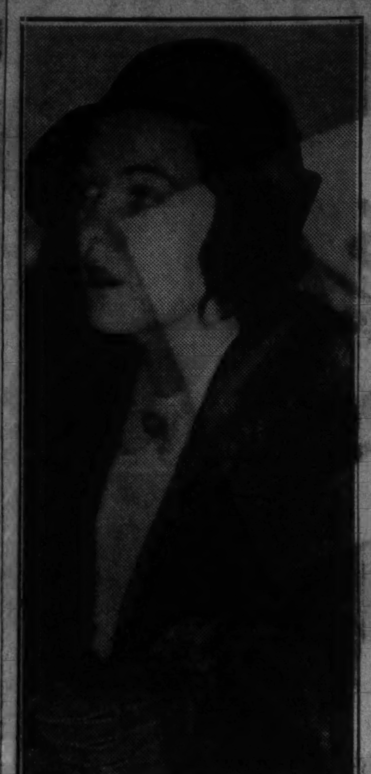
Dr. Iverson Clark Case, U.S. Army Orthopedist, Dies

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The death of Dr. Iverson Clark Case, nationally known in orthopedic work in the United States army, was announced here today.

BACKS BEFORE CAR; KILLED.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Mrs. Aletha Dodd, 50, was killed this afternoon when she backed her automobile out of the garage at her home in Rives Junction, south of here, directly in front of a Michigan Central railroad gas-electric car.

FLIES TO FUNERAL



Lila Lee at Chicago airport yesterday en route to Elyria, O.

Lila Lee, the movie actress, passed through Chicago on a United Air Lines plane yesterday en route from Hollywood to Elyria, O., to attend the funeral of her father, Charles Appel, 63 years old, who died in Elyria Friday. Appel formerly was a well known tavern and restaurant keeper in Chicago.

The death brought together Miss Lee, her former husband, James Kirkwood of the stage and screen, and their 11 year old son, Jimmy, for the first time in three years. Kirkwood and his son met Miss Lee at the Cleveland airport when she landed there.

Her son, who has been living in Elyria with his aunt, Mrs. Leonard Tufford, since his parents were divorced, threw his arms around her as she stepped from the plane.

"Gee, mother," he cried, "it's swell to see you. It's been a long time, hasn't it?"

Kirkwood will finish the Cleveland run of "Tobacco Road" tonight. Miss Lee plans to go on to New York after the funeral.

MRS. WM. HINCH DEAD; DAUGHTER OF CITY PIONEER

Mrs. Elizabeth Hinch, 77 years old, of 412 South Ashland boulevard, daughter of a pioneer Chicago merchant, died in the West Side hospital yesterday of complications resulting from a hip fracture incurred several weeks ago in a fall at her home. She was the widow of William Hinch.

Mrs. Hinch was the daughter of John Magee, who came to Chicago in the 1850's. Surviving her are a son, Dr. Leslie D. Hinch, supervising dentist for the board of health, and a daughter, Mrs. Mabel I. Hopkins. Mrs. Hinch was a cousin of the Rev. William Magee, president of Marquette university.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning from the residence to St. Jarlath church, 1725 Jackson boulevard. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

MRS. MARY BURKE DIES AT AGE 83; IN CHICAGO 72 YEARS

Mrs. Mary Burke, 83 years old, widow of Edward Burke, who was alderman of the old Fifth ward at the turn of the century, died yesterday in her home at 3448 Emerald avenue. She had been a resident of that neighborhood for seventy-two years. She was born in New York City in 1852 and came to Chicago at the age of 11.

Mrs. Burke is survived by a son, James; a daughter, Katheryn, with whom she lived, and another daughter, Mrs. Mary Costello. A son, John, who had been a police operator for many years, died two years ago.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning from the chapel at 1018 West 79th street to St. David's church, 32d street and Emerald avenue. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

Dr. L. D. Brookwalter Dies; Head of Two Colleges

Ansonia, Conn., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Dr. Lewis D. Brookwalter, 89, who served two colleges in Ohio as president, died today at the home of his daughter. A retired minister, Dr. Brookwalter was president of Western college at Toledo for ten years and president of Otterbein college at Westerville for five years. He served churches at Dayton, O.; and Kansas City, Welborne, Hiawatha, and Muscoto, Kas.

Wingfield, Nevada G.O.P. Committeeman, Is Broke

Carson City, Nev., Nov. 30.—(AP)—George Wingfield, Nevada Republican national committeeman, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy today, and Federal Judge Frank H. Norcross adjudged him a bankrupt. Wingfield, president of twelve Nevada banks which closed in 1932, was associated with the late Tex Rickard during the gold rush days.

Ralph W. Doty Dies; City Law Director of Toledo

Toledo, O., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Ralph W. Doty, 50, city law director and prominent Democrat, died last night of bronchial pneumonia eight hours after he was taken to Toledo hospital. He was stricken Tuesday night.

FLAYS 'MARRIED WOMEN CLAUSE' IN ECONOMY ACT

Feminist Likens Law to Colonial Tyranny.

Columbus, O., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A leading feminist declared tonight the "married women's clause" of the 1932 federal economy act is destined to become "as famous because of its infamousness as the stamp act of colonial days which gave birth to the Boston Tea Party."

Edwinna Austin Avery, chairman of the government workers' council of the National Woman's party and former president of the Woman's Bar association, told a national conference of the woman's party:

Cites Effect of Law.

"The law, while purporting to prevent the employment of both husband and wife in the federal service; has been enforced in such a way as to set up a very effective bar to the gainful employment of married women not only in the federal service, but throughout the country, because state and local governments and business have as usual followed the leadership of the national government.

"State legislatures had much discriminatory legislation aimed at women before them during last year's sessions. California, Illinois, Kansas, Texas, Nebraska, Ohio, Kentucky, Rhode Island, Arizona, Connecticut, Wisconsin, New Hampshire, and Pennsylvania all considered bills curtailing in some way the employment of women. In six of these attacks centered on married women."

Blames Missourian.

Mrs. Avery blamed Representative John J. Cochran of Missouri for introduction of the law and said his reasoning for putting women back in the home was "rather hazy."

"No thinking man or woman," she said, "will agree that a law limiting the economic freedom of any class of people is just or is a good law."

She asserted that actually the federal law had deprived only 1,600 women of their jobs directly.

"Really, the father of this law should be proud," she said, "until we balance the ledger against him. Sixteen hundred jobs on one side—on the other heartaches, loss of homes, broken marriages, uncared for, dependent relatives forced on relief, and so on."

FRANK F. ADAIR, RETIRED BANKING OFFICIAL, DEAD

Frank F. Adair, formerly employed by the National Bank of the Republic and the Northern Trust company, died yesterday in his home at 1522 Wilson avenue after a month's illness. He was 64 years old and a veteran of the Spanish American war.

Mr. Adair was born in Dakota City, Ia. He was note teller for the National Bank of the Republic for 15 years until 1913 and was in charge of the collateral department of the Northern Trust company from 1913 until he retired in 1926. He was a member of McKinley post of the Spanish American War Veterans.

Surviving him are his widow, Eva Donaldson Adair, who is a radio script writer under the pen name of Lynn Adair, and a son, Donaldson P. Adair. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon.

RITES TOMORROW FOR J. R. ARNOLD, CIVIL WAR VET

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the chapel at 4138 Madison street for James R. Arnold, civil war veteran and resident of Chicago since 1852. He died in the home of his daughter at 324 North Avers avenue Thursday night at the age of 96.

BOY, 15, IS DEAD; SHOT YEAR AGO BY RAILWAY GUARD, PARALYZED

Charles Verba, 15 years old, 4719 South Kedvale avenue, died yesterday at the Evangelical hospital from toxemia caused by a bullet wound. Charles was a bedridden paralytic after Oct. 4, 1934, when he was shot in the spine by a railroad watchman while picking up scraps for his dog on the railroad tracks near Hamlin avenue and 55th place.

The watchman, Ulysses McBride, 1554 South Wabash avenue, employed by the Santa Fe railroad, was charged with assault but the case was not pushed.

A settlement of $30,000 was reported to have been made in favor of the boy by the railroad out of court. With the fund from the settlement Verba was placed in a bed in his home and was given a private nurse. Last Nov. 12 the infection from the wound became acute and the boy was ordered to the hospital. His widowed mother, Rose, was on relief before the accident. Two sisters and a brother also survive.

TWO SENTENCED FOR THEFTS OF ORIENTAL RUGS

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Leslie Bright, 29 years old, and Miss Verna Wysong, 26, both of Indianapolis, today pleaded guilty to charges of stealing valuable oriental rugs.

Circuit Court Judge Donald A. Rogers sentenced Bright to serve two years in Indiana state reformatory for second degree burglary. Miss Wysong, who holds degrees from Indiana university and the John Herron Art institute, received a sentence of one to ten years for grand larceny.

Each defendant pleaded for leniency for the other. After Bright admitted his guilt before the court, Miss Wysong begged the judge to release him on probation, asserting that his health is so poor he could not survive a prison sentence.

When Miss Wysong uttered her plea of guilty, Bright told the court he was to blame for her predicament, and that he persuaded her to assist him in burglarizing three Bloomington residences of rugs valued at $5,000.

Police, with the aid of Bright, recovered stolen rugs valued at more than $10,000.

GUNMAN SHOOTS HOTEL MANAGER AND ROBS WIFE

Mrs. Barbara Lovse, wife of the manager of the Ashley hotel, 1140 West Madison street, rented a room to a man described as a midget about 5 feet tall last night. When she started to get change for a bill he gave her the man jerked out a pistol and made her hand over $55. Then he forced Mrs. Lovse; her husband, Louis, 49 years old, and Martin Skuska, 54 years old, a roomer, to accompany him down the back stairway into the alley.

Lovse tried to get away by running down the alley. The gunman fired three shots at him. Lovse fell with a bullet in his back, which punctured his left lung. The bandit fled. Lovse's condition is critical.

Joseph Machowiec, 37 years old, 1341 Chapin street, elevator starter in the Illinois Research hospital, was walking in front of 1231 Roosevelt road last night, when he saw three colored men overtaking him. Suspecting a robbery, he fled. One of the Negroes fired three shots at him and a bullet struck him in the back. He is in a serious condition in the County hospital. The bandits fled when Machowiec fell.

'MOUNTIES' HUNT CRAZED TRAPPER; KILLED PARTNER

Police Press Into Wilds by Dogsled.

GOLDFIELDS, Sask., Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—Royal Canadian mounted police pressed northward by dog sled over a snow covered wilderness today seeking a mad trapper accused of murder. Their quarry was John Harms, 65. They hope to find him at Singed Dog island when they reach there tomorrow.

Word of the wilderness slaying was brought to Goldfields by Stanley Wylie, a trader for the Hudson Bay company. He traveled 60 miles by dog team to enlist the aid of the mounted police.

Kills Partner in Fight.

Harms was reported to have shot and killed his partner, Johnny Anthony, 31, on Nov. 23 during a fight in their lonely trapper's cabin at Spring Point, 60 miles west of here, on the Saskatchewan-Alberta boundary.

Following the slaying, Harms was reported to have shot at Mrs. Ira Allen, wife of a neighboring trapper. The woman barricaded herself in her cabin with her 5 year old child. Harms, it was reported, lighted a campfire outside the cabin and for four days attempted to break in. When he abandoned his attempts, he shouted to Mrs. Allen:

"Report to the police that the kid is dead. I will be waiting for them at Singed Dog island."

Claim Trapper Is Demented.

Allen, who reported that Harms appeared demented, returned from his trap lines shortly after Harms left. He immediately set out for the cannery, where he notified Wylie. A radiogram informing police was sent to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police post at Fort Chipewyan, Alta.

W. A. TENNANT'S WIDOW DIES AT 95; IN CITY SINCE 1871

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Boyd Tennant, 95 years old, a resident of Chicago since the fire of 1871, will be held tomorrow afternoon at the United Presbyterian church, 62d street and Woodlawn avenue. Interment will be in Oak Woods cemetery.

DEATH NOTICES

In Memoriam.

COURTNEY—Albert Edward Courtney. In loving memory of my beloved husband who passed away one year ago today.

Sad and sudden was the call,
One so dearly loved by all.
It was a bitter grief, a shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.
We, on earth, in our small way
Are carrying out the plans you made.
We hope from heaven you see us, dear
For we love to feel that you are near.
LOVING WIFE.

ASSAILS COSTLY PRIVATE USE OF COUNTY PHONES

Commissioner Miller Says Calls Cover U. S.

County Commissioner George A. Miller commented indignantly yesterday on the practice of county officials and employés in making periodical long distance telephone calls and sending private telegrams at public expense. The practice was exposed on the completion of an analysis of the telephone calls made at the expense of the county during June, July, August, and September which revealed that 12,000 county toll messages had been made in the four month period to almost every state in the country without regard to the cost.

Commissioner Miller, a resident of Oak Park, is a member of the subcommittee appointed recently by the county board to discover for what purposes the county telephones are being used. This inquiry was ordered after the revelation that a thriving handbook was being conducted from one county office, with wires running direct to a race result bureau.

Like Falling Off a Log.

Should the county employé, either officeholder or hired help, desire a chat with his family at the summer home in Wauconda, Crystal Lake, Lac du Flambeau, or Kennebunkport, he has but to put in the call and forget about the charges, according to Mr. Miller's report.

If some one dies, has a birthday, or wins an election, it takes but a moment to telephone or telegraph condolences or congratulations. There were 100 telegraph messages charged on the county bill last summer, one of them to Hollywood.

The normal business of county offices which must be conducted by long distance telephone, such as obtaining information about the arrest in some other state of a man wanted here, is covered by an annual telephone appropriation. For the fiscal year ending today, the appropriation was $100,000. The actual costs exceeded this figure by nearly $20,000.

System Criticized by Operator.

Five hundred calls were put through to the lake resort region of Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Michigan. Springfield and other downstate towns had hundreds of calls made to them.

Attempts have been made to remedy this abuse, but under the present setup there is slight chance of correcting it, in the opinion of Miss Catherine Walker, chief operator of the county building switchboard.

Miss Walker informed Commissioner Miller that the operators try to learn which calls are personal in order to charge individuals with them, but she estimated that at least 50 per cent of such calls escape notice. Such a check is further handicapped by the existence of private wires in almost every office. In six offices, the state's attorney, county hospital, Criminal court, Juvenile court, and the public welfare [west side] there are independent switchboards which have no connection with the central clearing office.

Equipment Inadequate for Purpose.

In addition there are 90 night service phones, plugged through this switchboard, but without the necessary arrangement to detect from which office a night call is made.

For 8 years, Miss Walker said, she had been trying unsuccessfully to induce the telephone company to install some system of recording calls, or at least arranging for all toll calls to go through a central office. Commissioner Miller declared this would be his recommendation to the subcommittee and the county board.

Not only are toll privileges abused, but Commissioner Miller was informed that many outsiders use county telephones instead of pay stations to conduct their business. In room 623 of the Probate court clerk's office, Miller was told "the lawyers stand five and six in line to make use of two county phones."

Report Gets Down to Cases.

Some of the particular cases cited in Commissioner Miller's report are:

Several calls from the office of Thomas J. Bowler, clerk of the Criminal court, to Cambridge, Ill., where his summer home is.

On the private wire of Probate Judge J. F. O'Connell, 101 calls to Crystal Lake, 4 to New York, and 2 to Springfield.

From the office of Emmett Whealan and Fred W. Brummel, members of the board of tax appeals, 88 calls to Lac du Flambeau.

From Sherif John Toman's office, 209 calls to St. Joseph, Mich., where he spends the summer.

On the Criminal court switchboard, 30 calls to Springfield, 20 to Wauconda, 50 to other summer resorts, one to Boston for $16.75, and one to New York for $12.50.

Several calls from the office of President Clayton F. Smith of the county board to Lawton, Mich., where live relatives of his secretary, Mary Alberg.

Ball Is Held by Union to Honor Stage Veterans

A testimonial ball was held last night at the Performers Club of America, 645 North Clark street, in honor of Thomas Rategan, 80 years old, 6238 Vernon avenue, and Frank Bishop, 75 years old, who have been members of the Theatrical Mutual Association of Chicago, Lodge No. 4 of the stage hands' union, for 51 years. They were given gold life membership cards in the union. Rategan was head stage carpenter at the Cort theater for 45 years.

MONKEYS GET NEW TOY

An 18 inch aluminum ball, added to the gymnasium equipment of the monkey house at the Lincoln park zoo, provided great sport for the inmates yesterday. They used it for a pushball game and later as a mode of transportation.

Family of 7 Frolics

Floyd S. Young, director of the Lincoln park zoo, said yesterday that the pig-tailed monkey family—the parents and five little monkeys—housed in the small animal house, are having much fun with the gift of an 18 inch aluminum ball recently added to their gymnasium equipment. H. B. Harris of the Harris Trust and Savings bank presented the new plaything to the monkey family.

Mary Pickford Takes Post with Youth Branch of PWA

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Mary Pickford has accepted a post on the county advisory board of the National Youth administration, a branch of the PWA. But she laughed today when asked if she was ambitious for a political career. She accepted the position at the request of Judge Ben Lindsey.

POLICE FIRE ROUTS THIEVES.

Park Policeman William Sullivan routed three colored youths with bullets early yesterday when they attempted to steal a truck and trailer loaded with oysters at 43d street and Michigan avenue.

How PLUTO WATER Relieves

CONSTIPATION LIVER AND GALL BLADDER TROUBLES

Amazing Double-Action the Secret

1. Safely, Surely Relieves Constipation, in One Hour or Less!
2. Stimulates Gall Bladder and Liver to Normal, "Free-Flowing" Action!

Constipation, liver and gall bladder troubles often come together. Millions suffer them daily—yet don't know why. Often, physicians say, it is not only because you're constipated, but also because biliary drainage from liver and gall bladder is not normal.

Hence, ordinary laxatives that act only on bowels to temporarily relieve constipation still leave you feeling terrible. Pluto Water, however (with its amazing double action), relieves all these troubles at the same time.

First, Pluto gives you a sure, gentle flush in an hour or less. Second, it stimulates gall bladder and liver to normal, "free-flowing" action. So relief is quick—and thorough! You feel amazingly better in an hour. Soon feel normal again! That's why, for years over 50,000 doctors have used or recommended Pluto Water. That's why your own doctor, too, will tell you there is nothing better.

DO AS DOCTORS DO

Dr. E. L. S. of Ohio says: "I have found the use of Pluto in gall bladder cases to have remarkable results." So do as doctors do next time you feel dull and listless from constipation, liver or gall bladder troubles. Take Pluto Water in the tasteless, non-habit-forming dose —1/5 Pluto, 4/5 glass hot water. Cleanse your system of health-destroying poisons this sure way. You'll be amazed at the difference it makes!

Two hundred million bottles of Pluto have been used—millions more each year. One of the safest, surest, most economical laxatives you can buy. Comes in 2 sizes—25c and 50c—at all drug stores. A beneficial, saline mineral water from famous French Lick Springs, Indiana.

AUTOMOBILE LOANS

on New or Used Cars

We have made loans to the owners of the following makes of cars:

AUBURN
CHRYSLER
DODGE
GRAHAM
HUDSON
HUPMOBILE
NASH
OLDSMOBILE PACKARD
PIERCE ARROW
PLYMOUTH
PONTIAC
STUDEBAKER
TERRAPLANE

We will keep on making loans to the owners of the same makes of cars and to the owners or buyers of other makes as they may come to us for loans. The gist of rates and terms are boiled down in our folder "Automobile Loans" which is reprinted below. Of course we limit our lending on automobiles to residents of Chicago and nearby Suburbs.

Automobile Loans

Rates and Terms Effective December 1, 1935

The rates charged and the terms extended are exactly the same on loans secured by used cars as they are on loans secured by new cars. And it makes no difference whether a loan is made to finance the purchase of a new car or a used one—to refinance an existing balance on a car—or whether it is made for some other reason.

The rates and terms are shown in the adjoining table. The charges include everything except insurance. And this is the way we handle the insurance:

All we ask is that a car be covered by Fire and Theft insurance—nothing more. If a car owner has a Fire and Theft policy in force it may be assigned to us. If a car owner or a car buyer has no Fire and Theft insurance he may order it from any accredited agency and the premium may be added to the transaction with us without any additional finance charge.

If a car owner or car buyer desires other types of insurance for his own protection—collision, property damage, and the like—and wishes to pay for it on time, he may place such insurance wherever he pleases, and the premiums may be considered as "balance to be financed."

Whenever insurance premiums are included in the note with us we remit to the dealer or the insurance broker as the case may be, and the customer in turn pays us in regular installments over the period for which the transaction is set up.

In handling automobile loans we are liberal in appraisals. We do not ask for the endorsement of dealers—"no recourse" as spoken of in the trade—nor do we require comakers or other security.

Whether loans originate through automobile dealers or are referred by insurance brokers or whether car buyer-owners come to us direct we are equipped to give prompt and intelligent attention to all of them.

Our Automobile Loan Department is under the direction of Mr. Julius J. Krumeich. The department is open daily from 9 until 5, except Saturday, when the hours are from 9 until 1. The phone number is Franklin 5700.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS • DEALERS • INSURANCE AGENTS

This bank is not ordinarily thought of as a place to make automobile loans, for we are not an automobile finance company. But, as a bank, we make loans, and we now accept automobiles—new or used—as collateral security. The rates and terms as set up in our folder "Automobile Loans" should be something of interest to car owners, automobile dealers, and insurance agents, when loans are wanted—loans for the purchase of a new car or a used one, loans to refinance the balance on a car which is not all paid for, or loans for any other reason for which a car owner wants to borrow money.

We make all kinds of personal loans at low cost and on liberal terms—on collateral, on character, and on automobiles—and of course we lend for the repair, alteration, and improvement of real estate under the National Housing Act, Title I. We have already made 500,000 loans for a total of $121,000,000.00.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

History only twelve months old repeated itself yesterday at Soldiers' field as Lindblom's young high school warriors defeated Leo's champions, 6 to 0—the same score by which the City league winners had set down the Catholic league's best last November. It was history enacted before a throng of more than 70,000, the largest ever to witness a high school football game, and written by a gridiron author who proved himself worthy of the task—Capt. Ted Hennis of Lindblom.

It was fitting that Hennis should score the one touchdown of the day, for in the 1934 battle for Chicago's Own Christmas benefit it was this same 170 pound back who had placed the ball in scoring position with a thirty-five yard dash to the 6 yard line, where a penalty and a one yard plunge by Tony Juska brought the solitary score of the day.

Hennis Breaks Away.

That occurred in the second quarter, even as it did yesterday, but this time Hennis saw to it that no plunges or penalties were necessary to complete the touchdown. He attended to this by taking the ball from scrimmage on his own 47 yard line, breaking through his own left tackle, and then streaking down the field alone for the goal line, with nary a Leo tackler near him after he had crossed the 25 yard line.

Neither the yelling throng of students and their elders nor Mayor E. J. Kelly, sponsor of the benefit game, proceeds of which will be used to buy new clothing and shoes for the city's poor children, will deny Hennis the personal glory of the day. He did not content himself with that one touchdown dash. In the middle of the third quarter he appeared bent on still another, dropping tacklers right and left as he scampered from his own 8 yard line to the Leo 25 yard mark, a sprint of sixty-seven yards, before Tom Gallagher, Leo's left tackle, brought him down with a desperate tackle which undoubtedly averted a second Lindblom score.

He Keeps Pounding Away.

Hennis did not halt there. He kept hammering at the Leo line, and at the opening of the final quarter just missed making a first down on Leo's 2 yard line, where the Catholic leaguers took the ball on downs. Hennis can pay high tribute to a line in which no substitutions were made all afternoon, and to Walter Kapka, punter, whose accurate kicks kept Leo in its own territory most of the day.

Leo's heroes, aside from Gallagher, Tom Brennan, and Capt. Ken Murphy in the line, would be Hal Bowen, its triple threat back, who shone even though he was marked as Hennis, and a slippery back named Larry Clark, who kept the Catholic leaguers in the game until the finish.

Capt. Murphy of Leo won the toss. George Murphy, Lindblom's colored left guard, kicked off short to Bunny Veeneman, Leo right guard, on Leo's 35 yard line. Leo failed to gain and Hennis returned Bowen's fourth down, punted eight yards to his 28 yard line.

A lateral, Hennis to Goldberg, was the only threat the city leaguers made and they were forced to punt to Bowen on his own 35 yard line. On the first play Bowen swept around right end for seven yards. Hell picked up two yards and then he fumbled after having made a certain first down in midfield, Hennis recovering for Lindblom.

Nye and Goldberg failed to make it first down and Nye finally kicked to Leo's 32 yard line. Bowen attempted another sprint around right end, but Vitkus smashed through and threw him for a ten yard loss. Bowen then punted short to Hennis on Leo's 40 yard line.

Pass Goes Awry.

A second down pass, Hennis to Vitkus, brought the ball to Leo's 25 yard line, but Scahill intercepted another attempt on his own 24 yard line.

Bowen picked up a yard at tackle, but Scahill was halted. Bowen punted on third down to Kapka, who had re-

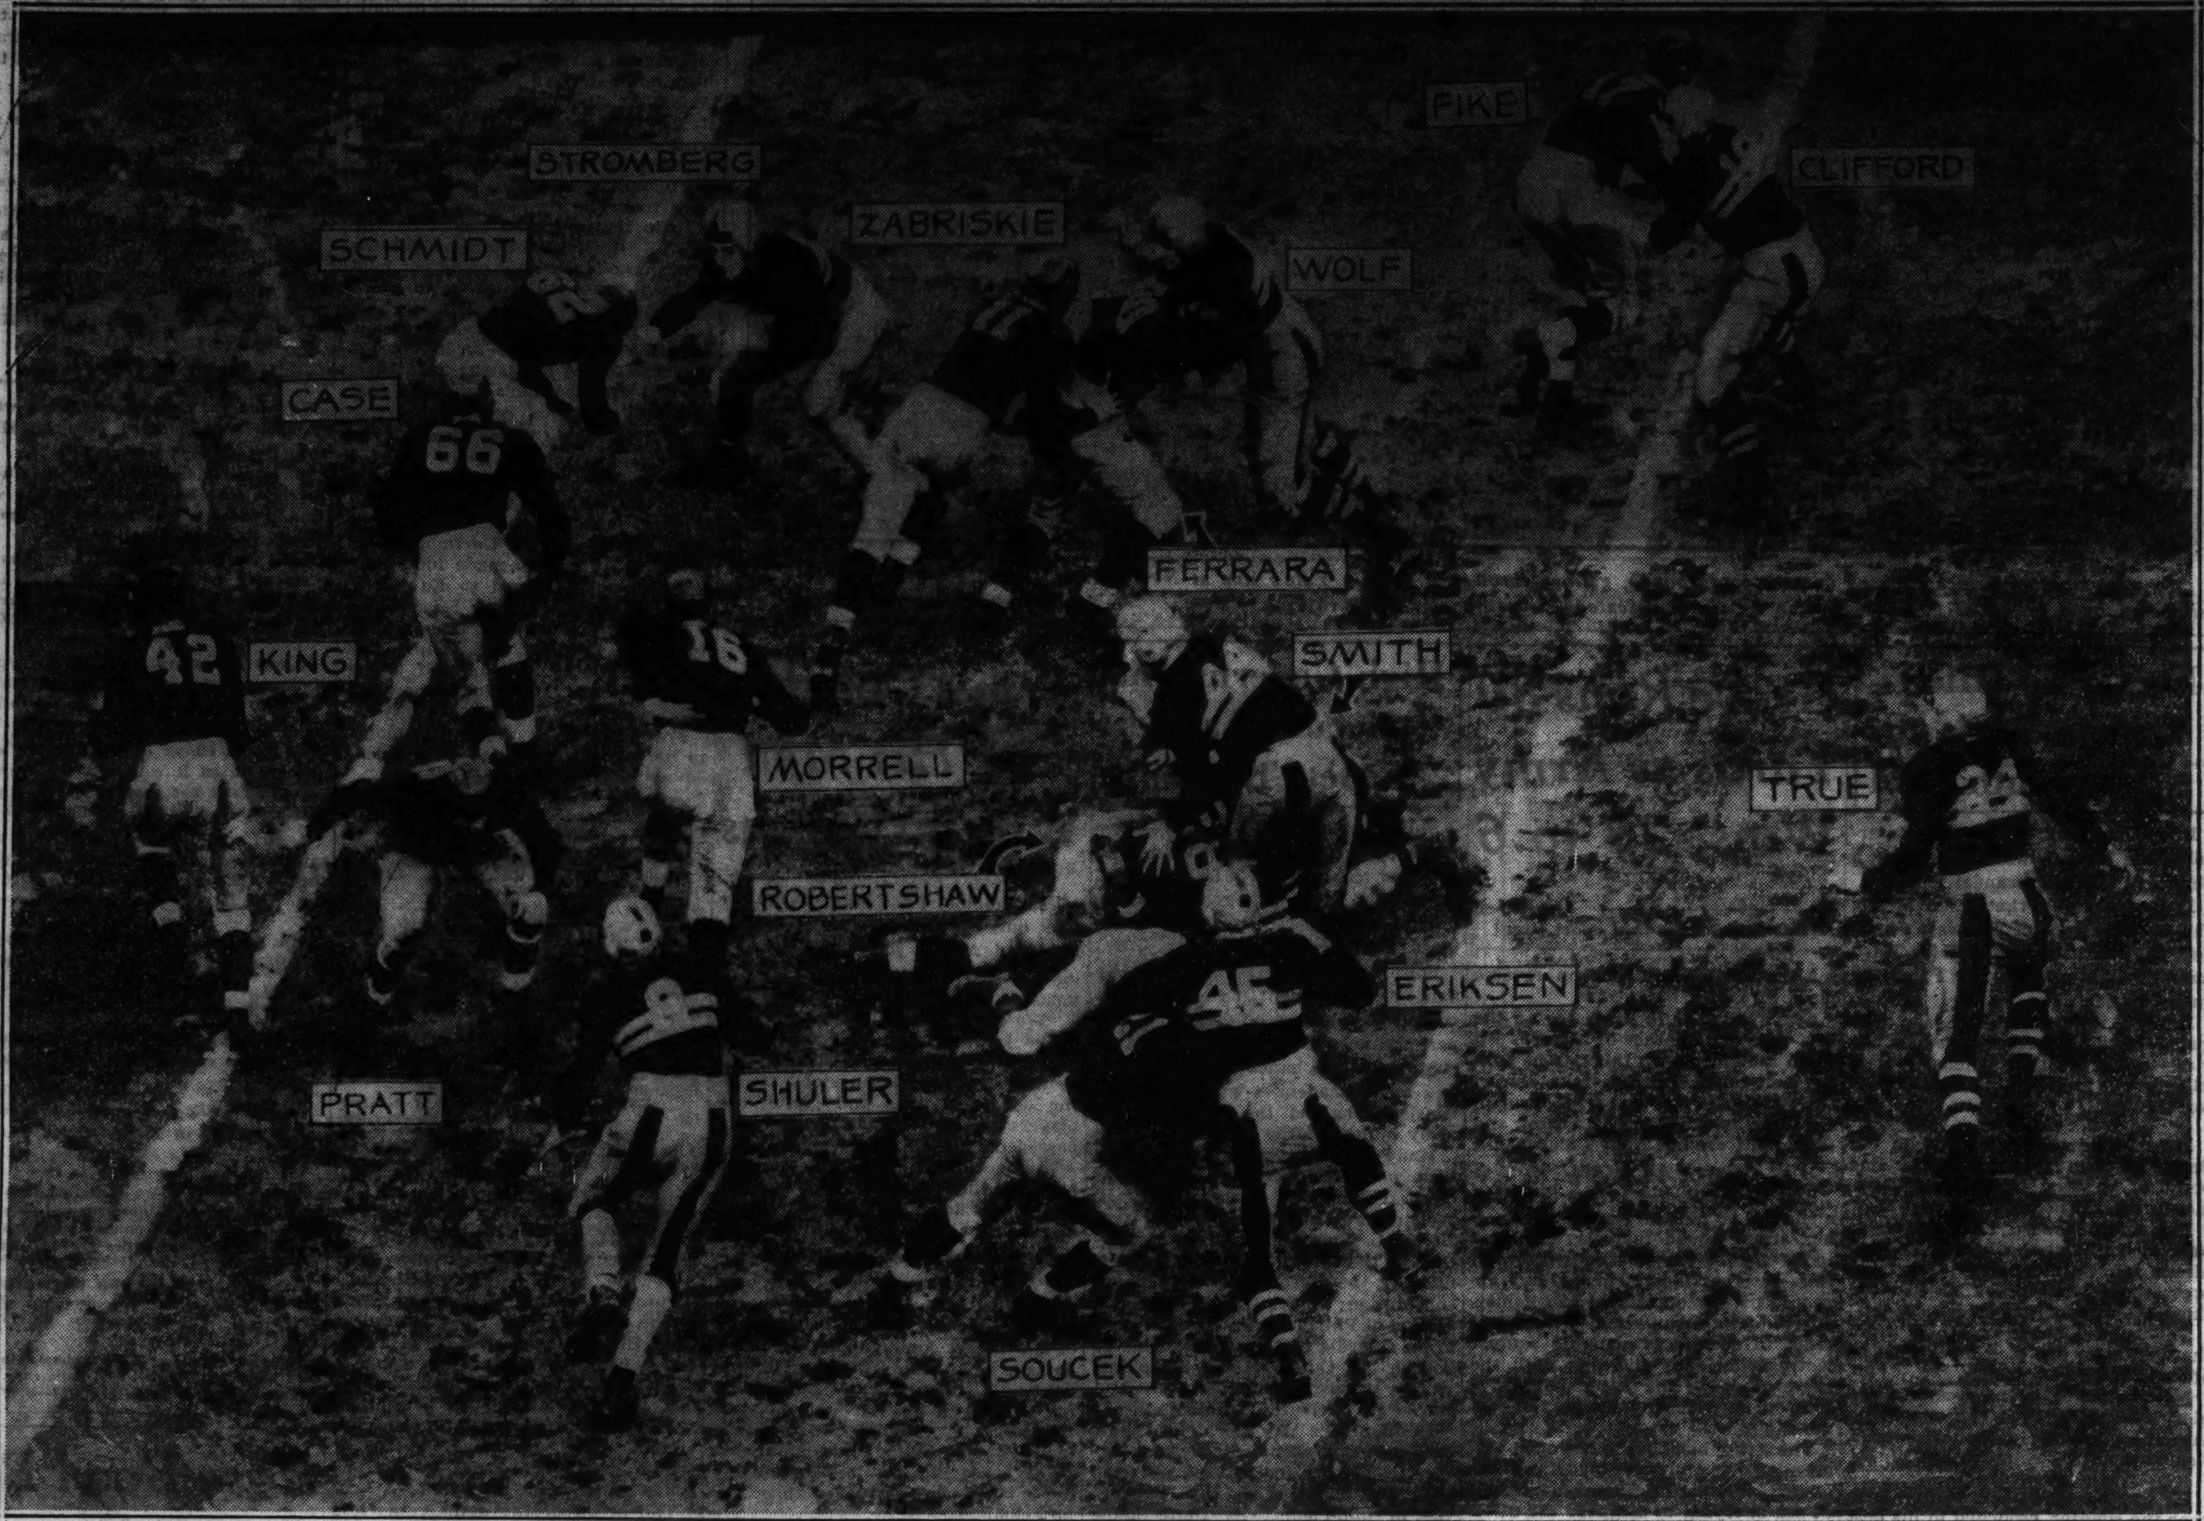
CHEER FOR THE CADETS! THEY'RE THE TEAM



Army and Navy players spring into action, fighting viciously even though the score is one-sided in the closing minutes of their annual battle yesterday before a crowd of 79,000 at Franklin field, Philadelphia. King of Navy is carrying the ball. Army, scoring all its points in the first half, won the game, 28 to 6. Early in the contest Whitey Grove of the Cadets raced 80 yards for the first touchdown.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Army's football forces, with a brilliant display of power, deception and passing skill, piled up four touchdowns in the first eighteen minutes of play today to defeat the Navy, 28 to 6. It was the most decisive victory recorded in the service football series since 1903.

Edward [Whitey] Grove of Glenwood, Minn., wound up his career with a scoring procession nothing short of sensational and Charles [Monk] Meyer of Fort Sheridan, Ill., turned in another of his masterful backfield performances to lead the gold-helmeted cadets from West Point. Yet despite its discouraging start the game Navy squad came back to tear the Army line to pieces in the second half, and scored a touchdown while keeping the Cadets attack in check.

Grove Runs 80 Yards.

The great throng of 79,000 that filled double decked Franklin field stadium had hardly settled itself in blankets and furs when Grove was streaking 80 yards down the soft playing surface for a touchdown. He got loose on a reverse play around Navy's left end that took the Middies off guard and off their feet as the Army blockers mowed down the secondary in devastating fashion. The Midshipmen had no more than regained their composure after the shock of that superbly executed play when the amazingly deadly throwing arm of Meyer turned the proceedings into a rout.

Twice Meyer's right arm drew back to speed the ball through the air. The first time it found a receiver in Army's inspired wing-back, Grove. The second time it was Full Back Tarzan True who completed the connection. Both passes went for tremendous gains and touchdowns.

34 Yards, Then 43.

The first one was good for 34 yards, Grove catching the ball in the clear beyond the safety man and streaking across to end a march of 56 yards. The next time the gain was even greater. Taking a short flat pass from Meyer out to the right, True caught the ball three yards past the line of scrimmage and raced 40 yards more to outsprint Thomas along the side line.

On every one of the three touchdowns Grove and True had crossed the goal line without a hand being laid on them, so inadequate was Navy's defense and so great was the speed of the Army backs. After each of these scores, Grove added the extra point with a place kick, as he was to come through for the fourth successive time later. Preceding each of the two passes Grove helped to

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—One of the greatest teams that ever wore the Orange and Black of Princeton closed its undefeated season here today with a 38 to 7 victory over Yale in the 59th game of their series. Princeton flashed one of the most imposing exhibitions of balanced, skilled power that any college gridiron has seen, while Yale, despite the score, made a gallant stand and lashed back to score in the final period when Larry Kelley grabbed a touchdown pass.

It was the highest score Princeton has ever rolled up on Yale, breaking the mark of 27 to 2 set two years ago. It failed to reach Yale's record for the series—51 to 14—but it was a most convincing victory. It was the Tigers' ninth straight triumph. They have scored 256 points to their opponents' 32.

Score Is 10 to 0 At Half.

The Tiger total included five touchdowns and a placement goal from the field. The scoring all came in the second and fourth periods, as the strength of Yale waned in the face of the terrific power of Princeton. The half time score was 10 to 0.

Jack White and Pepper Constable each made two of the Princeton touchdowns and the fifth was scored by Ken Sandbach, who also kicked five points after touchdown and contributed the first score of the game with a 15 yard field goal. Jack Wright added the extra point for goal after Kelley's touchdown.

It was impossible to single out individuals for praise on the Tiger team. Garry Levan and the other seniors playing their last game rose to real heights. For Yale, Jerry Roscoe played perhaps his best game of the season. Kelley and Bob Train were fine ends again, but here, also the entire list of players gave everything they had in a fine exhibition.

Fans On Field Before Finish.

A crowd of 60,000 roared with excitement at the wide open game which included laterals, forwards, fumbles and about everything a football game might have. Part of this crowd marred the finish when they refused to wait for the end of the game before attacking the goal posts. With Yale fighting down in one corner to stand off a Princeton score, the crowd cleaned out the goal posts at the other end of the field, finally, when Sandbach went over for the last Tiger touchdown, the fans swarmed at the other posts. Bill Crowell and the others officials dived into the mob and fought them away from the posts. A few police helped and the posts were protected until the extra point had been scored.

On this, the ball went into the crowd and the entire Princeton team had to go after it. Finally Russell captured it and brought it back and for the remaining minutes, the game was played on a field bare of posts and cluttered with aimlessly wandering spectators.

The first score of the game came in the second quarter when Ken Sandbach dropped back to Yale's 15 yard line, after Princeton had failed to score from the 4 yard line, and place kicked a field goal for the first three points.

Lateral to White Scores.

Princeton went over for its first touchdown shortly before the end of the half on a fine bit of deception. Pepper Constable took the ball and bucked at the line, but stopped short, faked handing it to two men and then flipped a lateral to Jack White, who ran wide around end from the 8 yard line for the score.

Neither team scored in the third

Crippled Cards and Bears Battle to Stay in Race Today

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

The Cardinals and the Bears, Chicago representatives in the National Professional Football league, crippled and desperate in their quest for the western division championship, renew their 15 year old rivalry today at 2 o'clock at Wrigley field.

It will be the 30th meeting between the teams and the title hopes of both depend upon the outcome. Each has a mathematical chance of winning the crown in this series, which will be concluded next Sunday. The Cardinals are tied for the lead with Detroit and the Bears are in fourth place, a game and a half behind. Victory will keep the Cardinals in the heat of the race, while defeat will definitly eliminate the Bears from any further consideration this season.

Key Men Out with Injuries.

Key men on both teams will be missing today because of injuries. The Cardinals will be without the services of their two quarter backs, Phil Sarboe and Paul Pardonner, both of whom have severe shoulder injuries. The Bears, who were unable to stem the fleet Detroit eleven Thursday because of the absence of Beattie Feathers, star half back; Bill Karr, the team's outstanding end, and Art Buss, regular left tackle, will be further handicapped today by injury to Gene Ronzani, half back, and Jack Manders, full back.

Manders and Ronzani were banged up at Detroit Thursday. The other players were hurt against Detroit last Sunday, when the teams played to a 20 to 20 tie. Physicians were unable to tell yesterday which of the casualties would be allowed to play, but Feathers, Karr, and Buss were de-

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Southern Methodist, unbeaten and untied, dealt Texas Christian its first defeat today in one of the best football spectacles the southwest has seen. The score was 20 to 14.

A game replete with tremendous passes, lively runs, and unexpected shifts of fortune reached its climax midway in the fourth quarter when Bob Finley, maneuvering far behind the line of scrimmage, sent a long pass into the extended hands of little Bobby Wilson. Moving at top speed, Wilson grabbed the ball at the Texas Christian seven yard line, dashed past three tacklers, and reached the goal with Southern Methodist's winning touchdown.

The play was made on fourth down with four yards to go and the ball on T. C. U.'s 37 yard line. It broke a 14 to 14 tie.

S. M. U. Gets Early Lead.

Through an afternoon of warm sunshine the crowd of 36,000 watched the unexpected happen repeatedly. They were amazed at the outset when two splendidly sustained marches, one of 73 yards and another of 80 yards, gave Southern Methodist a 14 to 0 lead by the middle of the second period. Even the Mustangs' most optimistic followers had scarcely expected a parade such as this.

But the remarkable passing of quarter, but with the opening of the final fifteen minutes the Princeton attack really began to function. Constable, on the first play drove over center from the 2 yard line for a touchdown to start things off. The next Princeton score came with stunning speed. White intercepted a Yale pass at midfield and came almost to the Yale 15 yard line before he was pulled down. Three plays later Princeton had another score with Constable again going over from the 2 yard mark.

Yale Scores on Pass.

Then came Yale's touchdown. Then Elis took the kickoff and made two successive first downs to the Princeton 37 yard line. Hessberg slammed around right end and was almost alone when Weller caught him on the 21. A line play was piled up and one forward pass went for nothing. Then Roscoe faded back almost to midfield. He let go with a long pass and Kelley dashed into the end zone, pursued by two Tigers. Somehow he got away from them. Roscoe's pass sailed almost 60 yards and Kelley jumped to grab it just inside the sidelines for the score.

The aroused Princeton team came marching back from the kickoff to another score. Starting on their 30 yard line, the Tigers continued until White cut back through right tackle for two yards and a touchdown. A tackle around play, on which Ritter carried the ball, figured for two long gains in this march.

Tigers Get a Gift.

The last Princeton score was a gift from the Elis, for they gave the ball away on downs on their 10 yard line, trying to complete a pass rather than kicking. Princeton tried passes to no effect as the crowd ripped down one goal post and finally Sandbach slid around left end for a touchdown. Then came the fight with the crowd and the extra point.

L. S. U. Whips Tulane, 41-0; Students Fight

New Orleans, La., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A free for all fight among several thousand students on the playing field climaxed the 41 to 0 victory of the Louisiana State Tigers over Tulane today before 34,000.

The fight started over possession of the goal posts, which had been electrically wired by Tulane students to thwart seizure by their enemies, but the Tigers tore away the wires, taking the shocks, and carried away the posts. The battle ended with black eyes and bruised jaws while the police stood by and let the boys have their fun.

L. S. U. Wins Title.

Today's victory made L. S. U. undisputed champion of the Southeastern conference and placed them on the eligible list for either California's Rose Bowl or Louisiana's Sugar Bowl games. It was the first time since 1908 that L. S. U. has dominated southern football.

The Tigers were complete masters of the Green Wave after the first five minutes of the game. In the third quarter with the score 27 to 0, Tulane visibly wilted, being content to direct their efforts at holding down the score.

Tulane Passes Fail.

The game ended with Tulane making desperate passing efforts but the Tigers kept pounding until the score reached 41 to 0, the largest L. S. U. ever has run up against Tulane since inauguration of the annual game in 1893.

New Hero (Hic!) Claims Rush to Dartmouth's Aid

New York, Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—Intercollegiate football was shocked by a new earth shaking scandal today.

It was charged that Mike Mesco, the hash slinger of Rahway, N. J., was not the hero that became Dartmouth's 12th man in the Princeton game a week ago.

Instead, it was said, the man who gave his all to rush—clothed in civvies—to Dartmouth's defense was a 26 year old architect, George Comerford Larsen.

Larsen said he dashed out on the field and into the Dartmouth line because "I was excited and Dartmouth needed help."

Dartmouth needed help, all right, but the 12th man, whether he was Mesco, Larsen, or another, didn't impress the officials or either team or the spectators as the correct antidote.

The helpful one was booted from the field after one play or as soon as officials could get to him.

Mesco had basked a week in the glory of having been the one to go into the game to, in his own words, "show them Princeton sissies."

He was photographed dealing hash over the counter, crouched in his best football pose and most every other way. His press clippings ran to the thousands.

Even as his rival claimant appeared today Mesco was aboard a special train to Yale, the guest of the university's comic magazine. Confronted with the new claim, Mesco asked for another glass of beer and admitted Larsen might be right.

"You see," he explained, "I'm not sure. My clothes were all messed up and I'd been a bit high. My friends told me I was the guy and I believed them. I don't like Princeton and I might have done anything. I'd had a few drinks, you know."

Larsen said that motion pictures showed conclusively that it was himself and not Mesco who was the enthusiastic spectator-player of the Dartmouth-Princeton contest.

"Anybody who saw me will remember the horsehide coat I wore into the game," he explained. "It had a lot of names printed on it in big black letters. My own nickname, 'Guzzie,' was one of them.

"I don't want to take the credit away from Mesco but he must have dreamed he was out there. I saw Dartmouth taking it on the chin and I always feel sorry for an underdog."

Officials of the game disagreed with both Mesco and Larsen.

"The dope who ran in," one of them said, "was some punk of a college kid who'd been slapped on the nose with a bar rag."

Mesco's attendance at New Haven today was as futile as the 12th player's entrance on Dartmouth's side last Saturday. Yale lost 38 to 7. Larsen's attendance at the Columbia-Dartmouth game didn't do Dartmouth any good, either. Columbia won 13 to 7.

ARMY PLAYERS CREDIT VICTORY TO AILING COACH

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Army's football squad was giving a lot of credit tonight to Line Coach Moe Daly for the victory over Navy—even though Daly wasn't within a hundred miles of Franklin field.

He was stricken with appendicitis last Tuesday while changing Army's line defense and was taken to a hospital at West Point.

Grove Runs 80 Yards as Army Wins, 28 to 6

set the stage with runs on reverse plays.

Grove's run of 15 yards set up the first pass and another of 24 yards led up to the second. On this trip he took the ball on a beautiful fake behind the back of Meyer, who went through the motions of getting off a punt, and then went around Navy's short side.

Navy's All At Sea.

The crowd looked on in bewilderment and so did the Navy players. A big, strong squad that was conceded to be far better stocked with high class reserves than Army's, Navy appeared utterly outclassed and demoralized. The Army line, which had risen to such great heights against Notre Dame, was charging with the same overpowering speed and drive to open up wide avenues for the runners.

The Army blocking in the open was cleaning out the Navy ends and secondary, and the midshipmen were all at sea in trying to diagnose the direction and nature of the cadet attack.

It looked at this stage as though Army was to bury Navy under the biggest score in the history of the series. As it turned out, the final figure of 28 to 6 was second only to the 40 to 5 verdict gained by Army in 1903.

Army Drives 44 Yards.

With the scoreboard showing 21 to 0 at the end of the opening period, Army started on a drive from Navy's 44 yard mark at the outset of the second quarter. Meyer picked up most of the ground with his end runs and beautiful cutbacks and a short pass to Kopsack, and with the ball on the 2 yard mark, Quarter Back Bill Grohs plunged through Navy's left guard to score.

Grove then dropped back to boot the ball over from placement for his fourth extra point and his sixteenth point of the game, and that ended Army's scoring for the day, with almost three-quarters of the game left to play. Before the half ended Craig came on the field to replace Meyer and to lead an advance that carried 52 yards to Navy's 12 yard mark and which was checkmated when Fellows intercepted Craig's pass.

Navy Appears Out of It.

No one in the Cadet cheering section felt the slightest bit downcast about that setback. Navy's plight looked so hopeless that doubtless many Army followers were just as well satisfied that the Middies were not humiliated further by an additional score. The Middies had not been able to make the slightest impression on the attack, Stromberg's smashing end play ruining them when they had the ball on Army's 31 yard line after a 15 yard penalty against the Cadets.

The nearest the Middies were able to get to Army's goal line in the half was the 29 yard mark, where Necrason intercepted Pratt's pass in the first quarter and where Navy was halted again in the second period after a 44 yard run back of a kickoff by Sneed Schmidt and a 19 yard pass to King by the same Schmidt, who was Navy's hero of the day.

With their running attack bottled up, their passes squelched by the pressure of Army's surging line, and their defense porous as a sieve as they concentrated on Meyer and neglected to watch Grove, the men from Annapolis didn't seem to belong on the same field with Army.

Look Out Now, Cadets!

Then, starting with the second half, came one of the most remarkable transformations witnessed on a gridiron this year or in any year. Led by the powerful running Schmidt from St. Joseph, Mo., Navy took command of the game and tore up and down the field and threatened time after time to score.

Only once out of the many times that the Middies were within striking distance did they reach the promised land, Schmidt scoring on the first play of the final quarter at the end of a 60 yard advance manufactured largely by himself.

Outrushed by a margin of approximately 200 yards in the first half and outgained by a margin of 4 yards to 1 through the air, Navy came back so furiously as to pile up 13 first downs to Army's 2 in the second half. The complete statistics follow:

	Army.	Navy.
First downs	11	17
Yards gained rushing	248	191
Forward passes attempted	9	20
Forward passes completed	3	6
Forward passes intercepted by	3	1
Yards by passing	86	86
Laterals attempted	0	3
Laterals completed	0	3
Yards by laterals	0	17
Punting average	38	42
Opponents' fumbles recovered	2	1
Yards lost by penalty	55	30

High Government Officials Watch Cadets Triumph

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Rules of reason were declared null and void today by the 79,000 notables, gentlemen of arms, and ordinary football devotees who saw the army blast the Navy, 28 to 6.

Poise and dignity surrendered the field to excitement as the crowd roared its pleasure or despair at the performances of the players. Stirring rhythms of the bands of the military and naval academies whipped up enthusiasm, as did the antics of the army mule and the navy goat.

Many high in government station were on hand, including Postmaster General James A. Farley, Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war; Henry L. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy; Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation; Mayor-Elect S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia; Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York; Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Harry Hopkins, works progress administrator, and Gov. Paul McNutt of Indiana.

Neither Secretary Dern nor Secretary Swanson attended. Dern, a former Nebraska football star, heard the result on board the U. S. S. Chester in mid-Pacific, en route home after attending the opening of the new Philippine government. Swanson was in Washington.

Mrs. Swanson occupied a box and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the war time President, was a guest.

"Good luck, but within reason," was the word given Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, superintendent of the naval academy, by Maj. Gen. W. D. Connor, superintendent of the military academy, as the two exchanged greetings before the game.

Maj. Gen. Connor and Maj. Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staf, were team mates for West Point at the turn of the century.

Col. Frank Knox of Chicago, mentioned for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination, got tickets at the last minute and dashed up for the game.

Three blue jackets appeared in the Army cheering section just as Eddie Grove made his second touchdown for West Point. "There goes my cab fare," said one of the sailors as the trio withdrew.

A set of goal posts went down after the final whistle—to townsmen, not West Pointers.

Steve Early, White House press chief, sat on the army side, as befits a relative of the late Jubal Early, Confederate general. Col. Edwin M. Watson, aide to President Roosevelt, was with Early.

PRO? COACHING? NO OFFERS, SAYS JAY BERWANGER

Dubuque, Ia., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Jay Berwanger of Dubuque, University of Chicago football star, denied rumors today that he will coach at Princeton or play with a Chicago professional football team.

Berwanger, home on Thanksgiving vacation, said:

"No one's asked me to coach and the National Professional league prohibits pro teams soliciting football players in school, so the rumors are groundless."

Army Coach Says His Men Won on Breaks

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 30.—(AP)—It took only four words for Lieut. Gar Davidson, Army's young coach, to explain the Cadets' victory over Navy today:

"We got the breaks," he said.

The joyous cries of the happy soldiers rang out through the dressing room door as Davidson stood receiving congratulations and giving the players a pat on the shoulders as they passed out to join their companies.

"We got ours quickly and ran up a lead that the Navy, with its fresh men wearing us down, couldn't overcome," Davidson said.

Early Lead Does It.

"We realized we could not cope with the Midshipmen in reserve strength, and it was just a question of how far we could go and how much damage we could do with our limited personnel. The Navy began pounding over us in the last half and, particularly after Clifford and Ericksen, men whom I couldn't adequately replace, were injured, but fortunately our early scoring carried us through," he explained.

"I think we were mighty lucky to win, and I want to say that the score does not do justice to that great Navy team.

In the Navy quarters the battered Midshipmen took their showers and dressed in relative quiet. Over in a corner Lieut. Tom Hamilton, whose first Navy team beat the Cadets a year ago, told friends: "You've got to take the lickings along with the triumphs, but win or lose, this bunch of boys has more nerve and fight than any I've ever had."

Coach Is Puzzled.

"I can't figure the game out yet," he said. "My team went great in that last half—and but for some bad breaks would have made a great game of it. I couldn't understand what was wrong in the early portion. Maybe they were so tense they were frozen."

Elmer Layden, whose Notre Dame team beat Navy and tied Army, paid his respects to both coaches.

"Your boys were cutting them down like scythes in that first half. Grove played a brilliant game," he told Davidson.

COCONUT BOWL PREP GAME IN MIAMI PLANNED

Miami, Fla., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Football promoters here are considering sponsorship of a regular post-season high school attraction to go along with the Pasadena Rose bowl, the New Orleans Sugar bowl, and the proposed Miami Orange bowl games. If it pans out, the Coconut bowl will be the name. Christmas day would be the annual date, and a Miami team and some strong rival from the east or middle west the contestants.

Intersectional Christmas games are not new in this city. Since 1929, when Miami High defeated Salem, Mass., 7-6, an out of state high school has played here every Dec. 25.

Requests to be matched for this year's game have been received from nearly fifty out of state high schools. The chosen team will play the winner of the Dec. 14 game between this city's two schools, Miami High and Edison High.

Teams being considered include: Ypsilanti, Mich.; Waite High, Toledo, O.; Bradford, Pa.; Decatur and Champaign, Ill.; Ashland, Ky.; Wheeling, W. Va.; McKinley High, Canton, O.; Marblewood High, St. Louis, Mo.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Martin's Ferry, W. Va.; Cheltenham Boys' High, West and North Caholic, all of Philadelphia; Hyde Park, Kelvyn Park, Schurz and Crane of Chicago, and New Trier of Winnetka, Ill.

Mexico City, N. M., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Westmoorland college of San Antonio, Tex., today defeated the University of Mexico football team, 31-7.

COLUMBIA WHIPS DARTMOUTH IN UPSET, 13 TO 7

Vollmer's 63 Yard Dash Wins in First Quarter.

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Columbia's football team closed a mediocre season today with a 13 to 7 victory over the heavy Dartmouth eleven. Twenty thousand saw what was regarded as an upset.

A run of sixty-three yards for a touchdown by Joe Vollmer, substitute half back for Columbia, gave the Lions their margin of victory. Vollmer's dash came in the final quarter, when the teams were tied at 7-all.

Vollmer Goes to Work.

Columbia managed to make a first down on its 37 yard line and Vollmer, taking a direct pass from center, started around his right end and crossed into Dartmouth's zone.

There he was surrounded by the Dartmouth secondaries, but Nick Pistolas took two men out and left the path to the goal clear except for the safety. The latter, Kiernan, got his hands on one arm, but could not hold Vollmer, who pulled away to score standing up.

The lone Dartmouth tally came near the start of the second period and was scored by Nairne, who gathered in Chamberlain's ten yard pass over the goal line.

Barabas Crosses Goal.

Shortly after the game started Chamberlain punted only twenty yards and Columbia got under way. A forward pass, Barabas to Ed Furey, brought the ball to Dartmouth's 25 yard line. Hudasky made four, then Barabas again passed to Ed Furey, who was stopped on the 5 yard line.

Hudasky made a yard, Bonom made two, and Barabas one. On fourth down Barabas threw himself across the line to score. He added the extra point.

Forward passes aided Dartmouth to its touchdown, which climaxed an advance of forty-eight yards.

HOLY CROSS WINS, 20-6

Newton, Mass., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Catching Boston college off guard in the opening period the Crusaders from Holy Cross scored three touchdowns before the Eagles were able to catch their breath, and defeated the Maroon and Gold eleven at Alumni field this afternoon, 20 to 6, in the annual game between the Jesuit rivals. The crowd of 21,000 was a record attendance for the game.

The break of the game came less than a minute after the opening whistle. Alec Pszenny kicked off for Boston college and Bartolomeo ran back to his 30 yard line. On the first play Nick Morris cut through tackle, raced to the right side of the Boston college secondary, and galloped 70 yards down the field for the touchdown. Rex Kidd missed the kick for the extra point. The play completely took the Eagles off their feet and before they were able to recover their equilibrium Holy Cross had registered another touchdown.

Scarcely three minutes after Morris' run, Mautner intercepted a Boston college pass on his own 40 yard line and sped to the Eagles' 25 yard line before he was brought down, Boston college held for two plays but on third down Morris tossed a long pass to Rex Kidd for the touchdown.

Holy Cross got a break late in this same first period when O'Donnell partially blocked Dinatale's punt on the Boston college goal line and Hip Moncewicz recovered for the Crusaders on the Boston college 10 yard line. Two plays later Red Daughters on an end around play galloped around the Eagles' right end for 10 yards and the third Holy Cross touchdown without a Boston college man touching him. Lingua this time place kicked the extra point.

W. MARYLAND WINS, 14-10.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Western Maryland college, slow to start, took to the air today to cut down an early Georgetown lead and hand the Hoyas a decisive 14 to 10 defeat. About 4,000 fans saw the game.

LeRoy Campbell, Western Maryland half back, rifled the two passes that accounted for touchdowns.

Georgetown started early in the first period, when Duff booted a field goal from Western Maryland's 20 yard line. Only minutes later, Nolan passed to Gibeau who ran 30 yards for a touchdown, Duff adding the extra point.

But the Hoyas' scoring punch was gone. After a punting duel in the second Western Maryland drove to the Georgetown's 21 yard line and Campbell passed to Adriance over the goal. Bennan kicked the extra point.

In the third period Georgetown drove to the Western Maryland 35 yard line but fumbled. A few minutes later Campbell passed to Lassahn from the Georgetown 25 yard line for the final score.

Plunge Home Takes $5,000 Stake at Bay Meadows

San Mateo, Cal., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Plunge Home won the $5,000 added California Homebred stakes at Bay Meadows today. Calaveras was second and Skipton third. The time for the six furlongs was 1:12 3-5. The longest price of the meeting was registered in the first race when El Cheevito, ridden by Apprentice Eugene Stalling, finished first in the mile and a furlong to pay $195, $56.40 and $17.60.

Rose Bowl Bid for Unbeaten Eastern Team

Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 30.—(AP)—An undefeated team will be invited by Stanford for the Rose Bowl game here New Year's day, Alfred Masters, Stanford graduate manager, said tonight.

"All I can say now is that an undefeated team will be invited to play in the Rose Bowl," Masters emphasized. "I will announce the team when I return Tuesday from Palo Alto."

While western fans were clamoring for Southern Methodist as a result of its victory over Texas Christian at Fort Worth today, a letter from Princeton indicated the unbeaten Tigers might listen to an invitation. The only other major undefeated team in Minnesota, forbidden a postseason game by Big Ten rules.

The Princeton letter was from Burnham N. Dell, chairman of the council on athletics, to H. C. Willett, chairman of the Pacific coast conference.

"Princeton alumni and undergraduates have been greatly disturbed," it said, "by the manner in which a recent editorial of the Daily Princetonian, the undergraduate paper, has misrepresented the attitude of the university toward the annual Rose Bowl football game.

"The viewpoint of the editorial is not that of the athletic authorities of Princeton, and I am writing to make this clear to you."

Mack Refuses to Deny or Confirm Foxx Rumor

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Rumor was revived today that Jimmy Foxx, Athletics slugger, has been sold to the Boston Red Sox, and again confirmation was lacking. Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, said "I have denied it so often I will neither confirm nor deny it now. Everybody is taking a hand at selling my players. It's a great game, but I have stopped being amused at it."

BLACKHAWKS AND CANADIENS OPEN SERIES TONIGHT

Montreal Invades Stadium with New Players.

With several new names on its roster, a new owner and a new manager, the Montreal Canadiens make their first 1935-'36 appearance against the Blackhawks at the Stadium tonight.

Not since Lionel Conacher piloted the New York Americans a few years back, in the capacity of playing manager, has the National league had managers who tried to do double duty.

This year there are two. The veteran defense player, Sylvio Mantha, was named by the new owners of the Montreal Canadiens as the new leader of the team. Red Dutton of the New York Americans, is the other new playing-pilot.

Seeks to Retsore Prominence.

A glance this season at Canadien's roster would lead one to believe that Ernest Savard, their new owner, who last summer bought control of the club from the Cattaranich-Dandurand interests, and who sits in final judgment over the destinies of the Montreal baseball club, is out to restore the Habitants, as they are called in Montreal, to their former peak of popularity with French players predominating.

Three times under the guidance of Dandurand and Cattaranich, the Canadiens won the Stanley cup.

With the collaboration of Manager Mantha and a check book, Boss Savard has made quite a few changes on the team. Aside from the new defense playing-pilot, an entirely new Canadien defense will face the Blackhawks tonight. It includes Jean Pusie and Walter Buswell, who came by way of Boston and Detroit, and Art Lesieur, one time member of the Providence, R. I., team, the Canadien's farm.

Wilf Cude Is in Nets.

In front of the nets, the Canadiens have the acrobatic Wilf Cude. The positions which call for attack have also been strengthened, although through early season hard luck, three regulars will hardly see duty in tonight's contest.

Before the season started, the Canadiens lost the services of their brilliant rookie, Nels Crutchfield, who sustained a fractured skull in an automobile crash. He may be lost to the game for all time.

In an exhibition game against the Boston Bruins, prior to the opening of the season, Irvine Frew, who was acquired when the St. Louis Eagles player allotment was made, had his collar bone broken in a crash with Eddie Shore. Pit Lepine, veteran hook-check center, had a thumb cracked. Goalie Wilf Cude will be operating with two broken ribs.

Two of the craftiest forwards in the league, Aurel Joliat and Wildore Larochelle, are working on a line on either side of the Quebec rookie, Paul Runge, who is substituting for Lepine. Joliat, winner of the most valuable player award, is starting his fourteenth season in the big league.

Mantha Improves Under Brother.

Another line consists of Paul Haynes, a former Montreal Maroon; Johnny Gagnon, and Jack McGill. A third combine shows Georges Mantha, a much improved forward under his brother's management; Armand Mondou, and Leroy Goldsworthy. Lolo Couture, long a member of the Blackhawks, is the spare forward.

The Canadiens were the only team strong enough to take last season's series from the world champion Montreal Maroons. In their only meeting this season, the Canadiens won.

Should the Bruins vanquish the Rangers in their battle at Boston tonight, the Blackhawks can regain the United States division leadership, which they lost to the Rangers Thursday when they defeated the Canadiens. A half game separates the Rangers and the Hawks.

Johnny Gottselig, with his injured knee in a splint, is still in the hospital and will not be available for hockey duty tonight. Tonight's lineup:

BLACKHAWKS.		CANADIENS.
Karakas	G	Cude
Levinsky	D	S. Mantha
Wiebe	D	Pusie
Morenz	C	Runge
March	R. W.	Larochelle
Ouellette	L. W.	Joliat

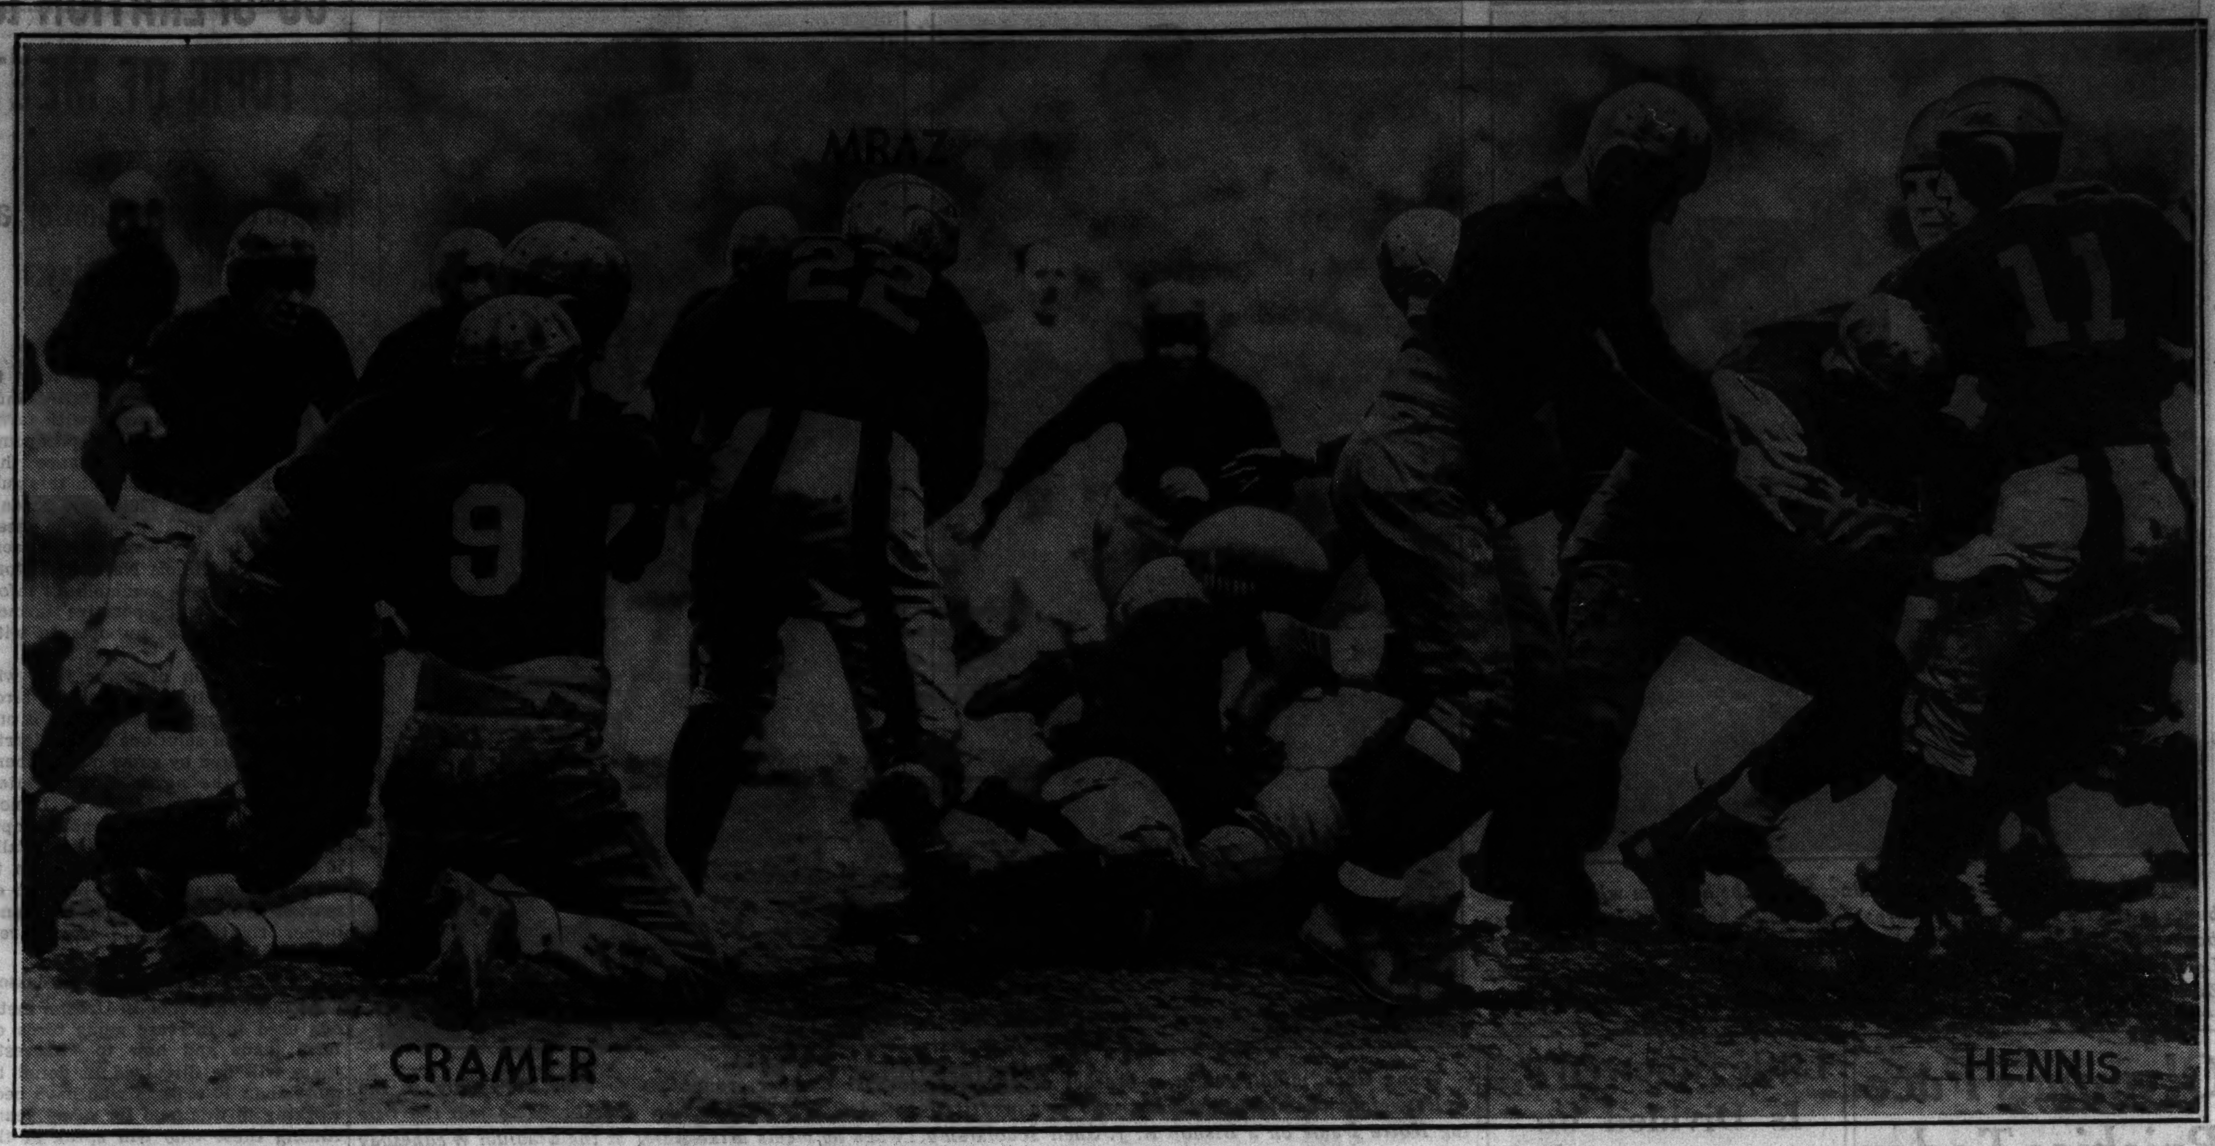
LINDBLOM AGAIN BEATS LEO TO RETAIN CITY PREP TITLE



Art Heil of Leo, on ground, lets the ball slip from his hands and a wild scramble starts in city high school championship football game at Soldiers' field. Capt. Ted Hennis of Lindblom, on right, finally gained possession of the ball. The play occurred in the first quarter. In the second quarter Hennis raced 53 yards for a touchdown, giving Lindblom a 6 to 0 victory, the same margin by which Lindblom defeated Leo last year. A crowd of 70,000 saw the game. LINDBLOM WINS OVER LEO, 6-0, BEFORE 70,000 placed Nye, and Kapka returned to his own 44 yard line. Hennis fumbled on the first play, but recovered for no gain. Two Leo linemen broke through to drop Kapka on his own 41 yard line as the quarter ended.

Hennis' 53 Yard Run Brings City Title.

On the first play of the second quarter, Kapka quick-kicked out of bounds on Leo's 28 yard line. Bowen and Heil got nine yards in three thrusts and Bowen punted to Kapka on Lindblom's 40 yard line.

Kapka lost five yards on an attempted lateral which went awry, and then punted to Mulcahy, the ball sailing over the latter's lead to the 14 yard line, where Lindblom downed it. Bowen faked a punt and tried to run his left end, but was halted with a gain of three yards. He punted on the next down, Lindblom taking the ball on Leo's 42 yard line.

Hennis Goes Rambling.

Goldberg and Hennis were halted at the line and a Hennis pass went amiss. Kapka made a neatly placed short kick, which went out of bounds on Leo's 14 yard line. The Lindblom line proved obdurate, and Bowen booted one over Kapka's head, the latter scooping it up and bringing it back to his own 47 yard line. Brennan, Leo end, was injured on the play, but stayed in the game.

Hennis then burst through his own left tackle, and after a short brush with the Leo secondary, broke into the clear, dashing toward the left corner of the field for a touchdown. His attempted placement, with Kapka holding, was low and partly blocked.

George Murphy kicked off to Clark, who had replaced Scahill. Heil then tossed a pass to Gallagher for 20 yards, the latter running to the Lindblom 30 yard line. Vitkus then intercepted another pass by Heil and the scoring threat was ended when Kapka got away a long, rolling punt for a touchdown.

Fumble Bobs Up.

A pass was grounded, but another, Mulcahy to Heil was good for a first down on Leo's 32 yard line. A third aerial attempt was intercepted by Ray Smith on Leo's 45 yard line. A faulty pass from center was fumbled by Kapka, but he recovered in mid-field. Mulcahy returned Kapka's punt to his own 30 yard line, after which he was replaced by Mackie.

Bowen made five yards through his right guard, and then tossed a pass to Gunkle, who sprinted to Lindblom's 35 yard line where he was forced out of bounds. Another pass was grounded as the half ended.

Murphy kicked off to Heil, who returned to his own 27 yard line. Clark spun through center and went 23 yards to midfield. Clark was called on for the next two plays, and Bowen then punted to Lindblom's 17 yard line, where it was downed.

Quick Kick Fools 'Em.

Wehrmeister picked up five yards in two thrusts, and Kapka kicked to Mulcahy who returned to Lindblom's 41 yard line. Clark and Heil then made it a first down on the city leaguer's 30 yard line, but Clark was stopped on a line play, and Bowen's pass was grounded. Brennan, Leo end, then came back to hurl another pass, and that too, found no receiver, Lindblom taking the ball on downs on its own 28 yard line.

Kapka quick kicked to Leo's 38 yard line. Leo was offside on the play, but Lindblom declined the penalty. Clark made it first down with two smashes at tackle. Bowen got a yard, and Clark was stopped for a yard gain at his left end. Clark then punted out of bounds on the eight yard line.

Hennis then broke away on punt formation and dashed 67 yards before Gallagher, Leo left tackle, brought him down on Leo's 25 yard line. The Leo line restrained the City league champions and Lindblom was penalized five yards for offside. Kapka then kicked out on Leo's four yard line.

Lindblom Threatens Again.

Bowen punted out to Kapka, who fumbled. Hennis recovered for Lindblom on Leo's 26 yard line. Hennis then smashed at the line for five yards, and on the next play broke off his left tackle to Leo's eight yard line, where Bowen stopped him. The Leo line threw Kapka for a loss, and Lindblom was offside on the next play, after attempting a forward-lateral. It was third down and 15 yards to go as the quarter ended.

Hennis made a great try to make up the necessary yardage at the outset of the fourth quarter, plowing through to the Leo two yard line, but it wasn't quite enough, and Leo took possession. Bowen kicked out to Kapka, who fumbled on his 20 yard line, Gallagher recovering for Leo.

Clark cut back for a four yard gain, and on the next play, he passed to Brennan on his own 35 yard line. Another Clark pass to Bowen was intercepted by Wehrmeister at the line of scrimmage.

Wehrmeister picked up five yards, but that was lost on the next play on an offside penalty. Hennis couldn't make this up, so Kapka punted out of bounds on Leo's 16 yard line.

A pass, Clark to Gunkle, failed to produce any yardage, and still another was intercepted by George Murphy, Lindblom guard, on the 19 yard line. Hennis picked up three at left guard, and after getting another three, fumbled, but recovered it himself. Hennis then attempted a place kick from the 24 yard line, but it sailed wide of the right upright and Leo took the ball on its own 20 yard line.

A pass was wide, and a lateral, Heil to Bowen, connected, but failed to gain. Another try, Bowen to Clark, on fourth down, also clicked, but not for enough yardage, and it was Lindblom's ball on the Leo 28 yard mark. Then the drive bogged down.

Mississippi Upsets State Rivals, 14 to 6

University, Miss., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The fleet footed backs of the University of Mississippi today broke through the Mississippi state line that had lowered the colors of the Army and Alabama, and Mississippi won, 14 to 6. An estimated 15,000 looked on.

After Mississippi State had narrowly missed tieing the score in the final period with a well earned touchdown, Ray Hapes dashed 81 yards through a broken field to give Mississippi another touchdown.

Mississippi Scores Early.

Ole Miss scored a touchdown in the first five minutes of play. Ray Hapes ripped off gains of 15 and 17 yards and on two powerful thrusts from the 6 yard line C. Hapes plunged over for the touchdown. Bill Richardson kicked the extra point.

In the fourth period Armstrong, Mississippi State's star passer, tossed one from near midfield to Walters on the Ole Miss 18 yard line. Ike Pickle slashed off a first down to the 8 yard line. Armstrong added five more and Steadman plunged over for the touchdown. The try for point failed.

Receiving the Mississippi State kickoff on his own 19 yard line, Hapes cut through center, eluded two would-be tacklers at the thirty yard line and outran two State backs to score. Richardson again added the extra point. The lineup:

GEORGIA TECH, 19; GEORGIA, 7.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 30.—(AP)—After six lean seasons, Georgia Tech thundered to a 19 to 7 victory today over its neighboring enemy, the Georgia Bulldogs.

Grant field stadium was filled with close to 32,000 fans, the largest gathering for a football game here since Tech crushed Georgia, 20 to 6, in 1928 and went on to defeat California in the Rose Bowl.

Georgia drove 80 yards for a touchdown in the first period and Georgia Tech replied by traveling 79 yards for a touchdown in the second period. Tech made a further drive of 54 yards to Georgia's goal in the third and scored in the closing quarter from the 29 yard line after recovering a Bulldog fumble.

AUBURN, 27; FLORIDA, 6.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 30.—Auburn's mighty football team, alert to capitalize every break, cracked across four touchdowns this afternoon to defeat the Florida 'Gators, 27 to 6, before 8,000 fans.

A 31 yard first half drive, two touchdown passes, and an intercepted Florida toss, together with Paterson's three place kicks for extra point, gave Auburn its 27 points.

Florida's touchdown came as the result of its one sustained march in the second period for 55 yards. A six yard scoring pass climaxed it.

FIVE NEBRASKA GAMES NEAR 1934 TOTAL FOR SIX

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 30.—(AP)—University of Nebraska's five home football games drew a total attendance of 131,073 this year, compared with 142,298 at six home games in 1934, John K. Selleck, business manager of athletics, announced today.

The grand total attendance for games played at home and away was 193,933 this year, compared with 201,319 in 1934.

Selleck said the average home attendance this year was 26,214, and 23,716 in 1934. There were two big home games last year, Pittsburgh and Iowa, and only one, Minnesota, this year.

World Champs Urge Sending Team to Berlin

Two American athletes, Percy Beard and Ben Eastman, both world record holders, have endorsed American participation in the Olympic games, it was announced yesterday by Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee. Both are veterans of Olympic competition.

Beard, holder of the world record for the 120 yard and 110 meter high hurdles, wrote:

"I have virtually decided to retire from competition, but I want to express my hearty approval of the decision of the American Olympic committee to send a team to Berlin.

"Withdrawal Unjustifiable."

"Not to do so would be a bitter and unjustifiable blow to the hopes and ambitions of our athletes. After all, the games are for them."

Eastman, holder of world records for the 440, 600, and 880 yard runs and the 500 and 800 meter runs, said:

"The time has come for people to realize what the Olympic games really are. The question of Germany's political actions should not play a part in the matter.

"If more people could only realize the benefits that participation holds for the contestants, there would be less talk against our going to Berlin.

Hopes to Compete.

"The meeting of the many athletes from all over the world and their really getting acquainted with each other as well as the good sportsmanship always found at the Olympic games are the important things.

"It would be unfair of any one to deny these benefits to the United States competitors merely because of the belief that America's entry will bear political pressure.

"I hope to be in shape to try out for qualification for the United States team."

The Pelican Wins Easily in Fair Grounds Feature

New Orleans, La., Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—The Pelican, 5 year old Haste gelding, carried the silks of E. Sigman to an easy victory in the featured Baton Rouge handicap at Fair Grounds today. Taking the lead soon after the start, W. Lang got The Pelican home first over the six furlongs course in 1:12 3-5 on a fast track.

NOTRE DAME WHIPS ALBION IN OPENER, 62-26

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Notre Dame opened its basketball season tonight with a 62 to 26 victory over Albion.

Coach George Keogan used four complete teams in chalking up the largest score Notre Dame has made in several years. The Albion team had been out for practice less than a week.

Fifteen of the twenty men Keogan put into the game scored, with high point honors for the Irish going to John Moir, sophomore forward who made nine points. Russ Kroeze, Albion center, took scoring honors for the evening with 11 points, making four on push-in shots after his mates had missed field goals.

Ray Meyer, who teamed with Moir at forward made eight points. Score:

Baylor Upsets Rice, 8 to 0, Before 9,000

Houston, Tex., Nov. 30.—(AP)—An erratic line that tightened at the right time enabled Baylor to upset Rice, 8 to 0, here today before 9,000 fans.

The victory enabled Baylor to finish in a tie with Rice for third place in the Southwest conference.

A lightning-like rush in the second period gave Baylor its touchdown. It took a punt on Rice's 43 yard line. A pass from Russell to Mansker put the ball on the 20 yard line. A fumble lost seven yards, but Gernand threw a short pass to Quarter Back Lloyd Russell on the 6 yard line. Bob Masters then went over.

A safety came on the last play of the game. Russell set Rice back almost to its goal with a long, high punt. With the ball on the 6 yard line Rice called for a play from spread formation and Ray Smith fumbled the pass from center behind the goal. He recovered, but was unable to run it out. Lineups:

DIES 20 DAYS AFTER INJURY IN FOOTBALL GAME

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—John Manginella, 21 years old, died today in a Paterson hospital of a skull fracture which he is believed to have received in a football game on Nov. 10.

Manginella, a silk worker, played half back with the Dublin Merchants, a semi-professional team, and in the game in which he was one of the star performers was kicked in the head. Although he complained of headaches occasionally, he went about his affairs. Last night while attending a motion picture show he complained of dizziness. He was assisted out of the theater by friends and collapsed in the lobby.

JANE ADAIR IS NAMED ON U. S. RESERVE TEAM

Cleveland, O., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Philadelphians, playing on the southeast team, won seven of the eleven places on the All-United States women's national field hocky team announced tonight.

Anne Townsend of Philadelphia was named for the 13th time. Barbara Strebeigh of Philadelphia, who has been on the first team five times, was named on the reserve team this year.

The selections were announced at the close of the annual tournament, in which the southeast team defeated northeast, 7 to 2, to finish a round robin schedule unbeaten.

Elizabeth Toulmin of Philadelphia, named to the All-United States team, and Jane Adair of North Shore, Ill., who was placed at left full back on the reserve team, were the only newcomers to the ranking position. Miss Adair was the only western named.

The All-United States team and reserves will meet tomorrow in a game closing the tournament. The first team:

Elizabeth Toulmin, Phila. [S. E.]	Left wing

U. C. L. A. DEFEATS IDAHO, 13 TO 6; TIES FOR TITLE

Murphy Throws Deciding Pass to Schroeder.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The University of California at Los Angeles clinched a three-way tie for the Pacific Coast conference football championship by defeating the University of Idaho, 13 to 6, here today.

The game was hard fought throughout. Idaho scored in the closing moments on a 22 yard pass from Holmes to Devlin, the latter racing 20 yards to a touchdown. Earlier in the game an Idaho offensive thrust was stopped on the Bruin 8 yard line when Cheshire intercepted a pass.

An 18 yard pass, Murphy to Schroeder in the fourth quarter, furnished the Bruins with their margin of victory. Cheshire bucked over the first touchdown in the second period, culminating a 68 yard drive.

The victory was the fourth in conference competition for the Bruins this season and places them in a three-way tie with California and Stanford for the championship. It marked the first time in history that the Bruins have won a conference football title.

COUGARS TIE GAELS, 7-7.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—Outplayed for three listless quarters, Washington State staged a fighting last period comeback to tie St. Mary's, 7 to 7, before a crowd of 15,000 here today.

St. Mary's grabbed an early advantage with a second quarter touchdown and then overpowered the Cougars for another quarter only to fall before the fleet feet and deadly passing arm of Ed Goddard, Cougar quarter back.

It's O. K. Now Folks! Knox Coach Signs

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—Pete Reynolds today signed to coach the Knox college football team in 1936. As football coach, business man and budding psychologist, Reynolds this fall led Old Siwash to its first football victories since 1931.

Reynolds, a jaunty, trim, square-jawed man of 50 years, fixed his name to the contract as officials and trustees of the century old college stood by. The only sound heard above the gentle scratching of the pen was an occasional nervous cough from a trustee who feared their superman might change his mind.

Plaque Carries Season's Record.

After Albert Britt, president of the college, and the others had wrung his hand a dozen times the man who had succeeded where so many had failed, returned to Chicago to resume his more prosaic business of selling dairy supplies.

When Reynolds signed to coach at Knox this fall he inherited a football team that had lost twenty-seven consecutive games and was on the threshold of a world's record for defeats. Despite the fact that three coaches had preceded him in as many years, Reynolds gamely stuck to his agreement.

Reynolds' Turn to Laugh.

Today it was his turn to laugh. His team won five games, tied two, and lost two. One of the losses was by a point, the other by a touchdown. Also to Reynolds' credit was the major tactical victory he scored three weeks before the season opened. By the application of a little finesse and considerable psychology he scheduled Principia college to play a practice game against the harassed Siwash eleven. Since Principia had a student body of only 100 men Knox broke the losing streak. Flushed with victory the Knox players then went on to win most of their other games, and if they were no better than the teams that preceded them they never found it out.

C. Y. O. FINALISTS REACH PEAK FOR TITLE BATTLES

20,000 Expected to See Finals Wednesday.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The top of the hill is in sight for thirty-two boys who will appear in one of amateur boxing's biggest shows—the fifth annual Catholic Youth Organization tournament—at the Chicago Stadium on Wednesday night.

What lies beyond will be determined in the sixteen championship battles which will be waged that night. Eight champions will be crowned in class A division and eight in the class B division before a crowd of at least 20,000. Most of the tickets for the finals have already been sold.

The winners and runners-up in each division will receive, as a reward for their work during the months of preparation a Bishop B. J. Sheil scholarship at any Catholic university or preparatory school they may select. The eight class A champions will be further rewarded with a trip to either the east coast or the west coast, where they will represent Chicago in an intersectional amateur match.

Spirited Bouts Promised.

The bouts promise to be the most interesting and the most spirited ever offered at a Catholic Youth Organization tournament. This became evident soon after this year's preliminary bouts were under way in which more boxing skill was displayed than ever before and competition was definitly keener in every division.

Even the heavyweights have furnished plenty of fireworks this year, and the fans who have followed the tournament activity from the time the preliminaries started expect the heavyweight championship bout between Al Camber and Mike Adler to be one of the great features of the final matches.

It's Melting Pot of Fighters.

The thirty-two lads who have survived the long journey which has taken them into the final bouts are a typical exhibit of the vast melting pot of Catholic Youth Organization work. This big squad includes six Irish lads, five Italians, three Poles, four Germans, three colored boys, two Austrians, one Assyrian, a Chinese, a Mexican, an Ukranian, a Croatian, one Lithuanian, and one Greek.

They all are splendid physical types and showed that they were trained to the minute when they wound up one of their last stiff training sessions at the Catholic Youth gymnasium at 31 East Congress street yesterday afternoon.

Boys Will Rest Tuesday.

There will be two more of these rehersals, then the boys will take things easy on Tuesday. They will make weight on Wednesday afternoon and after that await the first tap of the bell.

Eight class B championship bouts will open the program, which starts at 8:30 o'clock. Then will come the eight class A battles which promise to be crammed with action from start to finish.

A total of 2,215 boys representing practically every parish in the Chicago archdiocese sought the sixteen championships which will be passed out this year. All except the surviving thirty-two have fallen by the wayside during the long series of preliminary, quarter-final, and semi-final matches.

BADGER QUINTET RALLIES TO WHIP ALUMNI, 18 TO 17

Madison, Wis., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—After taking its annual beating from the freshmen several days ago, the Wisconsin basketball squad came back tonight to register a double victory.

The varsity, led by Nick Demark and Gordon Fuller, scored in the last five seconds to turn back an alumni team, 18 to 17. The varsity reserves had it a bit easier in defeating Carroll college of Waukesha, 29 to 23.

A free throw by Fritz Wegner on Club Poser's personal broke a 17 to 17 tie in the first game to give the first stringers a victory after they had trailed most of the second half.

Ray Hamman, with three baskets and a free throw, was the big offensive cog for the alumni, which held the advantage to within a few minutes of the final gun when Fuller and Demark accounted for three points.

Howie Powell, Valparaiso, Ind., sophomore, led the reserves with 10 points, in addition to playing a great floor game. The Badgers officially will open the season Monday night when they meet De Pauw university of Greencastle, Ind., here. Lineup:

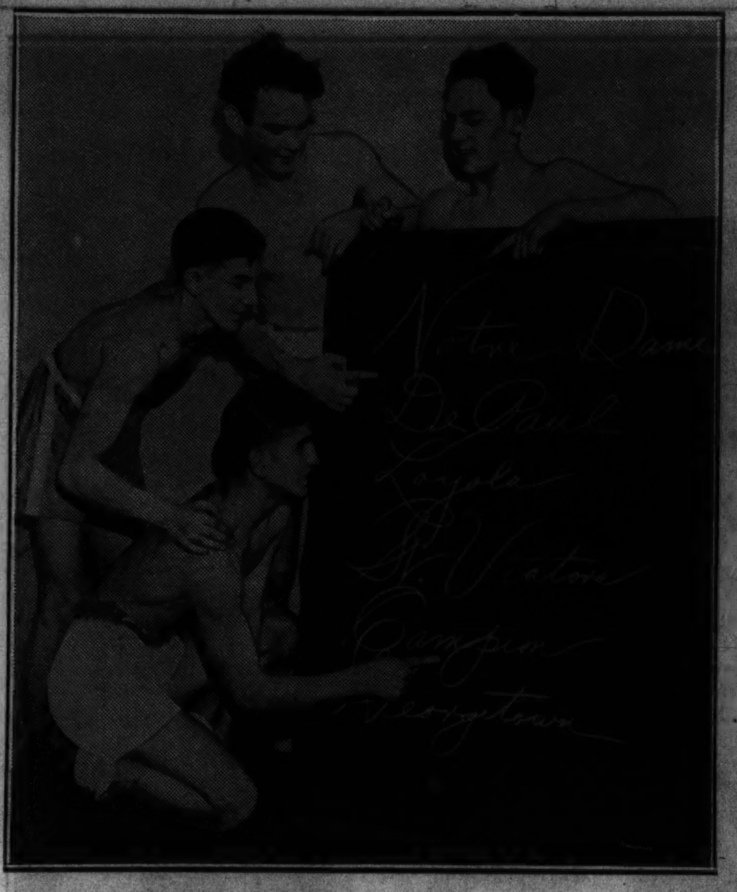
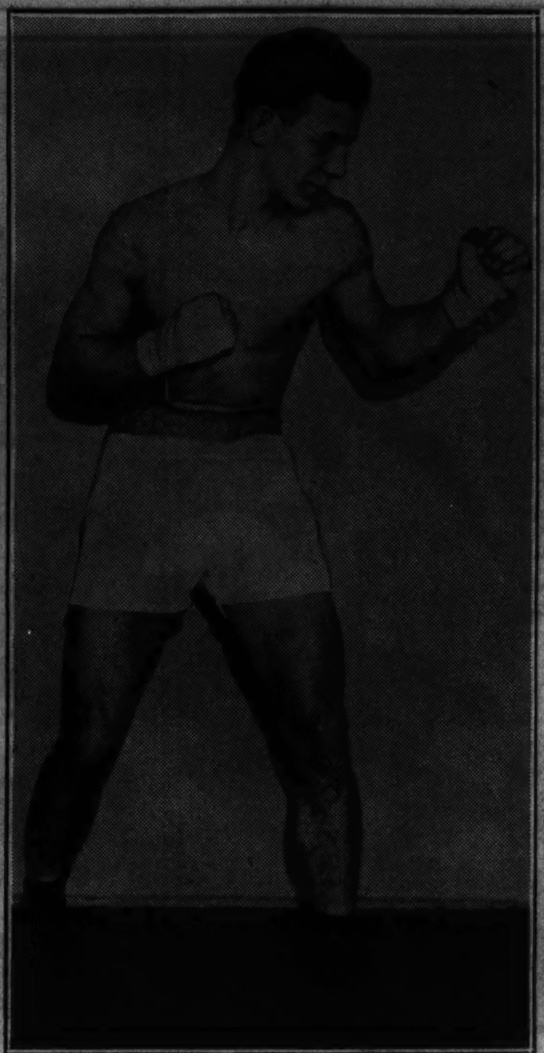
GLEN VIEW CLUB OPENS SHOOTING SEASON TODAY

The Glen View club, at Golf, Ill., will open its trap shooting season today with a fifty bird event for the Fred L. McNally trophy. Several changes have been made to provide better ranges for skeet shooters. Eighty thousand shots were fired on the range last year and with increased facilities, it is expected 100,000 shots will be fired this season. Traps will be open in the morning for practice. The trophy event will start at 11 o'clock.

READY FOR THE BELL IN C. Y. O. TITLE FIGHTS



If they can win their bouts Wednesday at the Stadium when the final bouts in the C. Y. O. boxing tournament will be held before 20,000, these boys intend to go to one of the universities listed on the blackboard. Left to right: Alex Maksymiec, Al Limback, Eddie Garvey and Sammy Zaczek.



Tony Gora, middleweight, a brother of Joe Gora, welterweight champion last year, who is now attending Notre Dame on a Bishop B. J. Sheil scholarship, hopes to duplicate his brother's feat by winning a title. He meets Florentino Arreguin.

Al Camber, runner-up to Tom Kenneally in the 1934 C. Y. O. finals, this year hopes to win the title when he meets Mike Adler at the Stadium Wednesday night. Camber defeated the New York C. B. O. champion at Wrigley field last July.

Olympias Face Brickies Today in Cup Soccer

BY OFFSIDE.

The Brickies and the Olympias, both of the Chicago Professional league, will meet today in the second round of the National Challenge cup. The Brickies, formerly the Hungarian-Americans, have greatly strengthened their team by the addition of Tattem, Coutts, Cross, and Hughie Cummings, a new player from the California Scots. The Olympias team, last year's amateur cup finalists, is composed of young players from the Morton High school champion group of last year. The youngsters have plenty of speed and stamina. The game will be played at the Olympia stadium, 19th and Kilpatrick avenue, starting at 2:15 o'clock.

The Macabees will play the Marovskas, who tied them in their last pro league game, in an exhibition contest at the Kuppenheimer stadium, 18h and Keeler avenue at 2 p. m. The Spartas will go to St. Louis to meet the Shamrocks, the former national Champion Stix, Baer, and Fullers eleven. The Spartas hope to improve over the Macabees' showing last year when they lost, 4 to 2.

The International league schedule includes several postponed games. Today's schedule:

INJURED PLAYER FAILS TO REGAIN CONSCIOUSNESS

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—Herbert Tades, star center of the University of Tennessee football team, remained in a serious condition here today as the result of a fractured skull received in the last quarter of the game Thursday with the University of Kentucky.

Tades remained unconscious and attending physicians reported the outlook was not any brighter than when the youth was brought to the hospital.

Capt. Toby Palmer, Assistant Coach James Barnhill, Peter Coblinz, a teammate, and the boy's parents were at his bedside.

MISSOURI VALLEY GROUP TO VOTE ON ST. LOUIS U.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The Missouri Valley Athletic conference will hold its annual fall meeting at Topeka, Kas., Dec. 7 and 8, Scott Rowley of Drake university, president of the conference faculty representatives, said today.

Rowley announced the conference will act upon St. Louis university's application for membership. The admission of St. Louis would increase the conference to eight schools.

The 1936 football schedules will be arranged at the meeting.

Little Nineteen Is Divided on Freshman Rule

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The Little 19 conference failed to agree over the freshman rule today.

At a preliminary meeting, faculty representatives of majority of schools appeared interested in the project despite the fact that their athletic directors objected.

The matter probably will be straightened out at the meeting in Chicago Friday and Saturday. Knox, Monmouth, Lake Forest, and Bradley have adopted the rule used in the Big Ten.

Now that Illinois college, Millikin, Augustana, Wheaton, and North Central are applying the rule to football and basketball, an effort is being made to make the freshman restriction universal in the group.

Simmons Gains 580 Yards Last Season; Averages 5.1

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—Oze Simmons, Iowa back, gained 580 yards from scrimmage during the 1935 season, official figures revealed tonight. He carried the ball 113 times for an average of 5.1 yards.

N.U. Pins Hope on Sophomores in Basketball

Northwestern's place in the forthcoming Big Ten basketball race will depend largely on the ability of a group of sophomores to fill in the positions on the squad left vacant by the loss of five lettermen from last year, three of whom were regulars. The Wildcats, who have been working out for the last month, will open their schedule against Carlton college of Northfield, Minn., at Patten gymnasium Dec. 6.

Last year's regulars who are lost to the squad are Al Kawal, guard; Lyle Fisher, forward, and Jess McAnnally, center. The latter is ineligible, but there is a chance of his becoming eligible for the second semester, although the conference race at that time will be approaching its close.

This year's quintet will be built around Capt. Duke Vance, 210 pound guard, who turned in a commendable performance as a sophomore last season, and Babe Bender, also a guard, who is a member of the football team. Both held regular guard positions last year as sophomores and will give the Wildcats a strong pair of back court defenders.

The other positions on the team are wide open at this stage of the race. Loss of McAnnally at center will necessitate the use of a sophomore at this position. The leading candidates at the present time are Jake Nagode, 6 foot 2 inch sophomore from Waukegan, and Jean Smith, 6 feet 1 inch first year man from Logansport, Ind. They will be supported by another sophomore, Glenn Evers, 6 feet 6 inches, of Mason City, Ia., who will report as soon as he recovers from a football injury.

A group of eight candidates, four of whom are sophomores, are making a bid for the two forward positions. Del Pendergrast and Tug Blume, two lettermen, will be hard put to beat out several of the more promising new men.

FARMER-HUNTER CO-OPERATION IS TOPIC OF MEET

Experts Are to Confer at Urbana Thursday.

BY BOB BECKER.

Sportsmen in Illinois who want to obtain better hunting on farm lands by learning how to work with farmers' groups to grow food-producing cover will have their chance this week when a conference on this subject will be held Thursday, Friday, and Saturday in Urbana. The meeting, called by Dr. Theodore H. Frison, chief of the Illinois Natural History Survey, will make available all information on how coöperative farmer-sportsman groups can operate with benefits to each.

Reconstruction of cover that will provide protection and food for birds and furred game on farm lands is one of the several solutions to the dearth of birds offered by game management experts of the north central states. It is a known fact that in Illinois the pheasant, quail, and rabbit population could be increased materially if there was more thought given to raising them as a farm product or market crop from which the landowner rightfully could expect revenue.

Harvest Methods Will Be Discussed.

At this conference in Urbana methods used to increase game birds on farm lands and how to "harvest" them will be discussed in detail by more than 40 experts who have been working in this field for many years. Among those who will speak at the conference are: Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the U. S. biological survey; Harley Jones Van Cleave, professor of zoölogy, University of Illinois; Ernest G. Holt, in charge of wild life conservation, U. S. soil conservation service, Washington, D. C., and Dr. R. E. Yeatter, game specialist of the Illinois natural history survey.

Dr. Yeatter, who will assist with game sections of the conference, has cited four incentives to the management of farm lands for game bird populations, which will be among the many topics slated for critical review by the scientists in meeting this week.

First greater protection of farmers' lands and other property will result by the formation of coöperative groups which agree to limit the numbers and types of hunters in their fields.

Costs Little to Provide Cover.

Protection of property will, with management practices, tend to increase upland game populations and the value of the farm as a hunting area. It may be enough to support the sale of hunting privileges, as is the case with some localities in the east.

Since out of the way places and generally waste areas of farm land are best suited to bird life, it costs the farmer little to provide the necessary brush piles and scattered grain patches which will support the coveys, and of course it is well known that many farmers feel repaid by the assurance that game exists on their property for their own sport or enjoyment.

Sportsmen, land owners, and others who wish to get further details on this meeting are advised to write Dr. Theodore H. Frison, chief of the natural history survey, Urbana, Ill.

167 False Teeth Sets Fail to Make Him Happy

Pomeroy, O., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Guy Carson never knew how sympathetic the world can be until he bet his false teeth on a football game and lost.

The undefeated Middleport High school team was leading Pomeroy, 7 to 0, at the half. "I'll bet Middleport wins by four touchdowns," remarked Carson, an ardent Middleport rooter, to no one in particular.

"How much will you bet?" a stranger inquired.

"I'll bet a barrel of beer," Carson replied, and just then his teeth fell out.

"Well, I'll just bet five dollars against those false teeth of yours," the stranger offered. They put the false teeth and the money in a sack, and had another person hold the sack.

Middleport won, 19 to 0, the unidentified stranger collected the bet and disappeared, before Carson could find him.

Carson ran an ad: "I have a huge toothsome turkey which I will gladly give to the fellow who has my teeth and I'll eat hot dogs if he'll only return them."

Several hours after the ad was published, Carson called the newspaper and declared, "Stop that ad! I've received 167 sets of false teeth and none of them fits. False teeth owners are worrying me to death."

IOWA QUINTET IS BEATEN BY MILLIKIN, 33-29

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Brilliant long shooting by Delmar Cox and Archie Van Ausdal gave the James Millikin university basketball team a 33 to 29 victory over the University of Iowa in the opening game of the season tonight.

Cox led the scoring column with 10 points, while Van Ausdal, who made all his shots from far back in the court, gathered nine.

Capt. John Barko of Iowa kept his team in the running with four baskets from around the foul line, but the Hawkeyes trailed the smoother working Millikin quintet after the first minute of play.

20,000 ATTEND OPENING SESSION OF HORSE SHOW

North Shore Entries Win Most Prizes.

BY FRENCH LANE.

A crowd of 20,000 looked on at the opening session of the international horse show in the International amphitheater last night and watched horses which had traveled down to the yards from along the north shore carry away the lion's share of the prizes.

Mrs. Howard H. Hurwith of Wilmette took possession of the first blue ribbon that was passed out when her five year old mare, Brilliant Miss, won the three gaited saddle horse event. A few minutes later Southworth Magnate, from Melville N. Rothschild's Nan Su farm at Highland Park, won the harness pony event.

Finally the folks from along the south shore had a chance to do some cheering when Edward Von Herman Jr. rode his own horse—no names for the horse were stipulated in this event—to victory in the saddle horse and pony riding class.

The Wasps polo team of Lieut. Don Rice, Capt. Romeo Mura, and Capt. Bill Everett put on a second period spurt to beat Olympia Fields, 10 to 7½. Lieut. Rice scored six goals.

The summaries follow:

STALLION, MARE, OR GELDING [15 hands 2 inches or over, to be shown at walk, trot, and canter]—Won by Golden Avalanche, ch. g., 15-3, 4 years, owned by Ren Top farm; Gold Standard, bay g., 15-2½, 4 years, owned by W. P. Rogovsky, second; Radio Rhythm, br. g., 15-3, 5 years, owned by H. Leslie Atlas, third; Ruth's Choice, bay g., 15-3, 5 years, owned by Miss Ruth Suekoff, fourth.

THREE GAITED SADDLE HORSES [stallions, mares, and geldings]—Won by Brilliant Miss, bl. m., 15-1, 5 years, owned by Mrs. Howard K. Hurwith; Sir King, ch. g., 15-1¾, 6 years, owned by Miss Elizabeth Crawford, second; Afternoon Tea, ch. m., 15, age unknown, owned by Miss Ruth Suekoff, third; Flossy, bay m., 15-1¾, 5 years, owned by Mills Brothers, fourth.

CLASS II, HARNESS PONY—Other than Shetland: Southworth Magnate, br. g., 13-½, 4 years, owned by Nan-Su farm, first; Braishfield Sonnet, ch. m., 13-3, 10 years, owned by Heyl Pony farm, second; Mitzie, bay m., 13-2½, 8 years, owned by Happy Way farm, third; Bold Venture, br. m., 13-2, 8 years, owned by Mrs. E. H. Oppenheimer, fourth.

SADDLE HORSE OR PONY [not necessarily property of rider], to be ridden by boy 12 years or under; must be son of amateur—Won by entry of Edward Von Herman Jr.; entry of Stewart Nichole, second; entry of James Tatman, third; entry of Bobby Kuhn, fourth.

STOCK YARDS HORSES [judging saddle horse most useful in stockyard work]—Won by Dixie Highland, rn. m., 15, 6 years, owned by Peter Spogis; Grand Rex, bay g., 15-1, 5 years, owned by Larry Loeb, second; Pal, bay g., 15, 5 years, owned by James Clark, third; Black Panther, bl. g., 15-3, 8 years, owned by Frank Tracy, fourth.

FIVE-GAITED SADDLE HORSES—Stallion, mare or gelding, any age. Won by The Sportsman, ch. g., 15-3, 7 years, owned by Red Top farm; Dickey Dnue, br. g., 15-3, 9 years, owned by Delaine farm, second; Luther B, br. g., 15-3, 4 years, owned by H. Leslie Atlas, third; Dahl's Dream, ch. m., 15-2½, 4 years, owned by Mrs. Howard K. Hurwith, fourth.

SADDLE HORSE OR PONY [to be ridden by girl over 12 years and not over 17 years; must be daughter of amateur]—Won by entry of C. B. Goes Jr., ridden by Miss Dorothy A. Goes; entry of Miss Nancy Miller, ridden by Miss Nancy Miller, second; entry of Miss Patsy Lawlor, ridden by Miss Patsy Lawler, third; entry of Miss Phyllis Ruth Thompson, ridden by Miss Phyllis Ruth Thompson, fourth.

Sammy Baugh canceled the possibility of the game developing into a rout. Taking advantage of a poor punt that went out of bounds on the S. M. U. 27 yard line, the Frogs rammed over a touchdown in the second period and held the Mustangs scoreless in the third. Three cleverly executed passes in the last quarter brought Texas Christian the tying touchdown and set the stage for a dramatic finish.

Even after S. M. U. had taken its 20 to 14 lead, the spectators were kept in a constant turmoil by Baugh's great passing. Just before the end the Frogs were storming after another touchdown. A pass put the ball on the S. M. U. 36 yard line. Then on fourth down Walls had apparently raced into the clear and was standing on the 25 yard line awaiting a throw from Baugh. At the last possible instant, Wilson dashed up to tip the ball with his fingers and knock it just beyond Walls' reach. That was the Frogs' last bid for victory.

The victory, which was the eleventh of the season for the Mustangs, assured them of at least a tie for the Southwest conference title. Their claim will be undisputed if they beat Texas A. and M. next Saturday.

March 73 Yards.

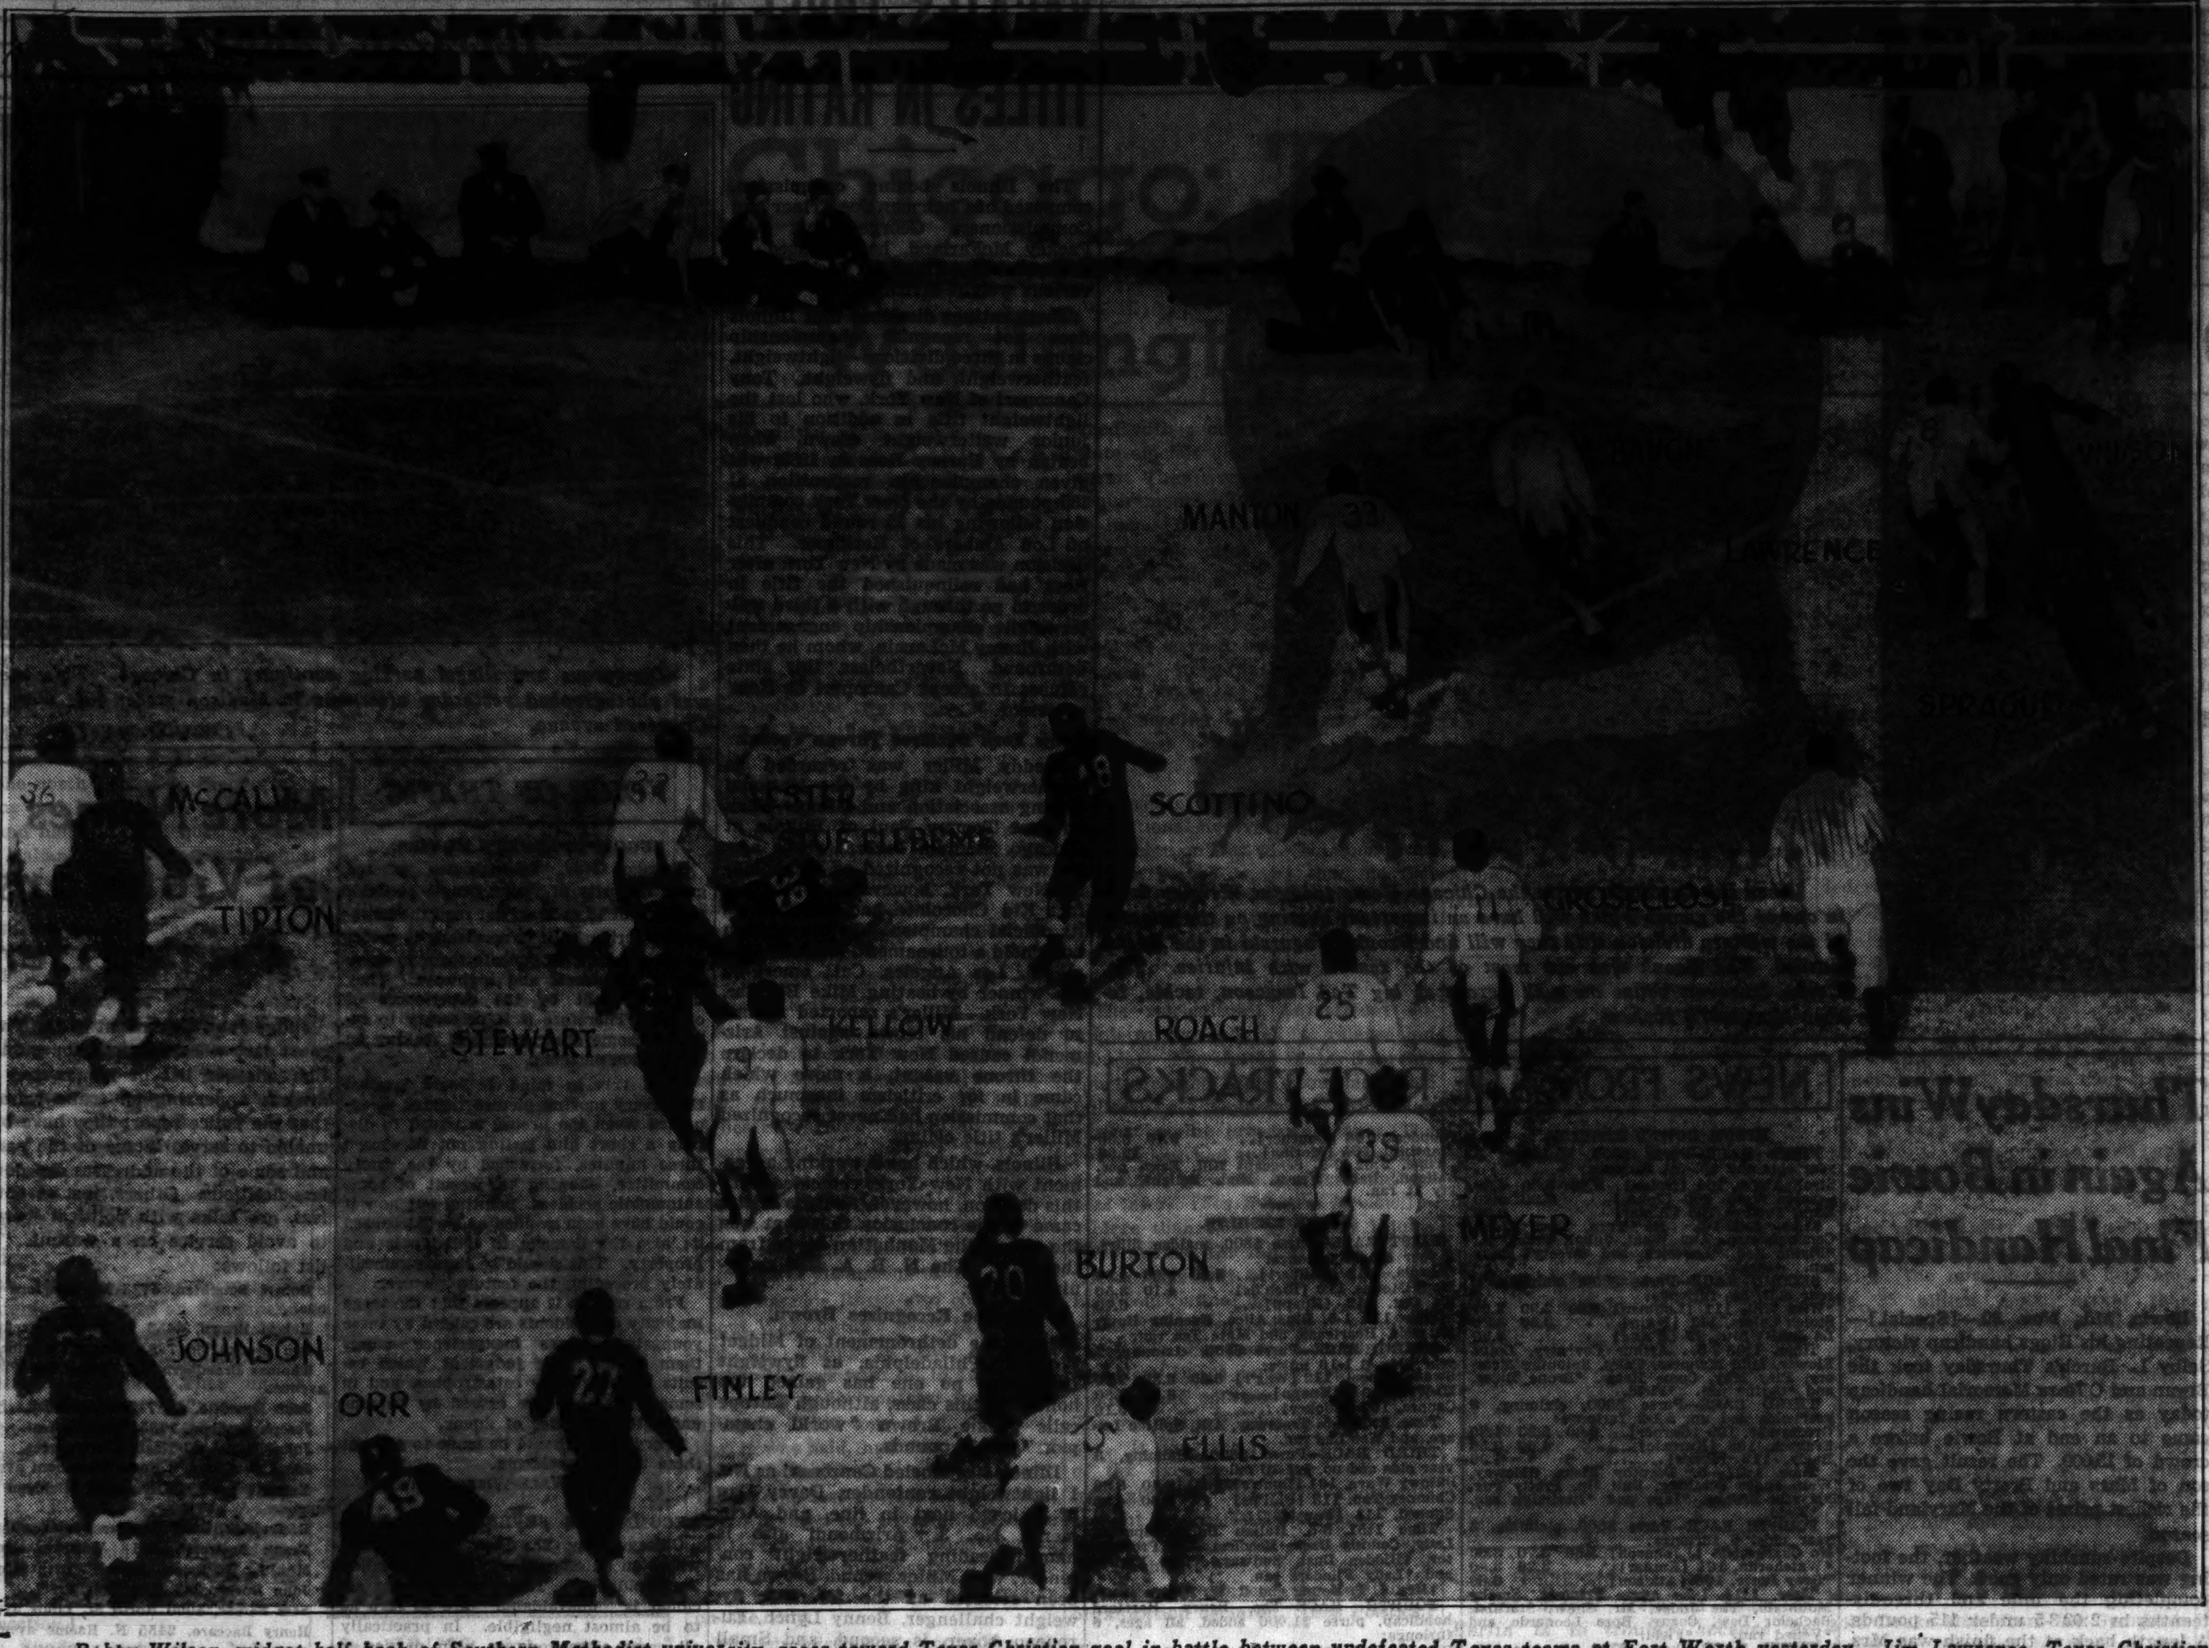
That first scoring march of S. M. U., which carried 73 yards, was made by one pass which gained 25 yards. Finley and Burt did most of the ball carrying, the former going over from the 1 yard line. Orr kicked goal.

The second touchdown was accompanied on five plays from the S. M. U. 20 yard line. Wilson made 21 yards on an end run. Burt and Finley hit the line for a first down. Finley passed to Stewart, who was brought down on the 9 yard line. Then Wilson took a lateral pass from Burt and went for a touchdown. Orr kicked goal.

A few minutes later Finley punted from behind his own goal and the ball went out of bounds on the S. M. U. 27 yard line. After two plunges, a pass by Baugh was ruled complete on the one yard line because of interference. Then Jimmy Lawrence hit center for the touchdown, and Roach kicked goal.

Texas Christian pressed on to its second touchdown early in the fourth period. Baugh's pass to Lawrence put the ball on the S. M. U. 25 yard line. Baugh threw again and Walls took the throw on the seven yard line. Again Baugh passed to Lawrence, this time for a touchdown. Roach kicked goal, tying the score. Then came Southern Methodist's winning drive.

ELEVEN IN ROW FOR GALLOPING MUSTANGS OF S. M. U.



Bobby Wilson, midget half back of Southern Methodist university, races toward Texas Christian goal in battle between undefeated Texas teams at Fort Worth yesterday. Jim Lawrence, Texas Christian back, is in close pursuit, but Wilson did not stop until after crossing the goal line for the Mustangs' second touchdown. At the half Southern Methodist held a 14 to 7 lead, but Texas Christian rallied to tie the score, only to be subdued later, 20 to 14. The victory, Southern Methodist's eleventh of the season, is likely to earn an invitation to a Rose bowl game with Stanford.

SYNDICATE GETS PLANS READY FOR BUYING BROWNS

Business Men Are Invited to Dinner Tomorrow.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 30.—[U. P.]—The sale of the St. Louis Browns of the American league tonight was fast approaching reality. Purchase of the club by a syndicate of business men appeared only hours away.

Such sale has been discussed for years, even before the death in October, 1933, of Phil Decatesby Ball, one of the only two men to own the club in 34 years of American league existence. The sales talk reached its peak in September of last year when a report on the Ball estate disclosed that Ball lost $324,000 in four years, from 1930 through the season of 1933.

Hold Dinner Tomorrow.

The present movement was started by Walter M. Smith, general manager for the southwest district of F. W. Woolworth company. Monday night between 30 and 40 business men will attend a dinner in response to a letter sent out by Smith and his associates announcing plans to form a syndicate to purchase the club by subscription.

Smith has George Sisler, former first baseman and manager of the Browns; Frank Rupenthal, owner of the St. Louis Flyers in the American Hocky association, and several others working with him to put across his plan.

Even Talk of Spring Trip.

Sisler, the only man of baseball experience in the group, said the proposed syndicate purchase is of such certainty that plans for the 1936 spring training trip have been discussed. The question of a field manager has been settled by the present management of the Browns—the Ball estate—which recently signed Rogers Hornsby to a new three year contract.

The proposed syndicate purchase has a local parallel in the purchase, in 1917, of the stock of the St. Louis Cardinals from Mrs. Helen Britton. It was in this manner that Sam Breadon, now majority stockholder of the National league club, became interested in the game.

Second Is Best Showing.

The club, through Miss Ella M. Jacoby, an executor of the Ball estate, and Louis B. von Weise, president of the club and the other executor, denies that any tentative offers have been made for purchase of the club. These denials are not taken very seriously, for it is known that those most interested in sale of the club are the present executors. Von Weise himself has urged the sale on numerous occasions.

Ball, and avid baseball fan, died in 1933 without seeing the Browns finish any higher than second, which the club did in 1922 under the management of Lee Fohl.

Can Bears' Six Man Line Stop Those Monarch Bowlers?

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Green Bay Packers, New York Giants, and the Detroit Lions can beat the Bears and why not the Monarch Beers? The latter are a nifty team that knows little about traipsing about the gridiron, but it is well versed in the matter of making strikes and spares.

With apologies to George Halas it can be said that he can't pick a team [five men] which can compete with the agile young men representing the Monarchs. So the Monarchs have graciously agreed to let Mr. Halas name six men to roll against five Monarchs in another bowling match to help swell THE TRIBUNE Goodfellow fund.

The match will be held the night of Dec. 12 at the Lake View alleys, 3239 North Clark street. Last year the Bears used Trainer Andy [Off It] Lotshaw, Bill Hewitt, Ted Rosequist, Johnny Sisk, Keith Molesworth, and Jack Manders, among others. Other fair bowlers on the squad are Reds Pollock, Bernie Masterson, and Ed Kawal.

Windy City League.

The Mineralites are back on top in the Windy City Major league, displacing the Blazek Tailors, who now are deadlocked with the O'Keefe Coals for second place. With 25 victories and 11 losses, the Mineralites hold the lead by one game. Sykes Thoma still is showing the way for the individuals with a 204 average. H. Lippe is second with 203 and W. Lenzen third with 201. Tomorrow's schedule:

Burlington Zephyrs vs. J. M. Kralovecs; G. and W. Distillery vs. Mineralites; O'Keefe Coals vs. Lauterbach Coals; Pilsen Olympia vs. Serrano Cigarros; McKesson's Old Crow vs. Betinis Boosters; Blazek Tailors vs. Vogel Brothers; Strachan Coals vs. Soper Brothers; Almanaris Water vs. Tom Curran Blatz.

Title Match Nears.

The Pabst Blue Ribbons are warming up for their 18 game challenge match with the Heils of Milwaukee, national match game champions, judging by the city record total of 3,402 they hung up in the Classic league. The first half of the match will be rolled Dec. 28 and 29 at the Lorraine alleys and the second half in Milwaukee at the Plankinton alleys on Jan. 4 and 5. On the Pabst squad are Ed Zajac, Ernie Schanz, Eddie Krems, Ad Carlson, and Herb Freitag. . . . Because of the city tournament the Pabsts have changed the date of the match that has been planned for the family of Marty Kehoe, who died recently. It will be held Tuesday, Dec. 10, at the Woodlawn alleys with the Jimmy Archer All-Stars, composed of baseball players, forming the opposition.

Here and There.

They gave away turkeys in Cuneo Press league and did Mike Rezek of Trafic No. 1 team want one! He totaled 694 on games of 245, 214, and 235 and carried off a gobbler. Others who took similar prizes were: Jack Farwick, 590; J. Micka and S. Schultz, 570; G. Brennan, 537; E. Peterson, 533; J. Gervasse, 519; F. Seigler, 515, and Bill Donahue, 392. . . . The Walther league will hold its third annual handicap tournament Dec. 14, 15, 21 and 22 at the Gold Coast alleys. . . . Leading Chicago teams will roll Dec. 14 and 15 in the Midwest tournament at Peoria. Most of them are from the Classic, Randolph and Windy City leagues.

The Berwyn Recreation team of Karafa, Benco, Erben, Rethke and Mathouser will shoot for 26 victories in a row in the West Suburban league tonight when it meets the Schneider five from Elgin at Berwyn Recreation. Berwyn's present mark of 23 is a traveling league record, the best previous string being 18 in a row by the Birk Brothers in the Windy City Traveling league 18 years ago. . . . The Butler Brothers league team fared badly in its St. Louis match with Butler Brothers' employés of that city, but the Chicagoans are looking forward for a chance for revenge.

About the Women.

Both Bess Fender and Fritzi Trettin have sneaked past Edith Kirg and now share the lead at 21 won and 7 lost in the All-Star league at the Woodlawn alleys. Miss Kirg is third and Tess Morris fourth. The schedule for tonight is:

Edith Kirg vs. Dorothy Morross; Mae Stone vs. May Davison; Mabel Cummings vs. Ann Burke; Agnes Pitelka vs. Alberta Burton; Tess Morris vs. Bess Fender; Dorothy Burmeister vs. Agnes Crocombe; Nellie Rynberk vs. Cecil Leary; Carrie Enders vs. Fritizi Trettin.

With games of 161, 246, and 178 Lee Liepe totaled 585 to lead the West Ridge league. Harriett Bennett had consistent games of 193, 194, and 196 for 583. Others leaders were Lillian Jung, 543; Clara Geweke, 539; Mae Ebert, 526; Marie Wermich, 515; Alma Kath, 511, and Elsie Hall, 505. . . . In the Samuelson Major league Ida Johnson and Charlotte Ehrns showed the way with 533 series. Close behind were Martha Bendick, 532; Isabel Van Der Muellen, 532, and Minnie Jenkinson, 531. Then came Eileen Williams, 524; Elsie Carlson, 522; Isabel Wirth, 514; Violet Graf, 508; Mabel Davis, 503, and Frances Strohmeyer, 502.

Lofty scores were made in the Bruck Major league, with Alvina Trembley and Nettie Kolb tying for high on a 598 series. Other top flight shooters are Jessie Townsend, 576; Catherine Coyle, 572; Elinore Bergin, 571; Bee Hochstadter, 571, and Sarah Evans, 569. . . . Here's some real bowling! All Elizabeth Rottinger did in leading the Monte Cristo-Lorel Rug league was to smash out games of 247, 204, and 208 for a 659 series. Trailing her were Lillian Walder, 594; Martha Bendick, 565; Signe Walz, 548; Helen Miller, 530; Charlotte Ehrns, 533; Frances Strohmeyer, 522; Anne Voet, 518, and Gertrude Ritche, 509.

North End League.

The Birk Brothers topped the North End Traveling league with a 3,189 series, which included a 1,138 game, a new season record. The Birks turned back the Milfords in all three games and climbed up to within one game of the leading Schambergers, who propped two games to the Roosevelts.

Western Pro Race Snarls Again Review of Week's Sports

Two afternoons packed full of football thrills left the western division of the National Professional Football league in a greater tangle than ever last week. At the close of Thanksgiving's games there was one game separating Detroit and the Chicago Cardinals, who were tied for first place, from the Chicago Bears, who were in fourth place. Green Bay was third, only a matter of a few percentage points out of the lead, and all four teams had a chance to win the western title.

The New York Giants put an end to all speculation on the identity of the east's representative in the playoff game for the league championship by beating their only serious threat, the Brooklyn Dodgers, 21 to 0, on Thursday and now lead by two full games in the eastern division.

The Bears and Detroit Lions put on the week's biggest thriller last Sunday at Wrigley field. Detroit took a 13 to 0 lead early in the first half only to see Bill Karr, Bear end snag two long passes for touchdowns and tie the score before the intermission. The Lions pushed over a third touchdown again in the third period and again Karr snatched a pass to tie it up, 20 to 20.

Meanwhile the Cardinals beat Boston, 6 to 0, on Bill Smith's two field goals, and Green Bay ran over Pittsburgh, 34 to 14.

The Bears went to Detroit on Thursday, but this time the Lions, after pushing over two early touchdowns, held their margin and won, 14 to 2. The Cardinals defeated the Packers, 9 to 7, at Wrigley field, Green Bay's bid for victory in the last minute of play failing when Ade Schwammel's place kick went wide of the posts.

Detroit and Green Bay play their final games today, their chances of winning the western division depending largely upon what the Bears and the Cardinals do in their games with each other today and next Sunday. The standing:

Stanford Picked for Rose Bowl 3d Straight Year.

Five times in the last 11 years Stanford university's football team has defended the honor of the Pacific Coast conference in Pasadena's annual Rose Bowl game against the pick of the east's elevens. Only once, on Jan. 1, 1928, has Stanford won. Then it beat Pittsburgh, 7 to 6. In 1927 it gained a tie with Alabama, 7 to 7.

Last Monday the conference by vote of its ten members picked Stanford as the coast's representative in the Rose Bowl game for the third consecutive year, although its conference record in games won and lost showed it tied with both California and the University of California at Los Angeles. Stanford, however, had beaten California and had lost only to U. C. L. A., 7 to 6, at a time when Clois Key was in the Bruins' lineup, playing under the name of one of the many other footballing Keys. Subsequently Keys was discovered to be a ringer.

Whom Stanford will play was still undecided up until yesterday's game between Southern Methodist and Texas Christian. Princeton, the best in the east, flatly refused to play in a post-season game. Minnesota, the Big Ten's unbeaten eleven, would not consider an invitation to the Rose Bowl because of a Western conference rule against post-season games. New York university, Stanford's best bet for an eastern opponent, saw its chances of an invitation go glimmering when Fordham swamped the Violets, 21 to 0, on Thursday.

That left the two Texas elevens as the only major unbeaten and untied teams in the country who were eligible. Stanford indicated that it would pick the winner of yesterday's game at Fort Worth as its opponent on New Year's day, but announced that it would withhold the selection until tomorrow.

Five Big Ten Teams Pick Most Valuable Players.

For twelve seasons THE TRIBUNE has been awarding a trophy to the one football player in the Western conference who was chosen by a committee of experts as having been of greatest value to his team during the season. For six years the winner was selected at large from all players in the Big Ten. For the last six seasons, the choice of the committee has been limited to the ten men, one from each school, who were chosen by their own teammates as the most valuable to their respective elevens. With the close of the conference football season, the process of selecting the 1935 most valuable player began. Five schools last week had named their most valuable players. They are:

Michigan—Bill Renner, Youngstown, O., a senior quarter back and captain.

Purdue—Frank Loebs, Cleveland, O., a senior end.

Wisconsin—Eddie Jankowski, Milwaukee, a junior half back.

Blackhawks Beaten Twice; Lose First Place.

The Chicago Blackhawks, after leading the American division of the National Hocky league without a defeat in six games, dropped two in a row last week and tumbled from first place, as the New York Rangers won three in a row during the week. Results of the week's games:

SUNDAY.

Chicago, 2; Montreal Maroons, 1.
Detroit, 2; Toronto, 1.
Rangers, 1; Boston, 0.

TUESDAY.

Maroons, 4; Hawks, 1.
Toronto, 2; Boston, 1.
Rangers, 1; New York Americans, 0.

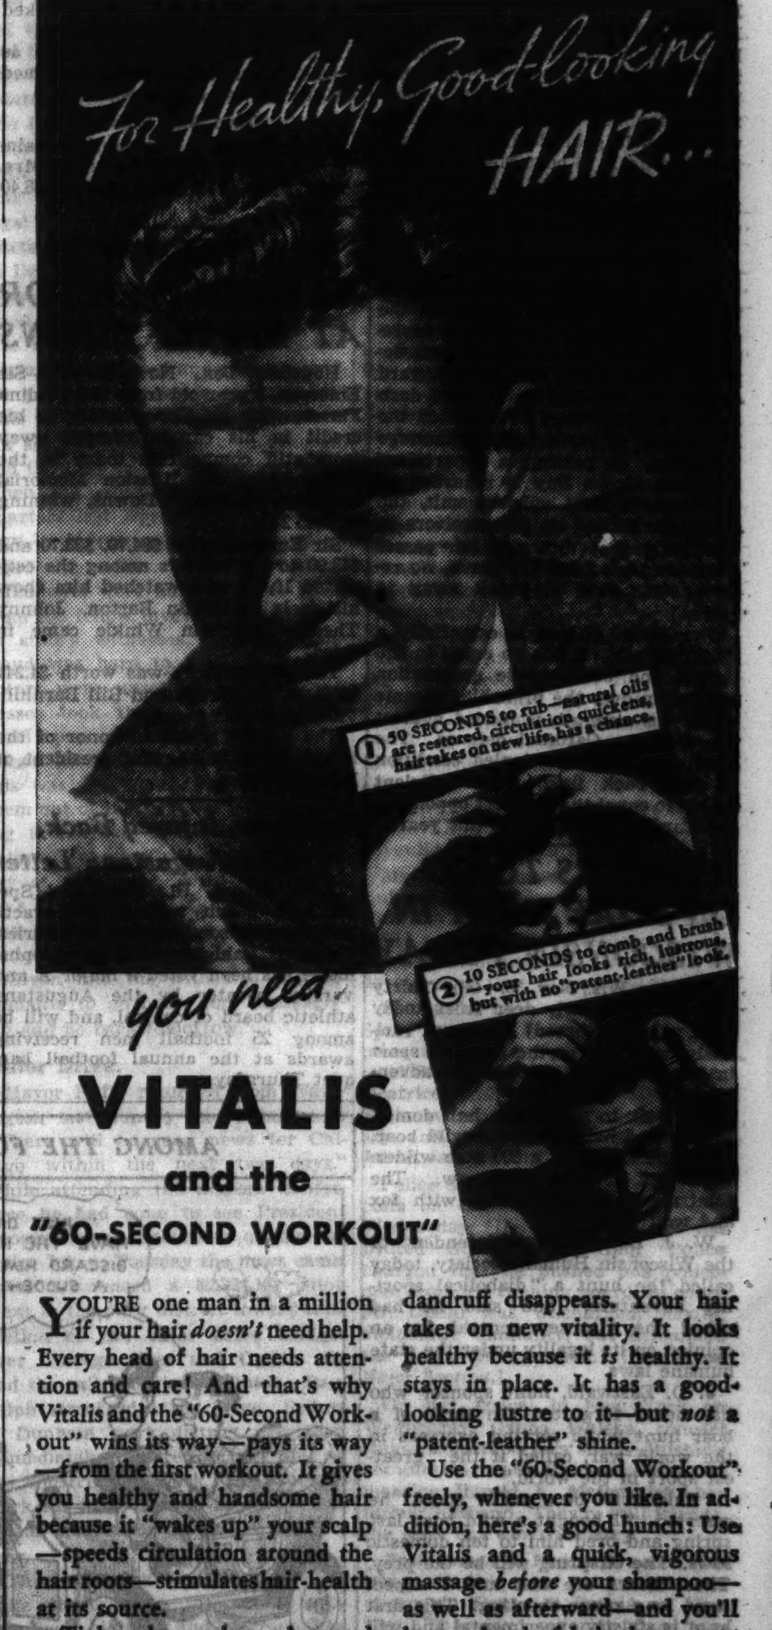
THURSDAY.

Rangers, 2; Chicago, 1.
Detroit, 0; Canadiens, 0.

DECIDE MIDWEST TITLE.

Winkler's Motor Service will oppose Dr. Nystul's Cardinals for the middleweight championship of the Midwest league today at Litsinger field.

For Healthy, Good-looking HAIR...



① 50 SECONDS to rub—natural oils are restored, circulation quickens, [illegible]
you need VITALIS and the "60-SECOND WORKOUT"

YOU'RE one man in a million if your hair doesn't need help. Every head of hair needs attention and care! And that's why Vitalis and the "60-Second Workout" wins its way—pays its way—from the first workout. It gives you healthy and handsome hair because it "wakes up" your scalp—speeds circulation around the hair roots—stimulates hair-health at its source.

Tight, dry scalps relax and loosen under the "60-Second Workout." Vitalis with massage quickens the circulation and restores the flow of the natural, nourishing oils. Loose dandruff disappears. Your hair takes on new vitality. It looks healthy because it is healthy. It stays in place. It has a good-looking luster to it—but not a "patent-leather" shine.

Use the "60-Second Workout" freely, whenever you like. In addition, before you brush: Use Vitalis and a quick, vigorous massage before your shampoo—as well as afterward—and you'll have a head of hair that cannot be topped for perfect cleanliness, good looks, good health.

clared definitly out of the game by Coach George Halas.

Although neither team is at full strength, the importance of the game is a box office lure, and if the weather moderates the largest crowd of the professional football season in Chicago is expected to see the teams renew the rivalry which began in 1920.

Oldest Series in Pro Football.

There is a certain amount of tradition connected with this series, the oldest in professional football, dating back to the days when the Cardinals played on the south side. Each team has its following, which is expected to turn out in full force, as the Cardinals enter the game with the best chance of victory since 1929, when Ernie Nevers led them to a 40 to 6 triumph.

This was the largest score ever run up in the series and also was the last time the Cardinals defeated the Bears in league competition. An exhibition on the coast last spring ended in a Cardinal victory. The series now stands 19 victories for the Bears, 5 for the Cardinals, and 5 games tied.

Hal Pangle, a freshman back from Oregon State, will direct the Cardinals' attack in the absence of Sarboe and Pardonner. Pangle, a triple threat man, played quarter back in addition to half back and full back in college. He made his debut as a signal caller in the pro league Thursday when he entered the game to direct the Cardinals on the last 21 yards of their drive to the touchdown which beat Green Bay, 9 to 7. If Pangle needs relief Howard Tipton, the guard, will take his place and Gil Berry, former Illinois star, will call signals from left half back.

Karr's injury deprives Chicago fans of a chance to compare the great Bear end with Bill Smith of the Cardinals. Coaches and players are generally agreed that these two are the best ends in the league this year. Karr's pass catching enabled the Bears to tie Detroit a week ago and his all around play has been outstanding throughout the year. Smith has been no less brilliant in all departments, topping Karr on the offense with his field goal kicking. He made two field goals to beat Boston a week ago, and his place kick from the 30 yard line scored the Cardinals' first three points against the Packers.

It's Offense vs. Defense.

On the basis of official statistics today's game brings together the league's strongest offense as represented by the Bears and its best defense. Barring Bob Monnett's 60 yard touchdown run and his 35 yard dash around end the Cardinals limited the Packers to 42 yards from scrimmage Thursday. In passing, a department at which Green Bay is regarded as the league's most efficient unit, the Cardinals bottled up the receivers so effectively that although ten passes were completed for 117 yards, no receiver was able to break away to score.

The Bears' offense is essentially a power attack. It has no equal in the league and considerable speculation has arisen over the probable outcome when this strength is hurled against the stubborn Cardinal defense. The Bears, despite the crippled condition of their back field, have sufficient power to equal that of most opponents the Cardinals have faced this year.

HUNTERS TO GO ON BOAR HUNT IN WISCONSIN TODAY

Spooner, Wis., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Thirty hunters oiled their deer rifles today for a wild [halfbreed] boar hunt variously described as the greatest sport in the world and a diabolical adventure.

From six to ten beasts, half domestic pig and half European wild boar, are to be loosed in a 600 acre wilderness east of here tomorrow. The huntsmen will give chase with fox and wolf hounds.

W. J. Dethloff, superintendent of the Wisconsin Humane society, today called the hunt a "diabolical sporting adventure," and said he had asked the attorney general for an opinion on its legality under the state humane laws.

J. D. Eastwald, hunt sponsor who has never forgotten the thrill of a boar hunt while serving overseas in the world war, called it the "greatest sport in the world."

"This won't be a parlor sport," he asserted. "I bought a wild boar last spring and bred him to ten domestic sows. The offspring will be the prey. Those boars are fast and I expect some long range shooting. This first hunt is strictly experimental and will serve as a test for possibilities of developing the sport up here."

"Eastwald should be severely condemned for introducing into Wisconsin a sport which every right thinking person knows cannot in any sense characterize the wild boar hunt of France," Dethloff said. "It is incredible that a group of sportsmen should discredit the reputation of Wisconsin by the chase of a domestic pig, which undoubtedly will die of exhaustion before the hunters' guns find their mark."

IT'S A HOME TOWN FEUD TODAY!

When the Cardinals battle the Chicago Bears today at Wrigley field in one of the games which will have an important bearing on the winner of the western division title they will find Bronko Nagurski in the Bears lineup. The Bronk was out most of the season with injuries. The Cards, however, count on such heroes as big Ted Isaacson, tackle, to stop Nagurski's rushes.

Thursday Wins Again in Bowie Final Handicap

Bowie, Md., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Repeating his Riggs handicap victory, Selby L. Burch's Thursday took the Bryan and O'Hara Memorial handicap today as the eastern racing season came to an end at Bowie before a crowd of 15,000. The result gave the son of Mars and Pretty Day two of the richest prizes of the Maryland fall season.

Despite sunshiny weather, the footing was rated only good. The winner completing the mile and three-sixteenths in 2:02 3-5 under 115 pounds. A length back at the finish was Mrs. W. Deering Howe's Only One, early pacemaker, which faltered in the stretch, just as he did in the Riggs.

Firethorn Is Third.

Firethorn, a double stake winner at Belmont Park, and beaten favorite in the Riggs, brought up third another length back of Only One. This colt and his stablemate, Judy O'Grady, were slight favorites over the entry of Thursday and Tweedledee. The defeat of the Firethorn entry marked the fifth consecutive losing choice.

Thursday is trained as well as owned by Burch. The winner returned $6.60 for $2 and earned $5,150.

Sable Muff Wins.

Burch scored a consecutive trainer's double in the sixth when Mrs. Somerville's Sable Muff won at $38.40 for $2.

SIR EMERSON IS HANDICAP VICTOR AT EPSOM DOWNS

Houston, Tex., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Sir Emerson, 2 year old from the Valdina Farms, with only one victory to his credit in his career, romped away from stiff competition today in the $5,000 added Ed Hussion Memorial handicap at Epsom Downs, winning in 1:45 2-5.

Sir Emerson paid $84.70, $33.70 and $13.90 to his backers among the estimated 10,000 who watched him show his deels to Martin Barton. Johnny Theall's Rip Van Winkle came in third.

Today's handicap was worth $4,241 to E. E. Woodward and Bill Barnhill, Valdina Farms owners.

The handicap was in honor of the late J. Ed Hussion, first president of Epsom Downs.

Dahlgren, Injured Back, Gets Augustana Letter

Rock Island, Ill., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—A bench warmer for practically two seasons because of injuries, Norman Dahlgren, Chicago sophomore, has been voted a major A and varsity sweater by the Augustana athletic board of control, and will be among 25 football men receiving awards at the annual football banquet Thursday.

TAYLOR RESUMES JOB AS TRAINER OF HEAD PLAY

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 30.—(AP)—J. T. Taylor who resigned last week as trainer for Mrs. Silas B. Mason's racing stable, has returned to that post and will leave tomorrow with Head Play, Sun Portland, He Did, and seven other thoroughbreds for the Santa Anita track in California. Head Play is to be prepared for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap and He Did is intended for the Santa Anita Derby.

When Taylor resigned Mrs. Mason employed as trainer Willie Crump from whom she bought Head Play the morning of the day he ran second in the 1934 Kentucky Derby. Crump could not get a release from an Audley Farm contract and is to take the Audley racers to Miami, Fla. Taylor then resumed his place with Mrs. Mason's stable. Jocky Charlie Kurtsinger and Taylor's brother, Walter, who is to take charge of fourteen thoroughbreds for Phil Chinn, will go to California with Taylor tomorrow.

New York Celtics Meet Duffy Florals Wednesday

Chicago's first major basketball game of the season will be played Wednesday night at the 132d Regiment armory, Madison and Rockwell streets, when the New York Celtics come here to meet the Duffy Florals.

BOXING BOARD VACATES THREE TITLES IN RATING

The Illinois boxing commission, composed of Chairman Joe Triner and Commissioners George Getz and Packey McFarland, has released its first annual ratings in each of the various weight divisions.

These ratings disclosed that Illinois does not recognize championship claims in three divisions—lightweight, featherweight, and flyweight. Tony Canzoneri of New York, who lost the lightweight title in addition to his junior welterweight crown when beaten by Barney Ross in 1933, was given championship recognition at 135 pounds by the New York commission following his 15 round conquest of Lou Ambers of Herkimer. This decision was made by New York after Ross had relinquished the title in order to go through with a third welterweight championship engagement with Jimmy McLarnin, whom he then dethroned. Nevertheless, this state refuses to accept Canzoneri as Ross' successor.

New York Declares Throne Vacant.

Freddy Miller was regarded as featherweight king by the National Boxing association and Illinois when he beat Tommy Paul of Buffalo at Chicago Stadium several years ago. He was not recognized as titleholder by New York, however, despite the fact Kid Chocolate had resigned as its official champion. So the eastern body held a tournament, Alberto Arizmendi, Los Angeles, Cal., emerging the winner by beating Mike Belloise, New York. Miller's reported refusal to defend his crown against Arizmendi caused New York to declare the throne vacant, a move which came in for criticism inasmuch as that commission had never recognized Miller's title claims.

Illinois, which has a working agreement with New York, coincided with this decision, however, and the critics came to the conclusion that that was the aim of the Manhattan board from the start. The N. B. A. still recognizes Miller.

Europe Recognizes Brown.

Since the dethronement of Midget Wolgast, Philadelphia, as flyweight titleholder no one has gained top honors in this class, although Europe calls Jackie Brown "world champion" at 112 pounds.

Illinois has labeled Canzoneri as No. 1 lightweight contender, Davey Day of Chicago next in line, and Arizmendi No. 3. Arizmendi also is named leading featherweight contender, with Miller second. Brown has been selected as the foremost flyweight challenger, Benny Lynch, European boxer, is second, and Small Montana, California Filipino, third.

Here's Commission's Ratings.

The five other champions have undisputed possession of their crowns. James J. Braddock, Jersey City, N. J., is heavyweight champion; John Henry Lewis, Phoenix, Ariz., light heavyweight; Babe Risko, Syracuse, N. Y., middleweight; Barney Ross, Chicago, welterweight, and Sixto Escobar, Porto Rico, bantamweight. Illinois' ratings follow:

Heavyweights—Champion, James J. Braddock; Joe Louis [1]; Max Schmeling [2]; Charley Retzlaff [3].

Light heavyweights—Champion, John Henry Lewis; Bob Olin [1]; Maxie Rosenbloom [2]; Lou Brouillard [3].

Welterweights—Champion, Barney Ross; Jimmy McLarnin [1]; Harry Dublinsky [2]; Ceferino Garcia [3]; Bev Van Klaveren [4]; Tony Falco [5].

Lightweights—Championship vacant; Tony Canzoneri [1]; Davey Day [2]; Baby Arizmendi [3]; Bobbie Pacho [4]; Holman Williams [5].

Heavyweights Meet Friday in Coliseum Ring

A heavyweight elimination boxing tournament will be presented at the Coliseum Friday night by Kid Howard Carr to head this week's Chicago boxing and wrestling schedule. The veteran Chicago promoter intends to make Friday's show the first of a series held here this winter in an effort to obtain competition for Joe Louis, foremost challenger for James J. Braddock's crown.

With this thought in mind Howard has invited such boxers as Max Marek, Chicago; Bill Treest, St. Charles; Harry Thomas, Los Angeles, and Johnny Erjavec, Duluth, to compete. Others invited include Hank Bath, San Diego; Joe Lipps, Georgia; Buddy Baer, Oakland; Eddie Simms, Cleveland, and Al Delaney, Buffalo.

Milt Aron, Dubuque, Ia., youngster who has won all except one or two of his professional encounters, will receive an opportunity to break into topnotch competition tomorrow at Marigold Gardens against Billy Miller of Milwaukee. The bout, set for eight rounds at 147 pounds, will be Aron's first windup. Included among his victims is Puggy Weinert, Brighton Park slugger who defeated Miller here last summer.

Bouts on this week's boxing and wrestling schedule include:

MONDAY.

At Marigold Gardens—Billy Miller vs. Milt Aron [8], welterweights; Jimmy Webb vs. Toots Bernstein [5], middleweights; Charley Mack vs. Walter Matthys [4], featherweights.

At White City—Zack Malkov vs. Jack Gacek and Turp Grimes vs. Bert Rubi, each one hour time limit; Rudy Kay vs. Toots Culver, Charley Peterson vs. Bobby Novak, and Ken Fenlon vs. Paul Miller, each 30 minutes time limit, all one fall, light heavyweights [wrestling].

At Duncan Y. M. C. A.—Eight amateur bouts.

WEDNESDAY.

At Chicago Stadium—Catholic Youth organization amateur boxing tournament finals.

At Merry Gardens—Several professional wrestling bouts.

FRIDAY.

At Coliseum — Heavyweight elimination tournament.

At Madison Athletic club—Seven amateur bouts.

SATURDAY.

At Cicero Stadium—Several professional bouts [tentative].

VOICE OF TRAFIC

SUGGESTS SAFETY MOVIES.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Inasmuch as the great majority of young people between the ages of 16 to 20 do not read the newspapers seriously, it is necessary to resort to other means to educate them to drive sanely on streets and highways. They do not profit by the experiences of others. Therefore it is necessary to resort to some other means of making an impression on them.

With this in mind I would suggest that every moving picture theater be required when the license is issued to display a short film lasting not to exceed three minutes, furnished by the safety committee, showing the result of some automobile accident, pointing out how it could have been avoided and what caused it; also the damage to individuals and property. This should be shown immediately preceding the feature picture.

From reports it appears that the large majority of accidents are caused by these youngsters whose inexperience causes them to use poor judgment which results in these daily catastrophes, and in some cases they are caused by persons under the influence of liquor.

Every effort should be made to prevent these terrible accidents.

A WELL WISHING CITIZEN.

RECOMMENDS SEVERE PENALTIES.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—Every day we read where an automobile accident was called "unavoidable." The cases where an accident is "unavoidable" are so rare as to be almost negligible. In practically all cases either one or both parties is guilty of negligence.

Even in accidents caused by mechanical trouble, such is the case. Proper inspection and care of automobiles would cure such defects, excepting, perhaps, only latent defects.

Such obvious things as driving on the wrong side of the road, straddling the center marker, passing on hills, "hogging" the road, and the "don't give a damn" attitude which says "Get out of my way, I own the road," can only be cured by severe punishment. Possibly education might have some effect; but I hardly think a "damn fool" can be so educated.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Lee Cosart, Chicago regional manager for Dodge, with a crew of assistants questioned 756 men and 262 women attending the recent automobile show and was told that 38 per cent of the men and 48 per cent of the women intended to buy some make of 1936 car within the next three or four months.

Of the 1,018 persons interviewed, 318 were not car owners at that time. Of the cars owned by others picked at random from the crowd, 45 per cent of the vehicles had an average of five years.

"Our investigation disclosed that in addition to replacement of out moded and worn out motor cars, there is a substantial potential market from first time buyers," said Mr. Cosart.

Reports of increased sales from the leading cities where automobile shows have been held reveal that retail sales for 1936 Hudsons and Terraplanes are running from 2¼ to 4 times greater than those reported a year ago, according to W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales.

"This marked increase in retail orders," stated Mr. Tracy, "is reflected in the stepping up of our production schedule to 33,500 cars for the last quarter of this year, which is 11,000 cars greater than the first three months' shipments of 1935 models."

COAST DRIVERS, CHICAGO STARS CLASH TONIGHT

West coast champions will compete against the Chicago district champions tonight in a series of indoor auto races at the 124th Field Artillery armory.

The Chicago district champions are headed by Jimmy Snyder from the south side, Tony Willman and Wally Zale. From the west coast there will be Ronny Householder, Curly Mills and Pat Warren.

Householder will have a new car for tonight's battle. His old one was sold to an English sportsman last week and shipped to England. Curly Mills, who has been improving as the season progresses, will be a dangerous contender in the fifty lap race.

Eight races are carded tonight with the first starting at 8:30 p. m.

Indiana Basket Coach Leaves for Rules Meeting

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 30—[Special.]—Everett S. Dean, Indiana university hardwood coach, left today for Chicago, where he will be chairman of the annual meeting of Big Ten basketball coaches Sunday. Interpretation of the new rules by coaches and officials will be the principal topic of discussion.

DRAKE QUINTET TO PLAY 9 GAMES IN NORTHWEST

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 30.—(AP)—E. C. Lytton, Drake university business manager, announced today the Drake basketball team will make a nine game trip into the Pacific northwest during the Christmas holidays.

Drake, 1934-'35 co-champion of the Missouri Valley conference, will open the tour Dec. 13 against Denver university at Denver, Colo. Other teams on the schedule are Brigham Young, Washington State, Gonzaga, Multnomah Athletic club, Willamette, University of Washington, Washington State Normal and the University of Utah.

TIPS FOR GOOD DRIVERS—WATCH SPEED IN SNOW

It's No Fun to Have an Auto Tip Over.

BY HAL FOUST.

The season for ice and snow covered pavements is here. There are a number of suggestions that might be made for operating and maintaining an automobile under these conditions, but they are all insignificant in comparison with the mandate to reduce your speed.

Of course you good drivers, not over amenable to suggestions, know all about handling a car on slippery streets and highways. You've seen many winters through a windshield. But don't scorn this word of caution. Other good drivers, in a momentary lapse, will be sliding into curbs and safety islands and skidding into ditches during the next three months. And it may not always be the other fellow.

If you'll admit that you're not too good a driver to accept advice, I'll do the same, and my livelihood depends upon a reputation as an expert. A word of caution, such as this story is intended to be, might have saved me from one of the major frights of my life one night two years ago.

En Route to Springfield.

George Barton, engineer for the Chicago Motor club, and I were going to Springfield, using his new sedan for the trip because it was better protection against the cold than THE TRIBUNE roadster. Darkness and a blinding snowstorm struck us south of Pontiac.

The snow was freezing to the windshield and the wiper couldn't keep it clean. We took turns at the wheel, driving 15 or 20 miles an hour with a head out of the side window.

South of Chenoa, the downfall relented. I was at the wheel and Barton was in a rear seat getting an extra pair of sox from his baggage. A car somewhere ahead had left a pair of tracks to follow. In the loose snow, the traction was not good, but it was not bad either. With fair visibility, I got in the pair of tracks and stepped up the speedometer to 40 or 45.

Over Goes the Car.

The tracks dropped a right rear wheel off the concrete. The rear swung to the right. I cramped the front wheels to the right to come out of the skid. There was no traction. Under the loose snow was a sheet of ice. There was still nothing to fear.

The rear bumped something, probably a rock, and swung 180 degrees to the left in a waltz step. I cramped the front wheels sharply to the left, performing automatically and without fright. An overcoat sleeve caught in the switch on top of the control wheel and turned out the lights.

In the same split second the car sliding sideways was tripped into a flipflop. The first roll was fast. I was hanging onto the wheel with both hands, fearful of a crash into a telegraph pole. A second roll, down a snow covered embankment, was slow enough, I realized, that it wouldn't be fatal if we hit something. I thought of the ignition switch but I was upside down part of the time and couldn't release a hand from the wheel.

Door Is Stuck.

The car came to rest on its left side. George and I exchanged quick reassuring words. I couldn't cut the ignition because the seat cushion was jammed against the key on the instrument panel. An automatic starter was churning a dead motor. Smoke filled the automobile.

I tried to open the door above me but it stuck. The window was bordered by jagged glass. Sticking a hand through the opening, I could feel that the top was smashed down over the door.

"This door is stuck, can you get your's open?" I shouted.

Yes, I shouted. I was scared, thoroughly, from my toes to my scalp. I could hear but not see Barton struggling with the rear door. There was more smoke coming into the car. The automatic starter still groaned.

"I got it," he called.

I pushed him out and he pulled me out.

Neither Seriously Hurt.

That was my lesson in snow and ice driving. Barton's scalp was nicked in several places by chips of glass. An X-ray the next day disclosed a simple fracture on the point of his right shoulder. I was slightly lame from bruises across the thighs where the steering wheel caught me.

Others have paid more dearly for such a lesson. Here's hoping you'll accept the experiences of others and not pay to learn to drive slowly over snow and ice.

One more tip for winter driving. Look at your chains. The clamps may be locked with rust. A drop of oil now may be a big help in mounting the chains some cold day when you're caught on an icy highway.

GLOBE TROTTERS QUINTET TO PLAY 2 GAMES TODAY

Two Chicagoland teams will provide the opposition today for the Harlem Globe Trotters, one of the strongest basketball teams in the country. This afternoon the Duffy Florals will oppose the Globe Trotters at Woodstock and tonight an All-Star Aurora quintet will meet them in a benefit game at Marmion High gymnasium in Aurora.

The Globe Trotters are just beginning their annual tour during which they play as many as 150 games.

Penalties.

Developments last week left observers wondering if Great Britain and France had made the United States the dupe in the league of nations' attempt to stop the Italian invasion of Ethiopia. Without oil Italy's mechanized army would collapse. After Washington had led the way in a virtual oil boycott of Italy the league refused, at least for the time being, to follow the American lead. [For the American position see Neutrality in Washington.]

The league committee on penalties was to have met Friday. It was expected that the committee would recommend the banning of shipments of oil to Italy. Unofficial Italian reports said that would mean war. Monday the meeting was postponed until Dec. 6. It was said Premier Laval could not leave France. [See France.]

Friday the meeting was again postponed until Dec. 12. Conflicting reasons were given. In some quarters there was hope for a peaceful settlement of the Italian-Ethiopian trouble. The other side claimed that the oil sanctions would surely be voted by the committee at the meeting. In support of this theory Laval was reported to have told Italy Friday that an Italian attack on the British fleet in the Mediterranean would be considered an attack on France. [See Italy.]

Great Britain.

Great Britain had many worries as its newly elected parliament was sworn in last week. It could not hold France to an oil boycott of Italy. Reports from Italy indicated such a boycott would mean war. Japan was invading its economic territory in north China. It had led the United States into an oil boycott and then allowed France to draw it out of it. It needed American support if it was to stop Japan. It had failed the United States once in the invasion of Manchuria, and had failed America again in the boycott.

The British moved cautiously. They merely asked Japan what its aims in China are. The railway seized by Japan is largely British owned. [See Asiatics.] It is the security for a British loan to China. Britain was warned not to interfere in the north China independence movement by the Japanese.

Twice the British agreed to postponements of the league of nations committee meeting on penalties against Italy. [See Penalties.]

Italy.

Reports from Italy early in the week said a league of nations agreement not to sell oil to Italy would mean war. Reports Friday said this was not definite. Italy was angry at the action of President Roosevelt in declaring a virtual American boycott of shipments of goods to Italy. [See Neutrality in Washington.] Meanwhile Italy went on with its attempts to do without foreign products.

Mussolini, in a warlike gesture, canceled the three months' leave granted the previous week to 100,000 soldiers. They were to have gone back to farm work. Il Duce also decreed 88 new laws to strengthen Italy's war machine.

Reports from Rome said that a "death squad" of 125 aviators had been formed. Each would fly a plane carrying one huge bomb. If the league agreed to an oil embargo this squad would fly over the British Mediterranean fleet. Each flyer would dive into a British warship.

Other reports said Italy would withdraw from the league of nations if the oil boycott was voted. In addition Italian ambassadors and other diplomatic representatives abroad would be called home.

France.

Premier Pierre Laval battled the French parliament and won. In addition he postponed further league of nations action against Italy. Perhaps buoyed up by the success of his plans he was reported to have warned Italy Friday that an attack on the British fleet would be taken as an attack on France.

All summer and fall Laval governed France under emergency powers granted to his cabinet by parliament. Thursday parliament returned to Paris. Laval wanted the deputies to consider the money question first and the question of dissolving Fascist organizations [such as the Cross of Fire] second. The deputies allowed him to remain in power by voting his program.

Friday the question of French money came up. Each franc [French unit of money] is redeemable in gold—as the American dollar used to be. Laval wanted to keep the franc on that basis. His opponents wanted to make the franc worth less gold—as President Roosevelt decreased the value of the dollar from 100 to 59 cents. Laval was again allowed to remain in power when the chamber agreed with him. [See Business Review.]

Laval asked the British to postpone the league of nations committee meeting on penalties. He said he could not leave France for the meeting with the parliament fight on his hands. The British agreed. [See Penalties.]

African Conflict.

In the African conflict both Italians and Ethiopians claimed minor victories. Each side denied that the other had won any engagements.

In the north Ethiopian reports said Italians had been driven out of Makale and had retreated north to Adigrat. Italian reports denied this and said Italian troops had advanced south of Makale. In the south Ethiopians reported the capture of Gorahai, Gerlogubi, and Ualual. Italians denied these reports.

Yesterday Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia reached Dessye from Addis Ababa to take personal command of his troops. Marshal Pietro Badoglio, new commander of the Italian troops in the north, arrived at the front Thursday after being held up at Massaua, Eritrea, by the same heavy rains that are reported to be miring the northern Italian army.

Asiatics.

Japan took two steps forward in the attempt to create an "independent" north China. As in "independent" Manchukuo, the Japanese would control the new state. Their moves were delayed toward the end of the week by failure to win over Chinese governors in the provinces of Chahar, Shansi, Hopei, Suiyuan, and Shantung.

However, Japan moved 10,000 soldiers into Tientsin yesterday. The apparent purpose was to force the balky governors to give in. [See main news section.]

Last Sunday night Yin Ju-keng, governor of the demilitarized zone in north China and just south of Manchukuo, declared 25 counties in Hopei province independent of China. He said the new country would admit control of the Chinese government, but would not allow China to exercise control of internal affairs there. His wife is Japanese. His brother-in-law is a high officer in the Japanese army.

As the second step in their campaign to win more Chinese territory, the Japanese seized control of all railways in north China. They refused to allow trains to move south without an equal number of cars moving north. The Japanese claimed that Dictator Chiang Kai-shek might use the trains to move troops north in order to resist the Japanese. The Japanese said this would interfere with the "independence" movement.

Much of the stock in the seized railways belongs to Great Britain. She was warned by Japan to keep her hands off the "independence" movement. [See Great Britain.]

On Friday China held the greatest military demonstrations in her history as two protest notes were forwarded to Japan. One note objected to the activities of Japanese army officers in trying to set up the independence of north China. The other objected to the occupation of railway stations in Peiping and Tientsin by Japanese troops.

Germany.

Heinrich Sahm, who is 7 feet tall and the lord mayor of Berlin, has never been a very ardent Nazi. Two weeks ago he was brought to trial in the Nazi party court on charges of "personal relation with a Jewish family and for buying in Jewish stores." One of Sahm's Nazi clerks had discovered two of his canceled checks which had been made out to a Jewish store in Berlin. The clerk reported the mayor to party leaders. Last Monday his case reached the party's supreme court. If he is found guilty of the charge he may be expelled from the party and his office, and punished in addition.

Flying

Carrying about 110,000 pieces of mail, the China Clipper, Pan-American Airways' giant flying boat, landed in Manila bay, the Philippines, Friday. It was the first flight of an airmail ship across the Pacific. The 8,000 mile trip was made in 60 hours' flying time, stops having been made at Honolulu, the Midway islands, Wake islands, and Guam. The average steam trip takes 19 and 20 days. The China Clipper will start back for Alameda, Cal., tomorrow.

Dr. Ralph Badger of Detroit cranked the motor of his tiny plane at the Lansing, Mich., airport. It started ahead. Nobody was in the cockpit. Dr. Badger grabbed a wire, managing to confine the runaway ship's movements to a circle. But it gathered speed a few moments after he let go, rose 15 feet, then crashed. . . . William Schiefele, a flying instructor, and Murray Smith, his student, prepared for a landing at Long Beach, Cal. Each thought the other was handling the controls. The plane crashed. Neither was hurt seriously. . . . Second Lieutenant Eyvind Holtermann was killed Sunday when his army plane crashed 20 miles southwest of Columbus, Tex.

Washington

Neutrality.

Oil spattered the capitals of Europe and the United States last week. It brought threats of another world war. It worried busy statesmen in Washington, London, Paris, and Rome. [See Foreign.]

In the middle, temporarily, at least, stood the United States. To strengthen the country's neutrality policy in the Italo-Ethiopian war, the administration two weeks ago took steps to halt the shipment of oil to Italy.

A few days later the league of nations hinted it, too, might attempt an oil embargo. Without oil Italy's war machine would stop. A week ago yesterday Italy's diplomatic agents hinted that "oil might mean war." Last Monday the league delayed contemplated action on the oil ban. This left Washington in the middle. [See Business Review.]

Augusto Rosso, Italian ambassador to the United States, called on Secretary of State Cordell Hull on Tuesday. He reputedly gave Mr. Hull a delicate warning that Italy would disapprove of America's efforts to shut off oil exports or other important exports. Secretary Hull told him delicately that America's stand would not be changed; that it is independent of any and all actions of the league.

Ambassador Rosso also complained about Washington's move in preventing the sailing of the American tanker Ulysses with oil to Italy. The Ulysses is under contract for the delivery of 12,000 tons of oil. The sailing, it was said, had the approval of the shipping board and the navy. But at the last minute the shipping board ordered the Ulysses kept home by threatening the company owning the ship with foreclosure. The company owes the United States money on the ship.

The administration's neutrality policies have brought varied reactions. The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, charged the administration had made a semi-secret agreement with the league of nations in 1933 to support penalties. He charged the agreement was made by Norman Davis, a European observer for Washington. Mr. Davis replied in New York next day that the assertion was ridiculous.

Among officials who spoke publicly on the neutrality question were Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Senators Norris and Borah. In Washington on Monday Secretary Perkins said American workers were right in refusing to load or man ships carrying war cargoes. In Washington on Friday Senator Norris urged a ban on all exports that might be used for war. Borah, in New York, Thursday, urged caution. "We can sometimes get into war by trying to keep out," he said.

President.

Before a mass of 100,000 listeners in Grant field, Atlanta, Ga., President Roosevelt on Friday attacked his critics and praised his New Deal. He said big government spending was ended; that the deficit would be decreased, and that times not only would get better but are better. [See Business Review.]

As to relief, the President said Americans do not want the dole; they want work. He boasted that up to last Wednesday 3,125,000 persons were working under the 4 billion dollar works fund. [See Works.] In assailing his critics he mentioned no names. Obviously he referred to former President Hoover when he spoke of the period before the New Deal which he called "that orgy of prosperity" when gold ruled America.

Following his speech, the President returned to Warm Springs, where he has shared the sunshine for the last ten days with little infantile paralysis sufferers.

The budget occupied most of the President's time, and he conferred with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Chairman James P. Buchanan of the house appropriations committee, and others. Buchanan told reporters the budget would be cut heavily; that maybe it could be balanced to within 500 million dollars. To do this, he admitted, would mean "a devil of a fight."

Works.

The New Deal hoped to have 3,500,000 men and women on public works pay rolls by today. It was reported last night that the New Deal was considerably short of this goal. According to the President's speech in Atlanta on Friday 3,125,000 were employed as of Wednesday. [See President.] Observers said 375,000 more jobs could not be filled by today. [See Main News Section.]

Chicagoans received cheer from the Public Works administration on Tuesday when Administrator Harold Ickes announced an allotment of $2,324,181 as a gift to complete the outer drive bridges and their approaches. [See The City.] This will help to swell the state's works employés. The state's quota is 183,500. There were 138,830 persons actually working on projects in the state in mid-week.

Relief.

Illinois' relief worries for December are over for the time being. Threatened with a cutoff of federal funds, state officials did not know where to turn. They were $5,000,000 short of requirements. Gov. Horner refused to help. But on Friday the federal government came to the rescue of Illinois and 21 similarly troubled states. It allotted $5,000,000 to Illinois. Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins warned this was the last allotment. After Jan. 1, 1936, Illinois and the other states must provide for those needing help who are not on works pay rolls.

NRA.

Lawrence J. Martin, fifth head of the National Recovery administration, will resign on Dec. 31. He announced he had stayed longer than he had planned. Past NRA heads: Gen. Hugh Johnson, S. Clay Williams, Donald R. Richberg, and James L. O'Neill.

AAA.

The Agricultural Adjustment administration suffered a relapse on Monday. The United States Supreme court granted eight Louisiana rice millers a temporary injunction against paying processing taxes. The government had argued that the millers should pay the tax first and appeal later. [See Business Review.]

More than 2,000 temporary injunctions against the tax granted by district courts will be affected by the high court's final decision.

The Republican organization in Chicago on Sunday issued a warning that the New Deal's potato control plan might make potatoes very expensive. The control act goes into effect today. It fixes the number of bushels of tax exempt potatoes each state may grow in 1936. The allotments amount to 226,600,000 bushels. The average recent crop has been 363,367,000 bushels. "Potato control is fraught with danger," the Republican organization declared. [See Politics.]

Defense.

The American delegation to the London naval conference sailed from New York on the liner Aquitania Friday night. The delegates were Norman H. Davis, Washington diplomatic agent; Undersecretary of State William Phillips, and Admiral William H. Standley. The conference will open Dec. 9 instead of Dec. 6 as originally planned. Fears are felt that the hopes of the parley will be upset by the league of nations sanctions against Italy. It is believed Italy will assume a fighting attitude at the meeting over naval matters in the Mediterranean.

The first returns in the recent referendum on war and peace conducted by the Council for Social Action of the Congregational and Christian churches favor a smaller army and navy, control of munitions, national isolation, and strict neutrality.

The City

Drake Swindle.

Sir Francis Drake's ship, the Golden Hind, sailed into Plymouth harbor, England, in 1580. The plundering adventurer poured Spanish gold at the feet of Queen Elizabeth. He had circled the world like Magellan. Drake could not know his triumph would make him a fabulous Jason bringing home the golden fleece to 70,000 American midwesterners 355 years later. But it did. The believers are actually waiting for their ships to come in, the hatches bulging with Drake's gold.

These rocking chair fortune hunters of 1935 have faith in a bizarre story of easy riches. This was amazingly demonstrated last week as the federal trial in Chicago to stamp out the 200 year old Drake estate swindle dragged on. Forty-one face the charge of defrauding fellow citizens of $1,350,000.

Sitting in court was "Baron" Oscar M. Hartzell, wearing horn rimmed glasses and shiny handcuffs. Convicted in 1933 of one mail fraud, this one time Iowa farmer was the martyr of a great cause. Near by was Otto G. Yant, once an Iowa bank cashier and now accused No. 2 swindler.

One witness after another took the stand. The overwhelming Iowa legend of the missing Drake heir and the 35 billion dollar estate that awaited him gradually unfolded. The sales talk which investors accepted as prophetic truth ran this way: Elizabeth [financier of the voyage] seized an unqueenly share of Drake's loot and paid off the national debt, balanced the budget, and invested $200,000 in foreign trade and colonization. This was England's original foreign investment capital and by 1930 the kingdom openly admitted it had swollen to 20 billion. But all the gold Drake stole from the Spaniards rightfully belonged to his son and his descendants [Drake had no son]. This debt weighed heavily on the Bank of England and when it began calling in the Drake estate gold it forced itself and then the United States off the gold standard, causing depression.

Therefore, according to the salesmen, the real Drake heir and those who promoted his cause by purchasing shares in the impending fortune had to be paid to bring world recovery. The big obstacles in settling the estate were government swindlers and international bankers. President Hoover was won over to the cause with difficulty, but then Roosevelt was elected and that delayed the legal red tape in England. Since Hartzell represented the only one of 51 Drake heirs who was genuine, his conviction was more persecution. Even if he was dishonest, the cause was still great. Postmaster General Farley investigated and told his meddling postal inspectors to "lay off." This fairy tale moved swiftly, investors shipped their money to Chicago, and the 1,000 to 1 pay-off was at hand when the government raided headquarters last April.

Five of the defendants were alleged ringleaders. But the other 36 defendants were hard to distinguish from 200 fellow investors rounded up as state's witnesses. Intent to defraud was hard to find. The prosecutors were upset when many witnesses took the chance to hold a hotel pep meeting. The faithful sought to reassure one another that this was just another plot to fleece them out of the Drake estate by making them their Iowa neighbors' accusers. Moreover, the Madison Chamber of Commerce reported Wisconsin's gullible were still going, hook, line, and sinker for the Great Cause. Astonished Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan told the witnesses and defendants to go home for Thanksgiving and be back tomorrow.

Outer Drive.

Mayor Kelly returned from Washington last Sunday and announced: "There will be good news for Chicago within the next two days." While attending the mayors' conference he had gone to see President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Tuesday the news came. Ickes announced a $2,324,181 allotment to the park district toward completion of the outer drive bridges over Chicago river and Ogden slip and the railroad viaduct linking Randolph street with the drive. Robert J. Dunham, park district president, immediately prepared to take bids on the construction work. He expected work for 3,500 men to begin by Dec. 15 and completion of the project in a year.

This will link South Shore and Lake Shore drives into an 18 mile lake front highway and represent the greatest city improvement in 10 years. Much of the construction work is complete. The extension of Wacker drive to the lake shore will not be undertaken at present. Only half of the Randolph street viaduct, four trafic lanes and a sidewalk, will be built by the park district. The Michigan Central and Illinois Central railroads are financially unable to build their half now.

Ickes also agreed to lend the park district $6,000,000 for other park projects if the purchase of park bonds as security was acceptable to government departments involved. Dunham felt sure the deal would be. In addition, the PWA granted $2,000,000 for building nine public schools. The park district has had $41,450,011 in WPA projects approved. It will pay $7,706,477 of this from its own funds, part of which are for the bridge construction. [See Works in Washington.]

Budgets.

County and city officials began to worry over their 1936 budgets last week. They face the necessity of reducing expenses of local government, but find they are unable to do so. Thus Controler Robert J. Upham estimated a 1936 city budget of $50,781,743 would be submitted to the finance committee Monday. This is $1,065,295 over 1935. Deputy Controler Michael J. O'Connor estimated that 1936 county revenues would be $18,951,322. County Board President Clayton F. Smith said: "This board is determined to live within its income in 1936." County expenditures in 1935 totaled $19,423,083.

Insolvency has been freely predicted for both city and county if department chiefs don't make sharp reductions. The danger was summed up by Commissioner Daniel Ryan: "If we don't cut way down we'll have payless pay days for county employés by next July." The demand for larger appropriations to assure service was emphasized by Deputy Assessor Edward McCabe, who added: "There will be payless pay days by September, even if reductions are made."

Higher taxes were seen as the disastrous outcome if budgets don't match incomes. Delinquent taxes are at the root of the trouble. County Treasurer Joseph L. Gill pushed his campaign of tax suits. Cook county fought off a downstate legislative attempt to tax it 7 millions for poor relief.

One of the departments that demanded a bigger budget was the board of education. It still cannot meet its December pay roll.

News-Names

At a literary breakfast given in New York on Tuesday by Carl Van Doren, Donald Culrose Peattie was awarded the gold medal of the Limited Editions club for having written "the American book most likely to become a classic." The book is "An Almanac for Moderns." Mr. Peattie is a son of the late Robert Burns Peattie, long a member of THE TRIBUNE staf, and the late Mrs. Elia W. Peattie, for 20 years literary editor of THE TRIBUNE. His wife is Louise Redfield Peattie, novelist.

The prince of Wales has set many styles in men's dress. Some years ago he appeared in baggy trousers, having merely neglected to have them pressed. Baggy and ample trousers became the vogue. Last week the duchess of Kent appeared wearing a Grecian evening gown. Modistes say this will start a fashion.

Ishbel MacDonald plans to operate a country inn. She is the daughter of Ramsay MacDonald, former British prime minister. Miss MacDonald is negotiating for the Old Plow inn, Speen, near Wycombe, Buckingham.

The Colorado Supreme court on Monday reinstated Judge Ben Lindsey to the Colorado bar. He was disbarred a few years ago on charges of accepting $47,500 in a settlement of the W. E. D. Stokes estate. He went to California and last year was elected a judge in Los Angeles. The reinstatement came on his 66th birthday. Judge Lindsey became famous as a Juvenile court judge in Denver.

Max Mason, former president of the University of Chicago, announced in New York Wednesday that he would retire soon from the presidency of the Rockefeller foundation. He wants to devote more time to personal work.

Friends of former King Alfonso of Spain remarked last week that he expects to become a grandfather twice in 1936. They said his eldest daughter, Beatrice, wife of Prince Allesandro Torlonia, expects the stork in February, and the wife of his second son, Jaime, is expecting for April.

Police of Elkton, Md., locked handcuffs on Ghaffar Djalal, a speeder, Wednesday. He is minister to the United States from Iraq. Police charged that he pushed one policeman from his running board. In court Mr. Djalal was discharged, having diplomatic immunity, but demanded the police be punished. [See Main News Section.]

On her arrival in New York on Wednesday, Ganna Walska, concert singer, told reporters she is finishing her autobiography. She said she would mention Harold F. McCormick, her former husband. They're still friends, she said, but won't remarry.

Prof. James H. Breasted, noted Chicago scholar, was taken off the steamship Conte di Savoia at New York Thursday, suffering from malaria. His condition was reported better yesterday. Prof. Breasted had been to Egypt and to Italy in connection with his Egyptological investigations. He is 70 years old.

Reviews of the week in finance and general business and also of sports are to be found in the finance and sports sections.

Politics

Although Italy and Ethiopia are fighting, neither country has declared a war. So with the several candidates for the Republican nomination for President. Personally or through their friends they are fighting for the nomination. None has yet declared for it.

However, one of them, Senator William E. Borah, was shoved more into the open last week. A group of New York business and professional men met on Monday and announced they would start a Borah-for-President campaign on Dec. 11. On the same day Borah's friends hinted that he would enter the Illinois primary as a candidate against Frank Knox of Chicago. Borah was born in Illinois. On Thursday Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, a possible candidate, issued a statement in Washington saying Borah ought to be the Republican candidate.

At Topeka, Kas., on Tuesday young Republicans, following the Borah lead, said they would start a campaign for Gov. Alfred M. Landon, a candidate.

Independents and Republicans, and even some Democrats, whacked the Roosevelt New Deal last week. Republican western headquarters in Chicago on Sunday asserted the New Deal's potato control act might soon put potatoes in the luxury class. [See AAA.] Members of the United States Chamber of Commerce, now voting in a referendum on New Deal policies, were shown Monday to be heavily against them. Former Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas asserted in Chicago Tuesday that New Deal miracles would not cure the country's ailments. In Chicago that night Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland attacked New Deal tinkering with the constitution. Ogden L. Mills, former secretary of the treasury, in New York warned of New Deal dangers.

Democratic activities were confined mainly to President Roosevelt and his political manager, Postmaster General James Farley. The President spoke in Atlanta Friday. [See President.] He will speak before a farm group in Chicago on Dec. 9. That day he will receive an honorary degree at Notre Dame university, South Bend, Ind. Farley, completing a trip through the west, said the west would vote for Roosevelt.

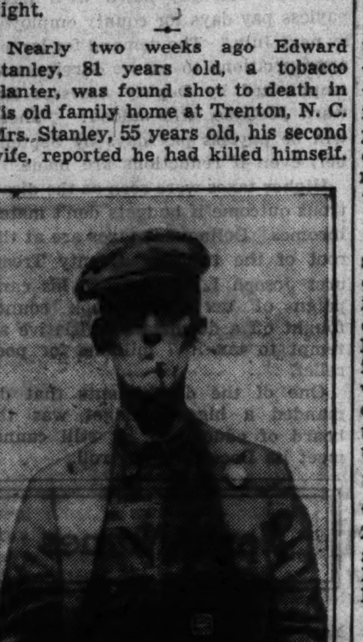
Mayor Kelly said Friday he would try to bring both national conventions to Chicago. He will coöperate with a citizens' committee to that purpose. Yesterday President Roosevelt was reported as wanting the Democratic convention in Philadelphia.

President Harold W. Dodds of Princeton university, speaking at Providence, R. I., Tuesday warned against a growing federal influence on cities.

Crime

Peace officers of Oklahoma City were sorry that Chester Comer died, even though a constable shot him, a confessed murderer. Comer left unsolved a bundle of mysteries. The 25 year old oil worker was wounded five times in a gun fight Monday. That night he mumbled a confession that he was a hitch-hike killer, that he had slain Ray Evans, a lawyer of Shawnee; L. A. Simpson, a farmer, and Simpson's young son, Warren. "Three bodies—O, piles of bodies," he mumbled. Physicians did all they could to revive Comer, but he died Wednesday night.

Nearly two weeks ago Edward Stanley, 81 years old, a tobacco planter, was found shot to death in his old family home at Trenton, N. C. Mrs. Stanley, 55 years old, his second wife, reported he had killed himself.



Herbert Stanley.
[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Police doubted this. They arrested Stanley's son, Herbert Stanley, 55 years old. Last Tuesday he reputedly confessed killing his father, his motive being a desire to marry his stepmother.

Occasionally a minor murder develops big political disturbances. About 10 years ago Chicago got a political overhauling because of the murder of Octavius C. Granady. Brooklyn, N. Y., is now disturbed and has been for months over the murder of Sam Druckman, a trucking clerk. He was killed last March in the garage of Meyer Luckman, who with his nephew, Morris, and Fred Hull was found in the garage. They said a gang had murdered Druckman. District Attorney William Geoghan investigated. The grand jury refused to indict the Luckmans. At the same time a detective charged a $100,000 bribe had been offered police to forget the case. The case developed politically. Geoghan, running for reëlection, was charged by his opponent, Joseph McGoldrick, with whitewashing the case. Geoghan won out, anyhow. He reopened the investigation. Last Tuesday the grand jury indicted the Luckmans and others. The next day Gov. Herbert Lehman entered the case. He will make a thorough inquiry, he said.

England's so-called terror man was sentenced to death for murder at Winchester, England, on Wednesday. He is Arthur Charles Mortimer, a lance corporal. Prosecutors showed that he killed a girl cyclist while he was driving a stolen automobile. His victim was Mrs. Phyllis Mary Oakes, 20 years old, a poet. Police said he had tried to kill three other girls by hitting them with a car.

Lillian F. Hartnett, a former policewoman of Buffalo, N. Y., must serve 25 to 30 years in prison for second degree murder. She was sentenced at Phoenix, Ariz., on Monday for the killing of Alice E. Rasp.

Jesse Livermore Jr., 16 years old, shot by his mother, Mrs. Dorothea Livermore Longcope, Friday, gained a bit yesterday in his fight for life. He is the son and she the divorced wife of the stock market plunger. The shooting occurred in their home at Santa Barbara, Cal. She scolded him for drinking liquor, particularly for drinking it out of a bottle. "I'd rather see you dead than drinking that way," she said. He handed her a rifle. She shot him. In spite of the boy's slight gain yesterday doctors feared he might die. [See main news section.]

Mrs. Etta Reisman, 35 years old, modishly dressed, appeared in Queens county court, New York, on Monday to answer a charge of murder. Her trial was continued to Dec. 9. Last Aug. 14 she shot and killed Miss Virginia Seigh, 23 years old, blonde secretary to her husband, Arthur Reisman, owner of a chain of beauty shops. Mrs. Reisman confronted Miss Seigh at the Reisman home. "Is it true that you love my husband?" she asked. The young woman said it was. Mrs. Reisman shot and killed her.

Medicine

The New York Academy of Medicine reported last week that success in keratoplasty [the grafting of the transparent covering of one eye on another] has been achieved for the first time in humans. Experimentation has been conducted for 40 years, but only recently were surgeons able to transplant the cornea of the eye from one animal to another. Some months ago Freeman Hall of Iowa, who lost sight of one eye in an industrial accident, underwent an operation by Dr. Ramon Castroviejo at Columbia medical center. Hall can now see to a limited extent with the injured eye. A scientist who lost his sight in a laboratory accident was the second case. The corneas of both eyes were replaced and he can now see sufficiently to go about unaided.

A phenomenon of stuttering was described by Hazle Geniesse in the magazine Science. Experiments with 24 stutterers in the biolinguistics laboratory of the University of Michigan showed from partial to complete disappearance of their voice impediment when they spoke while walking on hands and feet.

Dr. Harry P. Blaber, Catholic missionary and physician to a Chinese leper colony, married Constance White, a nurse, in New York. Then they left for the orient, where they will continue his leprosy ministrations.

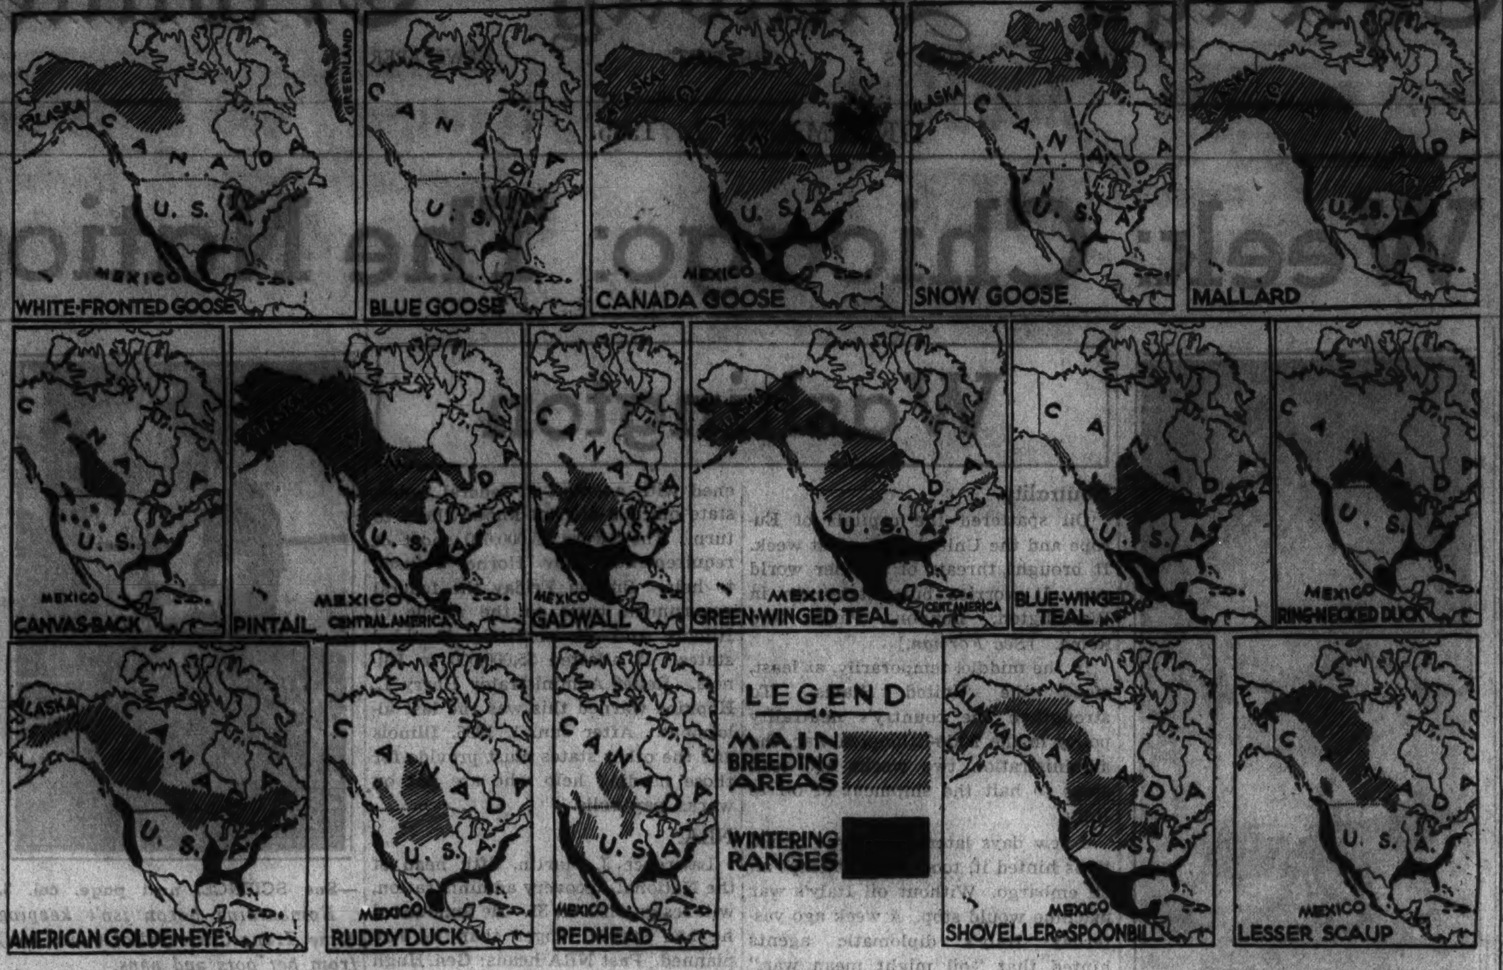
TED LEWIS.

Ted [Is Everybody Happy?] Lewis, vaudeville star and orchestra leader, reported to Los Angeles police Thursday that some one had stolen his clarinet. He had owned it for 20 years. Phonograph records have carried its syncopated notes into thousands of homes.

Father of Movies

One winter night in 1895 the patrons in a popular café in Paris sat back in their chairs and faced a white sheet tacked on a wall. They had come to see something new—a cinema, or moving pictures. Lights went out. Suddenly a locomotive appeared in motion on the screen. It approached closer and closer, grew larger and larger. The audience fell back in fear. Thus was born the motion picture in France, following by two years Edison's kinetoscope. It was the work of Louis Lumiere, France's "father of the movies," first maker of photographic film. In recognition of his invention the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors' Association of America presented a scroll to M. Lumiere. The occasion was the 40th anniversary of his café picture. The presentation was by Harold Smith.

Where the Wild Fowl Spend Their Seasons



Science

Great Britain's industrialization of the science of changing coal into oil was interpreted last week as having a revolutionary effect on the kingdom's world political and economic relations. Before the Institute of Fuel in London, Kenneth Gordon, chief research engineer, gave the first public explanation of the $25,000,000 Billingham factory. There, Gordon said, 9,500 men were converting coal into oil at the rate of 40,000 tons a day. The process is one of compounding the carbonic coal with hydrogen, the other element in petroleum. Three tons of crude oil or one ton of gasoline can be extracted from five tons of coal.

In war Great Britain would be able to isolate itself to a large extent from foreign oil supplies. Lack of domestic oil is why Italy threatens a European war if subjected to an oil embargo. [See Foreign.]

A Chicago expert saw commercial production as insignificant to America. He said American technologists investigated the field five years ago. They found that as long as this country's huge supply of natural oil exists, there is no advantage in a synthetic source three times as expensive. The chemist said that peacetime England could still import its oil more cheaply.

Copper, sulphur, and celluloid each exploded violently. Wood, rubber, cloth, and paper turned into hard, horny materials. Red phosphorus turned black, and blue dye lost its color. Soft graphite imbedded itself in steel, but approached no nearer its elementary relative, the diamond. Such were the results Dr. P. W. Bridgeman of Harvard's physics laboratory reported after experimenting with a new compression machine. This, a piston and anvil arrangement, can produce pressure up to 1½ million pounds per square inch. Dr. Bridgeman believed the pressure duplicated conditions hundreds of miles down in the earth.

Discovery of the first blue pigment which will not change color when subject to acid or alkali was reported by the Imperial Chemical industries of London. Named Monastral fast blue, it is the first new blue pigment discovered in the last century. The pigment exceeds other blues in brilliance and is termed of importance to the printing ink industry.

Evidence of a double atomic weight for oxygen threatening to derange the entire atomic weight standard was announced by Prof. Malcolm Dole, Northwestern university chemist. Dole was comparing water from Lake Michigan and Nevada when he found indication of a variation. Free oxygen, the standard for all elements, is supposed to have an atomic weight of 16. Dole's computations changed this to 16.00005. He found oxygen as a component of water to weigh 16.

Modest Mme. Irene Curie-Joliot, daughter of the discoverers of radium, and her husband, Frederic Joliot, last year discovered artificial radioactivity and two weeks ago won the $40,000 Nobel prize for chemistry. Any belief that Mme. Joliot was a wife far removed from the feminine world of pots and pans was discounted when reporters, in the wake of a flood of congratulations which continued last week, found her cooking a meal for her family just as aptly as she knocks radiant neutrons from boron with a bombardment of alpha rays.

Hunting is almost as dangerous for the hunters as for the hunted. An unofficial survey shows that at least 87 hunters were killed and many more wounded during the northern hunting season just closed.

Most of the victims were duck and deer hunters. New York state had the highest toll with 18 dead and 84 wounded. Next came Maine and Minnesota with 13 and 10 dead, respectively. Ohio and Wisconsin reported 5 each; Iowa, South Dakota, and Rhode Island, 4 each; Kansas, 3, and Michigan and Utah, 2 each. The middle west had the highest sectional rating with 33 deaths.

Stringent hunting regulations established by the United States biological survey will result in the saving of countless numbers of ducks and geese during the 1935-'36 season. Reports tell of a larger duck population than America had last year and fewer birds being killed by hunters.

Estimates of the size of the waterfowl migration now headed for southern waters vary from 30,000,000 to 60,000,000.

The map on this page shows the breeding and wintering ranges of some of the best known species of ducks and geese in America. The birds have several favorite migration routes when they start for the south, with the eastern seacoast, the Mississippi river, and the western sea coast three principal favorites. Millions of waterfowl that nested in the central provinces of Canada use the Mississippi valley as their flyway, thus providing a big army of waterfowl hunters in the middle west with excellent sport during the open season.

Millions of migrating waterfowl use the gulf coast of the United States and Mexico as a winter resort. The mallard duck, one of the most abundant and popular species, winters in the tidal flats of the gulf coast. The blue goose, a bird that nests far north, is another that chooses the Louisiana marshes as a place to spend the coldest months of the year.

Foreign Notes

Revolt broke out in Brazil last Sunday. The center of the disturbance was the eastern tip of South America's bulge toward Africa. Communists were blamed for the trouble. President Getulio Vargas, who gained his office as the result of a revolution five years ago, immediately declared a state of siege throughout the country. Government troops shelled the rebels out of the cities they had taken over and gained the upper hand in the affected states—Rio Grande do Norte, Parahyba, Pernambuco, and Alagoas. The Graf Zeppelin, unable to land at Recife, Pernambuco, was forced to drift along the coast until the revolt was over. At the end of the week the Graf landed while troops were chasing the rebels into the wilds of the north.

At Las Carboneras, Mexico, rebels were lynching a man. The rope was about his neck. He had been jerked from the ground several times. Federal airplanes suddenly appeared. They dropped bombs nearby. The rebels fled. The man survived.

Anti-Semitic riots in Poland have resulted in the closing of the universities at Warsaw and Lwow. Monday the rector of the University of Poznan refused to close the school though Jewish students were beaten by other students. He advised the Jews to stay out of school for two days. Shop windows were smashed and Jews beaten in riots at Lwow and Klobuck.

George II., king of Greece, returned to his throne Monday. He had been in exile for 12 years. Gen. George Kondylis, who recently overthrew the republican government to pave the way for George to return, resigned as regent. The king received a wild welcome in Athens. Wednesday he signed a decree granting a general pardon to those who took part in the revolt last spring. In Paris Eleutherios Venizelos, former premier and leader of the revolt, said: "I am not going back. It would not be wise." With many other leaders of the uprising he has been under sentence of death.

The Liberal government which has ruled the province of Quebec, Canada, for the last 38 years was voted back into office last Monday. Women were not allowed to vote. Inhabitants of Quebec feel that the woman's place is in the home.

The newly elected British parliament opened last Tuesday. Two days were required to swear in the members of the house of commons. The formal, ceremonial opening will be held next Tuesday. Last week, as usual, there were not enough seats to go around for the members of the house. The American born Lady Astor [Nancy Langhorne of Greenwood, Va.] was the first woman in the house when she took her seat in 1919. She became angry when the house opened on Tuesday. A newly elected Laborite grabbed the seat she occupied during the last session. With her when she was sworn in was her eldest child, William Waldorf Astor, 28 years old, heir to the Astor viscounty. He took his seat for the first time as a member of parliament. Henry Channon, the son of Mrs. Westover Channon of Chicago, and Bartle Bull, husband of Rosemary Baur of Chicago, were sworn in at the same time.

The French government charges Gaston Bonnaure, a former member of parliament, with receiving 640,000 francs [about $42,000] in the Stavisky pawnshop swindles. He claims the money was paid to him for legal services, but the government says he got it fraudulently. Last week, with 19 other defendants, he sat through the third week of the trial of those accused of having aided Stavisky in his schemes.

Commander Priolle, who shot the man who assassinated King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France in Marseilles, was back on duty last week. The three men accused of aiding the assassin were back in their cells waiting for their trial to be reopened next January. In Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, newspapers attacked the French government for allowing the trial to be delayed.

Lawyers

Forty members of the Lawyers' Security league called on Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes at his office to see if he wouldn't assign a few odd jobs to 200 unemployed lawyers. Hodes kept them waiting and then refused to see any one without an appointment. Lieut. Make Mills appeared on the scene with a riot squad to put them out. This was done. League Secretary Hart E. Baker announced he would ask the Chicago bar association to investigate the act. The next day Hodes said that the league had called a meeting at his office without notifying him and he had announced he would renew the discussion by appointment. He denied being impolite.

Religion

"For baptism you have to have water, and plenty of water. The Lord never told us that sprinkling was baptism," said William Hawk, 70 years old, in Mount Carroll, Ill., Monday. With 21 other older members of the First Christian church of Thompson, Ill., he was testifying in court against the church pastor, the Rev. David E. Todd, 32 years old. The Rev. Todd had scandalized Hawk and his companions by the way he baptized new members of the church. The group wanted Circuit Judge Albert Manus, hearing the case without a jury, to issue an injunction that would keep the Rev. Todd and some of his followers out of the church. Wednesday the pastor spent two hours on the witness stand telling the judge why his way of baptizing is all right. The judge agreed with him.

Near Monticello, Utah, a religious sect known as the Truth Cult is settled in the desert. There, last February, Mrs. Edith Pashals died. Ever since then members of the cult have carefully preserved her body in salt baths. Last Tuesday Mrs. Marie Ogden, one of the leaders in the cult, announced that they expect Mrs. Pashals to come back to life any time.

John Buchan, Lord Tweedsmuir, is the first governor general in Canadian history who is not a member of the Anglican [high Episcopalian] church. Like most Scotchmen he is a Presbyterian. Presbyterians in Montreal, Que., a predominantly Catholic city, have been having a hard time filling their new church of St. Andrew and St. Paul. All other governors general attended the Anglican Christ church cathedral. Last Sunday St. Andrew and St. Paul was jammed to the doors when Lord Tweedsmuir attended services there.

Thanks Day

Grateful for their first big harvest, the Pilgrims at Plymouth celebrated a day of thanksgiving on Dec. 13, 1621. Fifty-five white men and women and 90 Indians feasted that day. Days of thanksgiving after hardships, disasters or wars were not uncommon. The early Jews and Greeks had them. Oliver Cromwell proclaimed one after the defeat of the Spanish armada. The Pilgrim thanksgiving possessed a different flavor. The idea spread. In 1630 the Massachusetts Bay colony observed Thanksgiving day. From then until 1680 there were about twenty such days. In 1789 Washington proclaimed Nov. 26 as the national Thanksgiving day. After a while a break in the holiday occurred. Different states observed the Thanksgiving on different days. It was Lincoln who finally established a definite date—the last Thursday of November—carrying out Washington's proclamation. Last Thursday was Thanksgiving.

Chicagoland

Wisconsin.

Mayors of Wisconsin cities who asked Gov. La Follette to call a special session to vote more relief funds were lectured by the governor for the senate defeat of his $109,000,000 works bill. "It's no use," he said. . . . Gust Domres, Underhill, Wis., arrested on a liquor charge, walked 200 miles to Milwaukee to be present at his trial. Federal Judge F. A. Geiger sentenced him to only one day in jail. . . . George Wilson and John Troutmann, northern Oconto hunters, were convicted of the illegal killing of deer in a campaign to stop market hunting in the state. . . . Charles D. Stewart, Hartford, Conn., magazine essayist, in declining to accept honorary appointment as consultant on a federal project to encourage writers, advised the Wisconsin state board there are too many writers now; that the project is utterly foolish. . . . The state public service commission at Madison Wednesday ordered a reduction in electric rates which it says will save $527,000 a year to 27,246 commercial users of electricity in Milwaukee. . . . Racine county supervisors refused Wednesday to vote $320,000 in bonds to match the same amount of federal funds to finish constructing a four lane federal highway 41 from Milwaukee to Chicago through Racine county. . . . The Wisconsin and Milwaukee Industrial exposition, which closed an eight day exhibit at the Milwaukee Auditorium, reported a million dollars in sales were made, although the purpose of the exhibition was purely educational.

Iowa.

Burglars stole $600 worth of merchandise from the Thompson Barber Supply company, Sioux City. . . . Amelita Galli-Curci and her husband, Homer Samuels, attended the opera "Aida" in Des Moines. On the way home to California, they heard about the performance and decided to stop. . . . The Fort Dodge Community Chest fund passed its $30,000 goal—the first time since 1930. . . . Fred Freese of Iowa Falls, who was arrested while allegedly preparing to leap from a bridge in Des Moines, was turned over to relatives. . . . Because his automobile had figured in two accidents in eight months, James Reddish, 19 years old, of Davenport, surrendered his Iowa driving license. "I'm jinxed and don't want any more to do with automobiles," he explained. . . . By a vote of nearly two to one, Sioux City rejected proposals for the building of a municipal electric plant and distribution system. . . . Mike Mercurio, an alleged bootlegger, went on trial in Des Moines on a charge of perjury. The charge is based on his testimony before a grand jury that he once bought 20,000 state liquor seals for $1,000 from Bernard E. Manley, chairman of the Iowa liquor commission. Manley was tried on this charge and found not guilty. . . . Suspended sentences of 10 days were given to Cyrus A. Leland Jr. and Elmer True, charged with firing guns within the city limits of Des Moines. . . . Gov. Clyde Herring of Iowa, and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota bet a pig a few weeks ago on the Minnesota-Iowa football game. Minnesota won. Virgil Case, a reformer, heard about this. He swore out a complaint against Gov. Herring, charging him with violating the state gaming laws. After a long hearing Judge J. E. Mershon refused to allow prosecution.

Indiana.

Most of the out of town visitors to Crown Hill cemetery, on the edge of Indianapolis, wind up at the grave of John Dillinger, America's No. 1 desperado. But most of them, according to Ed Middleton, an attendant, explain they really want to see where James Whitcomb Riley, famous poet, is buried. "But they go to Dillinger's grave, not Riley's," he adds. . . . William W. Mesel Jr. won $2,000 damages from the town of Geneva. This amounts to a $2 tax on each resident of the town. Mesel fell against an alley obstruction. . . . Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, senior scientist and second in command of the second Byrd expedition to Little America, spoke in South Bend. The thermometer showed 30 degrees above zero. "Rather warm," he said. . . . Mrs. William Foker, 71 years old, died at her home in Rochester on the eve of her 53d wedding anniversary. . . . Christopher Fasnacht, 85, a prominent figure in the development of South Bend, died in his South Bend home. . . . George Evans of Tipton, father of six children, was sentenced to prison for two to fourteen years for forging a $12 check. . . . A. C. Brown, a rural mail carrier near Holton, Ripley county, became Indiana's 1935 corn king when the Indiana Corn Growers' association announced that his official yield was 143.4 bushels per acre. . . . Sherif Chester Braselton, Princeton, went on a tiger hunt. Residents in the Wabash river lowlands reported seeing an animal that resembled a tiger.

Michigan.

The twenty-seventh annual auto show in Grand Rapids attracted 44,000 persons—a record. . . . The state administrative board, Lansing, ordered a detailed survey of Michigan's natural gas resources. Many companies are seeking rights to build pipelines from the gas producing areas to urban centers. . . . Kalamazoo oversubscribed its community chest with donations of $118,340. The goal was $115,000. . . . Howard Missler, 16 years old, of Flint, ended a two day crime career by killing himself. . . . John Koenig of Glendora celebrated his 108th birthday by walking around the family farm and eating a turkey dinner. . . . Frank Gott was sentenced at Augusta to serve 50 days in jail for driving his car while drunk. He hitch hiked 18 miles to Kalamazoo to serve the sentence. . . . The state liquor control commission approved a proposal to allow displays of whiskies and gins in showcases and store windows because "the people have a right to see what they are buying." . . . Mrs. Martha Stebbins, 69 years old, wife of E. B. Stebbins, associate editor of the Michigan Tradesman, died at Lakeview. . . . The Michigan Anti-Saloon league opened a campaign to enroll more than 100,000 petitioners for drastic tightening up of present liquor regulations. . . . The Lennon State bank was taken over by the state banking department. Later Henry Scott, assistant cashier, was charged with embezzling $14,000. Prosecutors said Scott admitted taking the money because he couldn't live on his "salary of $50 a month."

Education

Most American schoolboys would not carry an umbrella, nor would they wear top hats. They would be afraid of being called sissy. English schoolboys make up for both by going garterless. Boys of Westminster school in London, top hatted and umbrellaed, cheered lustily as their football team defeated Army Crusaders in London recently. In their excitement their socks progressed toward their shoe tops.

Bennett Y. Ryan, 22 years old, a junior at Harvard college and the son of a wealthy New York publisher, was expelled from the school last Tuesday. The previous Saturday he had been found guilty of assault and battery on Frank Foster, 65, janitor of a college dormitory. Dean A. C. Hanford called it "an instance of grave misconduct by a student while under the influence of liquor." Ryan will face a possible sentence of two and a half years in prison next Tuesday. Foster lost an eye as the result of the beating he received.

G. A. R. BLUEBIRD.

While 900 persons looked on, Col. Ira R. Wildman, nearly 90 years old, last of Danbury's civil war veterans, and Mrs. Ella C. Bond of Oshkosh, Wis., were married in Danbury, Conn., Wednesday. A niece of Gen. A. E. Burnside of civil war fame, she is known in G. A. R. circles as the Bluebird of the G. A. R., because she always dresses in blue.

NINTH DIVORCE.

Morris Wishnow, Chicago, will soon be able to marry a tenth time if he wishes. Judge Joseph Sabath on Tuesday granted a divorce to Mrs. Esther Wishnow, 50 years old, who said she was his ninth wife. They were married in 1932. She charged cruelty. The proceedings were conducted in Yiddish. Later Wishnow promised to let Mrs. Wishnow get a rabbinical divorce to make the action complete.

Deaths

Appel, Charles Louis, 63, Elyria, O., Friday. He was the father of Lila Lee, movie actress, and former owner of the North Side Turner hall in Chicago.

Bensinger, Benjamin E., 67, Chicago, Wednesday. He was chairman of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company and president of the Lake Shore Country club.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

HALF OF WORLD GOLD MAY BE AMASSED IN U. S.

Ten Billion by End of Year Predicted.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Resumption of the heavy gold inflow during recent weeks led treasury officials to forecast today a hoard of $10,000,000,000 by the end of the year. This amount, however, is only $160,000,000 in excess of the total now in hand.

Its accumulation even before the end of the year seemed likely should the present rate of the inflow, which has added $600,000,000 in the last 11 weeks, be maintained. Coincidently, officials said the time was rapidly approaching when the United States would own half the gold of the world. Since revaluation at $35 an ounce, the world's supply of the metal is placed at about $23,500,000,000.

Represents Foreign Capital.

Observers pointed out that the inward flow has been brought about without direct encouragement from this country. Authorities said the heavy movement represented foreign capital. It was pointed out that the favorable trade balance of the United States in no way approached the heavy additions to its gold stocks. During the first nine months of the present year this favorable balance was about $65,000,000 which, to a certain extent, was offset by tourist expenditures in Europe.

Treasury officials assert internal disturbances in Europe have induced many Americans to return the gold they hold abroad to home shores, although much of the incoming gold consists of foreigners' funds which they are sending here for safety or for American investment.

Idle Money Is Increased.

The foremost result of the incoming tide has been an increase in the idle capital of commercial banks which reflects itself in balances with federal reserve institutions of $3,070,000,000 more than the law requires. The objection to present excess reserves is that they would be unmanageable in the event of a credit boom. Observers point out the present figure could easily be multiplied by ten on the basis of loans. The reserve system has the machinery to block such an eventuality, however, as officials may change loan requirements.

Some economists believe the gold situation will right itself with the coming of political calmness in Europe. Such an occurence, they say, would immediately halt the gold inflow and might conceivably start a movement in the opposite direction.

BANKS FINANCE GOLD SHIPMENTS OUT OF EUROPE

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Curiosity aroused in some quarters by the disclosure in this week's federal reserve report of a jump of $66,000,000 in the loans of leading New York banks to "other banks" was dismissed today with the explanation that the increase was due mainly, if not entirely, to loans made to finance the shipments of gold here from Europe.

Some observers had thought the "other banks" might be European institutions offering a refuge to American capital alarmed over the financial jugglery of the New Deal magicians. Authorities said, however, the "others" were merely small banking institutions for the most part—many of them private banks catering to alien born sections of the city's population—drawing on larger banks for funds with which to finance such consignments of the westward flowing stream of gold as may be coming their way.

ORDERS KEEPING INLAND STEEL'S PLANTS ACTIVE

The Inland Steel company has postponed until after Christmas the shutdown of several of its open harth furnaces. The company had planned to shut down eight furnaces for repair this week, but because of the pressure of current business the delay was decided on.

The plan had called for reducing the company's operations during the next three weeks to about 65 per cent of capacity. Instead the company will operate through the period at about 85 per cent of capacity with 24 of its 27 furnaces active.

Kermit Roosevelt Resigns as Director of Atlas Tack

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Kermit Roosevelt, Goodhue Livingston Jr., and Arthur Greene have resigned as directors of the Atlas Tack corporation, the New York Stock exchange announced today. Herbert J. Adair and John A. McNaughton were elected to the board, the former being named chairman. J. A. M. Adair was elected vice president. H. J. Adair is listed as chairman of the board of the Orange Crush company, of Chicago, while J. A. M. Adair appears in the list of executives of other Washington and Baltimore corporations.

Borden Company Orders Trucks Costing $350,000

The Borden company has given an order for 300 delivery trucks, costing more than $350,000, to the Continental-Divco company, wholly owned subsidiary of Continental Motors corporation, it was announced yesterday. Work has begun on the order.

SALES OF JAPANESE COTTON CLOTH TO U. S. INCREASE SEVEN-FOLD

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Seven times as much Japanese cotton cloth entered the United States in October as was imported during the corresponding month last year, but its value was only five times as much, the department of commerce reported today. The October comparison was about in line with the total importation for the first ten months of this year, compared to the similar period of 1934.

The continued increase in Japanese importations has caused considerable apprehension among domestic textile interests, and efforts are being made by the state department to persuade Japanese exporters voluntarily to limit their shipments to this country. Such an agreement has already been worked out in regard to exportations to the Philippine islands.

During October Japan sent to the United States 3,668,000 square yards of cotton cloth, valued at $162,000. In the corresponding month of 1934 imports from Japan amounted to 567,000 square yards, with a value of $31,000.

LUMBER MEN ASK CANADIAN TRADE TREATY REVISION

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—After canvassing the sentiment of northwest lumber interests, Senator McNary [Rep., Ore.] said today he would ask the state department to seek a three point modification of the Canadian-American trade agreement to prevent "injury" to domestic timber growers and lumber millers.

W. B. Greeley, head of the West Coast Lumbermen's association, telegraphed McNary efforts should be directed at obtaining for American shippers the same tarif preferential in British Empire markets that Canada now enjoys under the Ottawa treaty signed several years ago.

Greeley also asked that the annual quota of 250,000,000 board feet of fir and hemlock which Canada could ship to the United States under the Canadian-American reciprocal agreement be modified to prohibit importation of more than 25,000,000 feet in any one month in order to prevent flooding the domestic market. A third suggested point of revision was a limitation on lumber shipments by water to vessels of Canadian and American registry.

NOVEMBER BANK CLEARINGS HERE EXCEED YEAR AGO

Chicago bank clearings rose to $1,207,100,000 in November from $1,190,600,000 in the preceding month, according to figures made public yesterday. In November, 1934, clearings amounted to $912,900,000.

Clearings for last week which included Thanksgiving, were $252,200,000, against $292,900,000 in the preceding week and $198,700,000 for the corresponding period last year.

The New York clearing house reported clearings for last week at $3,323,435,000, compared with $3,809,452,000 in the preceding week.

Railroad Rates on Steel from Chicago Are Upheld

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission held today that railroad freight rates on iron and steel from Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, and St. Louis to Omaha, Sioux City, Ia., Sioux City, S. D., and Aberdeen, S. D., were not unduly prejudicial. Commercial organizations of the four cities complained that under the present rate their jobbers were forced to pay higher rates on carload shipments to Omaha and less than carload shipments out of Omaha than jobbers shipping less than carload direct for the whole distance.

Markets Wary of Roosevelt's Economy Talk

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Action of the markets during the last two days indicated that business was taking with a grain of salt President Roosevelt's address at Atlanta on Friday in which he stated that the peak of the federal government's big spending and borrowing program had been passed.

The three organizations which business men use as their chief mouthpieces—the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, and the American Bankers' association—have all gone on record recently as saying that reduction of government expenditures would be the greatest single factor in promoting recovery.

It would seem, in view of these pronouncements, that assurance by the President that federal spending was to be curtailed would cheer business men more than anything else he could do. The lack of enthusiasm with which business and finance greeted the President's promise, therefore, was interpreted as meaning that they were dubious about its fulfilment.

Their incredulity is based largely upon their observation of the present rate of government spending, which has thrown government finance more deeply than ever into the red and which on Dec. 15 will push the federal debt above the thirty billion mark for the first time in history.

"We believe that one of the most serious dangers confronting the nation today is the illusion which appears to be widespread among portions of our people that government expenditure is of itself a cure for economic ills," said a resolution adopted at the recent annual convention of the American Bankers' association. "Definite efforts to return to a balanced national budget should be the prime consideration of sound fiscal policy."

On the same day that the President made his speech the National Association of Manufacturers' committee on governmental finance prepared a report saying that "the only sound policy for federal, state, and local governments to pursue is to cut expenses to meet reasonable taxes, thus permitting balancing of their budgets as soon as practicable."

Reserve Not Acting to Curb Speculation.

Stock traders and financial men have been puzzled by an Associated Press dispatch saying that the federal reserve board in Washington was setting machinery in motion to curb excess speculative activity in the stock market by reducing excess bank reserves. A check at the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago and later dispatches from Washington disclosed that the federal reserve board had not altered its "wait and see" policy regarding the stock market.

What had happened was that the reserve board had prepared detailed instructions concerning the methods by which member banks are required to calculate their reserve requirements. This was purely a formality, section 324B of the 1935 banking act having specified the methods.

Another provision of the 1935 act, section 207, gives the reserve board the power to increase the percentage of their time and demand deposits which commercial banks belonging to the reserve system are required to pledge with the reserve banks as security. The present required ratio is 3 per cent on time deposits for all banks, 13 per cent on demand deposits for banks in central reserve cities, 10 per cent in other reserve cities, and 7 per cent for banks in smaller communities. Under section 207 the reserve board may increase these ratios as much as double the present requirements.

Such an increase would absorb some of the unemployed bank funds and thereby lessen the pressure of idle money on the stock market. It would probably put a damper on speculative activity temporarily.

INDEX OF INDUSTRY RISES TO NEW PEAK SINCE JULY OF 1933

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Industrial activity, as measured by the Associated Press index, advanced today to the highest point since July, 1933, reflecting substantial gains in major sections of the nation's economic life.

The composite index, which is based on the latest weekly statistics available during the last seven days, reached 84.9 per cent of the 1929-30 average, compared with 83.4 per cent last week. The index, which is adjusted for seasonal variation with 1929-30 equal to 100, follows:

	Last week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.
Composite index	*84.9	83.4	62.8
Automobile production	*97.2	94.1	33.8
Steel mill activity	*74.3	72.1	37.0
Cotton mfg. activity	*100.7	98.0	92.7
Electric power production	104.9	105.5	95.1
Residential building	40.6	41.4	18.8

ALUMINUM SUIT FOR $9,000,000 IS FINALLY SETTLED

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Settlement of the Bausch Machine Tool company's $9,000,000 anti-trust law suit against the Aluminum Company of America was announced today. Amount of the settlement, which ended a seven year court battle, was not made public. Those familiar with the details, however, indicated that a relatively small sum was paid to the Bausch company.

The Bausch company sued the aluminum firm for $3,000,000, charging it had lost that much as a result of the defendant company's allegedly monopolistic practices. The Sherman anti-trust act provides for treble damages.

The case was tried twice, each side winning one victory, reversed on both occasions by the appellate courts. Attorneys indicated the cost that would be involved in a third trial was largely responsible for the settlement.

DIVIDEND TOTAL FOR NOVEMBER PEAK SINCE 1931

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Reflecting the improved earnings in business this year, dividends declared in November were the largest for any month since June, 1931, and the largest for a November since 1930.

The total was $401,523,897 for 827 corporations, compared with $166,625,453 for 757 companies the month before and $347,246,152 for 675 corporations in November, 1934. In November, 1930, payments voted aggregated $483,574,033 for 983 companies.

U. S. Judge Halts Tobacco Process Tax Collections

New Orleans, La., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Judge Rufus E. Foster, of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, today issued a decree staying collection of tobacco process taxes pending determination of constitutionality of the agricultural adjustment administration act by the United States Supreme court. The collection was stayed on petition of three New Orleans firms who failed to obtain an injunction against collection of the taxes.

Chevrolet Deliveries Set Record for 20 Day Period

WAR OUTLOOK BRINGS DECLINE IN GRAIN PRICES

Wheat Recedes More than Cent a Bushel.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Values established by Friday's advance in the wheat market faded yesterday when European news told of renewed efforts by Great Britain to patch up the dispute between Italy and other powers. A drop of more than a cent a bushel in all wheat futures in Chicago and a corresponding recession in prices in other world markets indicated the extent to which recent buying had been based on the prospect of an outbreak of war.

Commercial factors influencing the trend of prices have undergone little change in the last fortnight and bull operations that have been carried on have been predicated on the potentialities of the present tense international political situation.

Other Factors Weaken Market.

Other factors served to weaken the price structure yesterday. Deliveries begin Monday morning under the December futures contracts in Chicago. Brokers yesterday reported continued liquidation in this future in wheat as well as other grains. Traders are now shifting their holdings into later future contracts, although this failed to lend much support to deferred contracts in yesterday's market.

The December corn contract fell faster than other futures and closed 1⅛ cents a bushel lower, while the May future lost only ¾ cent a bushel. At its closing price of 97¼ cents a week earlier.

The decline in wheat values in Winnipeg was more pronounced than in either the Chicago or Liverpool markets. Losses recorded for the day in the Canadian market ranged as high as 1⅞ cents a bushel.

Canada Reported Selling Wheat.

Weakness in that market tended to support rumors that the Canadian wheat board has been a steady seller in the futures market recently. The board admits it is selling in the ordinary course of business, but added significance is given its present operations because of the change in personnel of the group last week. The board's operations are watched closely for any sign suggesting it has embarked on a program of liquidating the government's huge market holdings.

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Wk. ago.
Wheat	$0.97¼	$0.98⅛	$0.99⅞
Corn	.58⅝	.59⅛	.59⅜
Oats	.27⅞	.28⅛	.28⅝
Rye	.50⅝	.51⅝	.52⅝

Under the amended rules adopted recently members yesterday reported the deliveries they intend to make tomorrow under December contracts. An indicated 45,000 bushels of corn will be tendered, no deliveries of wheat were reported, prospective deliveries of rye are approximately 1,625,000 bushels and nearly 800,000 bushels of oats will be tendered.

SMALLER STEEL FIRMS UNLIKELY TO RAISE PRICES

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Dow, Jones & Co. said today there is not likely to be any move on the part of smaller steel makers to increase the price of steel in view of the action of big interests in definitly deciding against a boost at this time. This agency says there is "keen disappointment" in some steel circles over the decision of the large producers.

Two factors were cited by the agency as having a direct influence upon the large manufacturers. One was the position said to have been taken by automobile manufacturers that a price rise might slow down buying of new motor cars because it would be necessary to make a corresponding increase in the price of new models.

The other element centered around railroads, many of which are considering the purchase of rails and whose spokesman, the agency said, intimated increased steel costs would force them to revise their plans at least to the point of reducing tonnage to be bought.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Business Position Improves—Political Uncertainties Main Drawbacks—Middle West Utilities Gets New Start—Bankers Flout Roosevelt Debt Alibi.

Business, enjoying its Thanksgiving respite last Thursday, paused for stock taking and found its position the best in many ways since 1929, barring political uncertainties here and abroad. During the week steel works operations rose to 56 per cent of capacity, high point of the year, as automobile manufacturers pressed demands for delivery. Auto output receded slightly to approximately 83,000 units as the result of one less working day, but the volume was nearly eight times larger than last year.

Improved rail earnings found reflection in equipment purchases. Construction activity continued well ahead of 1934. Textile mills were busy. Factory employment moved back to levels of October, 1930. Farm income was the best since the same year. Brokerage houses enjoyed the largest volume of trading in years. Electric power production established its fifth consecutive all-time high mark at 1,953,119,000 kilowatt hours. Soft coal production climbed slightly to about 8,000,000 tons. Bank clearings soared 32 per cent over last year. Railroad car loadings scored a contra-seasonal rise to 643,503 cars, the first such increase in late November since 1925.

Uncertainties.

Behind these favorable business indices some uncertainties lurked. Unstemmed by higher rediscount rates was the continued drain on the gold reserves of France. [See "Foreign": Review section]. The partitioning of north China, the conflict in Ethiopia, oil export problems [See "Washington": Review section], impending legal decisions on the agricultural adjustment and utility acts, unbalanced federal budgets, fears of what the next congress may do, and the split in the ranks of labor combined to temper the business picture.

Stocks.

Trading in stocks continued active, bringing total volume for the month to the highest level since July, 1933. Prices slipped back, however, in one of the severest setbacks the market has suffered since it began climbing in March.

Despite favorable business news traders preferred to lighten commitments pending definite indication of whether business gains had been discounted. In addition affairs abroad injected an air of uncertainty.

Bonds were fairly quiet. Foreign exchange failed to attract a great deal of attention and changes were small. Gold bloc currencies which moved lower early in the week, recovered during the last two days.

Middle West.

Middle West Utilities company returned to corporate life Wednesday as the new Middle West corporation. Under jurisdiction of the courts since it was thrown into receivership April 15, 1932, at the collapse of the Insull system, the company's reorganization became a fact when Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson confirmed a plan of reorganization under section 77B of the bankruptcy laws.

A product of compromise, the reorganization came after many months of bitter wrangling among the various interests. Sitting in the dominant position were the bankers, who had advanced 27 millions in loans secured by collateral. They received four of the nine directorships and 1,710,000 of the 3,310,757 shares of new common stock to be issued by the new company. Principal creditors were the Bankers Trust Company of New York, Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, and First National bank of Chicago. Lesser figures were Central Republic Trust company and General Electric company.

Holders of the 40 million dollars in notes of the company got two directorships and 1,290,000 shares of stock.

Stockholders.

The 600,000 stockholders of the company also received some Thanksgiving consolation. For their $15,882,900 [par value] investment, common stockholders receive 158,829 shares—1 new for 100 old. For their $60,771,200 [par value] investment, preferred stockholders receive 151,928 shares—1 new for 4 old—and one directorship.

Equal amounts of stock are set aside for stockholders if they wish to use warrants given them for purchase of stock at $8, $9, and $10, respectively, in each of the next three years. This gives them some share in future prosperity, if any, of the company.

Investment.

Investment bankers reported further progress in their efforts to set up an organization for self-policing of their business to take the place occupied by a code under NRA before the blue eagle was shorn of its feathers by the Supreme court.

Francis A. Bonner, Chicago, vice chairman of the old code committee, announced formation of 17 district committees throughout the country. An organization committee was nearly ready to present a first draft of a proposed permanent plan. Nineteen hundred dealers accepted the plan tentatively.

This newly formed investment bankers' conference will set up a voluntary code of fair practices. The district committees will hear complaints in their areas and report to the full conference committee. The latter, in turn, will report findings to the Securities and Exchange commission.

SEC has given the movement its wholehearted blessing. It sees in the voluntary organization a chance to rid itself of much detail and minor unpleasantness. It professes no more desire than the dealers to haul every unscrupulous offender into the courts under its powers to supervise over the counter trading.

Not so enthusiastic, it is said, are municipal bond dealers. They are not under SEC supervision and most of them do not wish to take on any step-relationships.

Marshall Field.

Since the depression set in, Marshall Field & Co. suffered losses in its wholesale department. One exception was 1933 when sharply rising inventories resulted in a small profit. Last year a profit of $1,500,000 in the retail division was wiped out with a loss of $1,700,000 in wholesale.

Last week Chairman James O. McKinsey, instaled a month previously and charged with examining the company's structure and making needed changes, took action. The company will liquidate all lines in its wholesale department which were manufactured by other than company owned mills and plants. It will cease to be a jobber for others. Henceforward, said McKinsey, the big merchandise firm's wholesale depart-

UTILITIES HOLD GROUND AGAINST CONTROL BY U. S.

Majority Refuses to Heed New Law.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The solid front maintained by large utility holding companies against governmental efforts to compel their registration with the Securities and Exchange commission was held virtually intact throughout today on the eve of the deadline set by congress for compliance with the statute.

The only major holding units to give their reluctant compliance by the close of business today were the New England Power association and the New England Public Service company, the former a subsidiary of International Power and Paper company. Some other registration applications were expected but these were thought to be from small companies and having little bearing upon the constitutional challenge with which the SEC is confronted.

Utilities Holding Lines.

Representatives here of the larger holding companies felt certain there would be no break in the opposition's lines but the commission, according to previously announced plans, will remain open tomorrow to record any additional registration applications that may be received. After that, the SEC contends, companies not filing will be operating in violation of the law.

With the number of registration requests now at 25, of which only 20 were identified as to the names of the applicants, the commission was deluged throughout the day with further requests of holding companies for exemption from the law, by reason of their purely intrastate operation or because they were holding companies only incidentally. The number of such exemption applications officially recorded had reached 144 tonight. Actually the number of companies seeking exemption totaled several hundred, one application in many instances covering multitudes of subsidiary concerns.

In the forefront of applications for exemption today were the United

5 PROMISING STOCKS FOR RECOVERY
After careful research THE FINANCIAL WORLD has compiled a group of five moderately priced stocks which should appeal to long term investors seeking good values. Each stock had large earnings a few years ago and should repeat them. This analysis will appear in the December 4th FINANCIAL WORLD. Read in the same issue "How Firm Is This Market's Foundation?", "A Bond Group For Transfer Purposes," "An Attractive Medium Priced Speculation" and "Are Rail Equipments Attractive?" You will receive this issue and the three following issues, if you return this "ad" and $1 at once. You will also receive:
The December issue of our stock ratings and data book covering 1300 stocks, reprints of analyses appraising the value of 13 Public Utility Holding Companies, "How Long This Bull Market?", "What Independent Oils Attractive?", "15 Stocks For The Coming Prosperity", "An Important Market Signal", "35 Previous Recommendations Still Attractive", "Inflation Looms Nearer", "Rail Shares In Best Position", 64 "Stock Factographs" and "An Analytical Basis For Selecting Stocks."
VITAL FACTS FOR INVESTORS
You cannot purchase stocks advantageously unless you know the basic facts about America's leading corporations. Each issue of THE FINANCIAL WORLD contains 8 "Stock Factographs." We have just put in book form reprints of all "Factographs" published in 72 weeks. Every thoughtful investor today needs the valuable facts in this book. Note special offer below.
"Stock Factographs" fill a long felt want of investors for condensed fact and figure studies of America's leading corporations. Each "Factograph" shows the financial set-up of the company analyzed together with book value per share, net working capital, line of business, historical record, type of management, prospects and other essential information that will help to give the investor a true picture of the company. Included with each "Factograph" is a chart showing the company's annual earnings and stock price range for 8 years. You can increase your success as an investor in the promising months ahead by mailing $10.85 for all the following:
(a) A book containing reprints of the first 576 "Stock Factographs"
(b) 52 issues of THE FINANCIAL WORLD
(c) 12 Monthly issues of "Independent Appraisals of Listed Stocks"
(d) Confidential Advice Privilege by letter according to our rules (this advice privilege is exclusively for yearly subscribers)
(e) Extra Special—An immediate survey of not to exceed 20 of your Listed Securities
INFLATION PLUS RECOVERY
Bank deposits are increasing at an unusual pace. Net demand deposits have increased more than $3,000,000,000 within the past year and are now almost $3,000,000,000 higher than they were in 1929. More government financing of deficits with further bond issues will continue further to increase already enormous bank deposits. Excess bank reserves are very large. Increases in our already swollen supply of gold add to the likelihood of inflation. We had $4,000,000,000 in gold in 1929 and now have almost $10,000,000,000. "History shows that every country eventually grows up to the credit possibilities of its monetary base."
If you add to the above factors the natural forces for business recovery created by over five years of under-building and under-buying of all kinds of products, you have an irresistible combination for a boom. THE FINANCIAL WORLD should prove especially valuable to any investor in the next few years. You are practicing costly economy to delay your subscription. If you do not accept our $10.85 offer, return coupon and $1 for the above special four weeks' trial offer or send $5 for a six months' subscription (26 issues) together with 192 free "Stock Factographs" and the next six issues of "Independent Appraisals of Listed Stocks".

STOCKS BARELY MOVE; VOLUME OF TRADE SMALL

Short Covering Aids Prices in Late Session.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 30.—Dealings on the stock exchange today brought little change to the market picture. Prices held to a narrow range. Volume amounted to 670,170 shares, the smallest for a Saturday in two months or more. Closing figures were about even with those of yesterday.

Business news appearing favored the constructive side. Chief items were accounts of an early rush of Christmas holiday buying in retail stores and a fresh increase in steel operations. Comment indicated a widely held opinion that the market is now in a position to resume its advance as a result of the shake-out it received in a series of moderate reactions during the week. Short covering helped prices in many cases to improved levels in late trading.

Rails Group Is Active.

Railroad shares attracted as much attention as any group. Some observers professed to discern signs of a real "move" of this long-neglected group. A feature was a burst of strength in Atlantic Coast Line following the interstate commerce commission's ruling that freight rates on citrus fruits may be cut to compete with truck and boat tarifs. The road reaps good profits from the haul of the Florida citrus crop. Common and preferred shares rose 1 to 3½ points on brisk buying.

Aviation issues gained slightly, partially as a result of favorable publicity aroused in their behalf by the success of the China Clipper's initial journey. Wright and Douglas rose a point each and United Aircraft achieved a new high before giving way under late selling.

Mining Shares Strong.

Mining shares enjoyed fresh demand with U. S. Smelting going into new high ground. Coppers were again active at better prices.

In the communications division, Western Union recovered from yesterday's sinking spell to regain 1½ points of its loss. American Telephone found the going a bit rough and gave ground under a series of sales attributed in part to profit taking.

Shares of the American Writing Paper company, which is in process of reorganization under 77-B, were active and strong, the preferred rising nearly a point. Another individual strong spot was National Supply, which rose a point or so on talk of profitable orders in store for the corporation as a result of the reputed improvement of conditions in the oil industry.

BRITAIN FEARS MONEY JUGGLING IN NEW ZEALAND

Winning Labor Party May Try Credit Schemes.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 30.—New Zealand, most English of the dominions and a prime favorite here, gave the mother country a stiff jolt this week by voting overwhelmingly for something apparently resembling the Douglas Social Credit scheme.

First cables reporting the sweeping victory for the New Zealand Labor party were colorless but subsequent ones made it startlingly clear that the Labor party had swept the farmers and middle classes by promising that a national credit authority would provide money service sufficient to extinguish unemployment and guarantee economic prices to producers.

Maj. Douglas, who happened to be here, pronounced it a great victory for Social Credit and a culmination of years of agitation in New Zealand.

Money Experiments Feared.

If Douglas' view is correct, then one important British dominion is shortly to embark upon this currency and credit technique quite untrammeled by the constitutional restrictions which cramp the style of the Canadian province of Alberta. However, several newspapers contended the New Zealand government is not wedded to the Douglas scheme.

The boom in armament shares was definitly halted until the national government gets down to brass tacks about national rearmament. The reason is that the national government throughout the recent election campaign found itself compelled more and more to stress security by "collective action" as cheaper insurance against war than rearmament. There is bound to be some heavy expenditures on national defense, but it is quite possible prices at recent peaks fully discounted the probable expenditure.

Big Railway Loan Expected.

By Christmas, Britain may have a new quasi-government body sponsoring a government guaranteed loan of $130,000,000 to the railroads. This will go toward electrification of important sections of British railways, construction of rolling stock—which in this country is financed not by short period equipment notes but by long term debt—and by modernization of the disgracefully dingy railway stations.

Wool buyers from Boston, after an absence of two years, reappeared at the colonial wool sales here and are showing Bradford and the continent how to buy wool. In some of the lower counts of wool they have forced prices up sharply. Trade statistics suggest the depression has sent the United States carpet crazy, for American buyers apparently have combed the globe for carpet wools.

Cuban Railroad Company's Loss Less Than Year Ago

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—Consolidated Railroads of Cuba, controlled by the Cuba company, reports for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1935, net loss of $4,271 after taxes, interest, etc., compared with net loss of $5,434 for the September quarter of 1934. Combined net loss of the company and subsidiaries for the third quarter of 1935 totaled $50,287 after taxes, interest, etc., but before intercompany dividends, against net loss of $298,573 for the same quarter of 1934.

Chicago Poultry Market Faces Federal Supervision

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—(AP)—The agriculture department today called a hearing for Dec. 9 in Chicago to determine whether the Chicago area should be designated as a poultry market subject to federal supervision. An amendment to the packers and stock yards act provided the secretary of agriculture may designate cities where poultry dealers and handlers must be licensed to protect producers against unreasonably low prices and to protect consumers against unreasonably high prices.

October Shoe Production Higher for Month and Year

Production of boots and shoes in October, reported to the department of commerce by 906 factories, totaled 35,139,031 pairs, compared with 33,468,243 in September and 28,708,973 in October, 1934.

COMMISSION HOUSE SALES CAUSE DECLINE IN COTTON

Cotton prices were on the downgrade yesterday as scattered commission house selling developed due to relative weakness in Liverpool where the far east was reported as liquidating holdings of contracts. Aggregate trade was not large with the close in leading domestic markets at net losses of 3 to 10 cents.

Spot cotton closed 5 to 10 points lower with New Orleans at 12.05 cents, Galveston and Houston 12 cents, and New York at 12.15 cents per pound. Prices in cents per pound:

WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 30.—A fairly good volume of wool was moved in Boston during the last week despite the interruption of business by the holiday, and prices were against the buyer although there were no marked changes. Medium Ohio and similar fleeces made slight advances on sale at 38@39c in the grease for strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood and 48s, 50s, ¼ blood. Fine Ohio Delaine was sold at 32@33c in the grease and strictly combing 58s, 60s, ½ blood, was firmly quoted at 33@34c. Territory wools of 64s and finer quality sold quite freely in original bags at mostly 79@81c, scoured basis, for average to good French combing staple. Average to good 12 months Texas wools had a fair call at 80@82c, scoured basis.

TRADE PICTURE MUCH IMPROVED IN LAST WEEK

Political Uncertainty Main Drawback.

ment will be known as the manufacturing division. It hopes to extend its manufacturing activities, begun in 1910 and now including 45 mills in half a dozen states.

Cutten.

Arthur W. Cutten, Chicago grain speculator, was again free to resume operations on the nation's grain markets as a result of a decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Cutten, however, was not sure he wished to exercise his privilege and hinted governmental interference with markets and other business may keep him from future trading.

The decision was a legal paradox in that the court upheld the findings of the Grain Futures administration that Cutten had "repeatedly and knowingly" violated terms of the grain futures act. But the court also found that that section of the law dealing with penalties for individual violators was so loosely worded that Cutten could not be convicted for offenses that occurred before the charges were filed.

Utilities.

On Monday the Reconstruction Finance corporation extricated itself from the utility business by selling a block of Utilities Power and Light corporation notes to the Manufacturers' Trust Company of New York. The RFC obtained the stock in collateral given by the old Dawes bank of Chicago—the Central Republic Bank and Trust company—when it obtained its 90 million dollar RFC loan.

The same day the Consolidated Gas Company of New York and four of its subsidiaries began suit in federal court to test the constitutionality of the public utility holding company act and attacking its legality. Then many joined the attack.

Friday the Securities and Exchange commission took steps to ward off further litigation. SEC officials gave blanket exemption from registration under the act to all holding companies whose operations are confined principally to one state and to holding companies that are predominantly operating concerns. The exemptions are temporary and expire Feb. 3 next.

U. S. Spending.

In Atlanta, Ga., on Friday, the President [See Washington: Review Section] told listeners the banks in 1933 suggested a vast increase in the federal debt as a means of ending the depression. Leading bankers denied the charge and declared it a retaliation for attacks on the New Deal made at their convention in New Orleans a few months ago. Chief advocate of big government spending was Marriner S. Eccles, Utah banker, who differed from most bankers on the subject. As a self-appointed witness at senate finance committee hearings in 1933 Eccles proposed a huge increase in federal debt, government handouts to states, subsidies and cancelation of European war debts. His reward: chosen by Roosevelt to head the federal reserve board in Washington.

Farm Loan.

Brain Trust measures received another setback on Wednesday in Sioux City, Ia., when a federal court held the amended Frazier-Lemke farm loan act unconstitutional because it is contrary to the fifth and tenth amendments to the constitution. The fifth amendment guarantees property holders shall not be deprived of property without due process of law and the tenth states that all powers not specifically granted the federal government in the constitution shall be reserved to the states and the people.

Debt.

Prospects that the public debt this week will be pushed above 30 billions for the first time in American history developed as the result of new treasury financing plans which will be announced tomorrow. The government is expected to borrow more than a half billion dollars in new money in addition to 418 million dollars which must be obtained to refund an issue of 2½ per cent treasury notes maturing Dec. 15. The public debt stood at 29 billion 585 million dollars last Tuesday.

65 Favorable Dividend Actions Voted in Week

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The record of dividend declarations this week shows 65 favorable changes compared with 64 the week before, Standard Statistics company reports. There were four announcements on the unfavorable side against one in the previous week.

Peoria Ice Concern Files Plea for Reorganization

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL—Bleachable closed 5 to 6 points lower today but trading was light with only 5 contracts changing hands. The decline was due to scattered local liquidation which seemed to be promoted by the action of the lard market and the slightly easier undertone in crude oil. Bleachable, spot, nominal; December, 10.74c per lb; January, 10.75c; March, 10.75c; May, 10.77c; July, 10.79c.

RUBBER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—RUBBER—Crude: Futures closed quiet, 2 points higher to 1 lower; December, 13.21c per lb bid; March, 13.43c bid; May, $13.58c bid. Smoked ribbed spot closed 13.22c nominal.

PRICES OF LARD FUTURES RECEDE 5 TO 12½ CENTS

Liquidation by holders of December lard contracts developed yesterday and disclosed a lack of aggressive support, causing a sharp recession in prices. Closing trades were at net losses of 5 to 12½ cents. Moderate deliveries are expected on December contracts Monday. Strength in hogs had little effect on the market.

Cash lard closed at $13.37, loose $12.75, leaf $13.25, and clear bellies at $19.02 per 100 pounds. Prices in dollars per 100 pounds:

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 30.—Bonds for the most part moved narrowly on the New York Stock exchange during a typically dull week-end session today. Prices generally maintained a firm undertone with most of the movements worthy of note being on the ments worthy of note on the upside.

United States government loans drifted to slightly lower levels in exceedingly dull trading. Closing prices were 2-32ds higher to 4-32ds lower. The market, which has virtually marked time for two weeks, may, according to traders, broaden following the treasury's announcement on its Dec. 15 financing, which will be made tomorrow.

Utilities Power Issues Rise.

Strength in the issues of Utilities Power and Light corporation was the outstanding feature of trading in domestic corporation bonds. The 5½s rose 4¾ points and the 5s of 1959 advanced 4¼ points. Other individual features included American Writing Paper 6s of 1947, which rose 3½ points, and Paramount Pictures 6s of 1955, up 3¾ points.

Many of the second grade railroad liens reflected continued accumulation and prices showed moderate improvement.

Italian Bonds Firmer.

A lessening in the tension between England and Italy, as reported by European cables, brought about a better sentiment in the foreign division. Italian issues were ¾ to 2¼ higher, the first time in several days they found a place in the plus column. A generally steady tone ruled other European loans.

Transfers on the listed market during November at $302,832,000, par value, were largest since March, 1935.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

If you wish information about investments or insurance write to The Tribune Investors' Guide. Inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply. Answers of public interest are published, but inquirers' names are never revealed. Please do not ask for information on more than one company in each letter. Answers to inquiries are based on information which The Tribune believes reliable, fair, and unprejudiced, but The Tribune assumes no responsibility therefor.

Drake Estate.

Readers of Investors' Guide should have no more than an academic interest in the recent trial of the group of individuals who solicited funds to prosecute recapture of the "estate" of Sir Francis Drake.

Investors' Guide in 1931 wrote to the American consul in London, England, for information concerning this estate. His reply was printed on May 15, 1931, and, in an effort to impress the futility of advancing funds for such purposes, reprinted on Dec. 17, 1932.

The following is an excerpt:

"This consulate general has received letters from persons who believe themselves entitled to fictitious estates. As an example I mention a few which actually do not exist, viz: Sir Francis Drake. . . ."

Whisky Warehouse Certificates.

A marked increase in inquiries concerning whisky warehouse certificates indicates that their sale has been increasing during the last few months. These certificates are receipts for raw whisky that is placed in warehouses to age.

Such certificates might be satisfactory for an experienced liquor dealer, but the inexperienced investor will do well to avoid them. He is at a disadvantage because he usually pays from two to four times what the whisky is worth. He has no assurance that he will ever be able to sell the whisky. Add to that the effects of the recent reciprocal treaty with Canada cutting the duty on bonded whisky from $5 to $2.50 a gallon and it should be obvious that a whisky warehouse certificate is a decidedly speculative purchase.

Oil Royalties.

An oil royalty is another type of security that might be satisfactory for an experienced person but is not a suitable investment for the inexperienced. An oil royalty is a fractional interest in the fractional proceeds of an oil well or a group of wells.

John J. Burns, general counsel for the securities and exchange commission, quoted an incident at the recent convention of the Investment Bankers' Association of America illustrating the need for personal inspection by an experienced oil man before purchasing an oil royalty.

A letter which he read to the assembled investment bankers said, "The other day out in the country we picked up an old farmer. We pointed out some derricks and asked the old boy what they were producing. He spit a couple of times and said, 'Wall, if you're from the east they're producing a hundred barrels a day. If you're from Tulsie they are running about fifteen barrels, but if you live around here they ain't worth a damn.'"

SEVERAL LARGE SECURITY DEALS EXPECTED SOON

Boston Edison to Retire Notes with Stock.

A number of corporate financing operations are expected to take place in the next week or ten days. Among the concerns which are planning to market security issues are Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd., the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, Automatic Products corporation of Chicago, and the Edison Illuminating Company of Boston.

Boston Edison plans to issue 89,146 shares of $100 par capital stock. Proceeds of the issue, estimated at $12,410,000, together with funds now in the company's treasury, will be used to redeem $16,000,000 of 5 per cent, three year coupon notes which are due April 15, 1936.

Dec. 4 Expiration Date.

The twenty day period which must elapse after registration of the issue with the Securities and Exchange commission will expire Dec. 4. The company has made public no definite information concerning the time of the offering.

Automatic Products company of Chicago has registered an issue of 100,000 shares of $5 par value common stock which is to be offered publicly. P. E. Buckman company is to underwrite the issue, which may be offered early this week.

Hiram Walker has registered an issue of $8,000,000 of 10 year 4¼ per cent convertible debentures, due Dec. 1, 1945, and 164,140 shares of no par value common stock. The common stock is to be reserved for insurance on conversion of the debentures.

Proceeds to Retire Notes.

Most of the proceeds of the proposed financing will be used to pay off two unsecured notes of the company and one of its subsidaries, held by the Guaranty Trust company of New York.

The Cleveland-Cliffs is planning to offer an issue of $16,500,000 first mortgage sinking fund 4¾ per cent bonds, due Nov. 1, 1950. Proceeds, together with other funds, will be used to retire $23,966,571 of outstanding 6 per cent notes which fall due Jan. 23, 1936.

BUTTER REACHES NEW HIGH; RECORD SATURDAY TRADING

Butter futures soared ¾ cent on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday on the crest of a wave of buying which carried all deliveries to new high levels for the season. The December future touched 32 cents per pound, the highest price in over five years. A total of 447 cars or 8,800,000 pounds of butter changed hands during the day, the trade being the heaviest known for a Saturday and the largest for any day since July, 1933.

Continued heavy withdrawals of butter from cold storage and the failure of production to increase as anticipated by the trade were responsible for the advance. New buying and short covering were strongly in evidence.

Egg futures gained ⅛ to ¾ cent, December closing at 21¼ cents per dozen. There was a better out of storage movement of eggs here. Sales were 144 cars. Cheese advanced ¾ cent per pound to a new high for the season on the sale of one car. Prices:

MOST COMMODITIES LOWER LAST WEEK; BUTTER IS EXCEPTION

Marked price recessions occurred last week in a number of important commodities. Grain futures, cotton, lard, sugar, and eggs experienced sharp setbacks in the week's trading. The losses recorded in most commodities reflected the ebb of speculative trading. Butler was a strong exception.

The following table shows yesterday's closing prices on a representative list of commodities compared with the final prices of the preceding week and the high and low figures for the season:

Note—Above prices do not include processing tax of 30 cents per bushel on wheat; 5 cents per bushel on corn; ½ cent per pound on sugar, and 4.2 cents per pound on cotton. Taxes of 2.47 cents per pound on lard and $2.25 per 100 pounds on hogs are included.

FRANC STEADY; GOLD SHIPMENTS TO BE SMALLER

New York, Nov. 30.—[Special.]—The French franc held its own in foreign exchange today as pressure upon the currency was lighter than it had recently been. It closed unchanged at 6.58⅝ cents with the dollar worth $1.0068. Engagements of gold in Paris for shipment here amounted to $7,197,000, which was substantially less than the engagements of any previous day last week.

The engagements brought the total of all gold engaged for shipment here since Sept. 9, when the current movement started, to $785,500,000 of which $510,700,000 has been taken in France. The arrival of $24,549,400 gold from France and $426,800 from India was reported by the New York Federal Reserve bank as additional for Friday. No imports were reported as of today. The reserve bank also announced that 10,000,000 ounces of silver were on the way here from London on the liner President Harding, due about Dec. 9.

The Netherlands guilder and the Swiss franc were steady but belga gained one point to 16.91 cents. The pound sterling rose ½ cent to $4.93⅝.

UTILITIES HOLD GROUND AGAINST CONTROL BY U. S.

Chief Concerns Refuse to Accept New Law.

States Steel corporation, Standard Oil Company of California, Pacific Gas and Electric company, Union Pacific railroad, Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, Illinois Northern Utilities company, Public Service Subsidiary corporation, Commonwealth Subsidiary corporation, and Commonwealth Edison company.

Meanwhile, the number of companies to file suits for injunctions restraining the secretary's enforcement of the registration requirement increased to 41, three additional concerns having presented challenges during the day. Hundreds of others were biding their time, neither seeking registration, asking exemption, nor, for the present, filing suit.

One Company Charges "Duress."

Application of the New England companies for registration left the impression that they were simply "playing safe."

The New England Power association said, for instance, that it was filing "not to obtain any benefits under the public utility holding company act of 1935, but in view of the penalties and other provisions of such act, is filing under duress."

"Registrant expressly claims such act to be unconstitutional and reserves and refuses to waive the right to contest the constitutionality of any provisions of said act or any rule or regulation now or hereafter made or purported to be made thereunder," the statement added.

Reflected in the exemption requests was the broad discretionary power vested in the SEC by the public utility act over virtually every type of industrial enterprise that might happen incidentally to hold 10 per cent or more of the stock of a utility holding concern or which engaged even minutely in a utility business of its own.

In the case of United States Steel, for example, income from utility activities was shown to be only a fraction of 1 per cent of its total earnings. Yet the SEC must pass upon its request for exemption.

UTILITY FILES SUIT HERE.

The American Utilities Service corporation yesterday joined the group of utility holding companies protesting the public utilities act of 1935. It filed suit for an injunction against the securities and exchange commission, asking that the commission be enjoined from interference with it pending determination of the constitutionality of the act.

The suit was filed in the United States District court. It named Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Postmaster General James Farley, United States Attorney Michael L. Igoe, and Postmaster Ernest J. Kreutgen, as well as the SEC, as defendants. It was assigned to Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

ALL LIVE STOCK RISES SHARPLY; SUPPLY SCANTY

Post-Holiday Trade Most Active in Years.

Live stock prices late last week increased sharply in the liveliest post-holiday trade in recent years. Supplies fell short of expectations and with cold weather stimulating the demand a live stock buying wave swept the country. New November highs were established in all species, with hogs relatively higher than other live stock because of the acute shortage.

New crop hogs here yesterday soared to a high of $12.25, including the processing tax, the highest November sale since 1926, which is the only year since 1920 credited with a higher November price. The week's closing quotations for hogs were 35 to 50 cents above final quotations of the preceding week.

Lambs Rise Substantially.

Lambs last week scored a substantial rise, closing 25 to 50 cents above the final quotations of the preceding week and $1 higher than two weeks ago. Yearling stock rose 50 to 75 cents in six days and feeders gained 25 to 35 cents. Old sheep were steady.

Farmers coming on the market with fed western lambs that they bought three to four months ago as western feeder lambs off the range are getting $3 to $4 and more over initial costs, the biggest margins of profit in several years. Some of the $11.60 slaughter lambs late in the week had cost only $7.40 going out as feeders a few weeks ago.

The week's top of $11.65 established a new high November mark for the last six years, and was 30 cents above the best sale of the preceding week. At the low time in October top lambs sold at $8.95.

Best Steers Strongest.

Best grades of steers led the rise in the cattle market last week. Buying interest centered around the cattle culled from the show herds, which were far superior to the run of regular market steers available late in the week.

Some "show culls" sold on the open market for slaughter at $15.25, while the best market cattle offered during the week sold at $14. Steers advanced unevenly 15 to 65 cents in six days, best classes in spots showing even larger increases. Cows and hefers were unevenly steady to 50 cents higher, the best classes of hefers showing the sharpest gains in sympathy with the beef steers. Calves were strong for the week and stockers and feeders rose 25 to 40 cents.

METALS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—TIN—Steadi; spot and nearby, 51.50c per lb.; future, 49.12c. Other metals nominally unchanged.

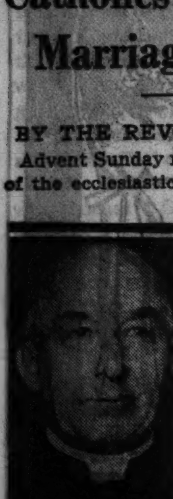
CHURCHES OPEN NEW YEAR WITH ADVENT RITES

Catholics to Clarify Marriage Stand.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Advent Sunday marks the beginning of the ecclesiastical year, and today's services in all faiths will be celebrated with a solemnity duly marking the first day of those penitential four weeks which precede the festival of Christmas.



CARDINAL MUNDELEIN.

In addition, Roman Catholics and Episcopalians are inaugurating special courses of instructions for their congregations, the former on the "Sacrament of Matrimony," and the latter on "Christian Heroes."

Eighteen years ago Cardinal Mundelein, in order to develop a well instructed laity in his diocese, suggested that the priests undertake uniform instruction along definite lines and today in all churches of the archdiocese a letter from the cardinal will be read in which the course will be outlined and explained.

The matter chosen for the coming year, according to this letter, will be "A few outstanding subjects which are of increasing interest to Catholic people and to those outside the church as well."

However, one quarter of the Sunday instruction in 1936 will be devoted to the subject of marriage, with a view to counteracting the widespread misunderstanding of the position of Catholic teaching on this subject due largely to the changed attitude of the present generation toward the sanctity and seriousness of the marital obligation.

While the idea of Christian heroes is mostly associated with those individuals who in past centuries devoted their lives to the church, children of the Episcopal diocese will be instructed during the next few weeks in the lives of those who, in the present generation, have devoted their efforts solely and wholly to work in the diocese of Chicago.

The five heroes and their attachments so selected are: Sister Frances of the community of St. Mary, founder of St. Mary's home for children, 2829 West Jackson boulevard; Deaconess Helen M. Fuller, director of Chase House, 211 South Ashland avenue; the Rev. Arthur E. Johnstone, chaplain of Lawrence Hall for boys, 4833 North Francisco avenue; Mrs. William H. Benton, leader of the infant class at St. Paul's, Kenwood, for the last 30 years, and responsible for the founding of the House of Happiness, 3052 Gratten avenue, and Deaconess Edith Adams, director of the town and country correspondence school.

Dr. George A. Buttrick, pastor of Madison Avenue Presbyterian church in New York City, will be the guest speaker at the 53d annual meeting of the Chicago Congregational union next Tuesday afternoon and evening in the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, at which Frederick J. Newey will preside.

An exhibition of handicraft products and visual demonstration of the program which the Congregational union carries on in the community centers, foreign speaking churches, and institutional neighborhood houses will be shown in the gymnasium, and Dr. Ernest Graham Guthrie, in an address entitled "Old and New Things," will report on the service of the Congregational churches to every phase of the city's life.

A dinner of delegates will be held at 6:15 p. m. with music supplied by an international chorus drawn from the foreign speaking congregations supported by this denominational society, and the meeting will conclude with Dr. Buttrick's address on "The Conflict of Loyalties."

The annual Youth congress of Lutherans in Chicagoland will meet this afternoon at Central Lutheran church, Sedgwick and Hobbie streets, for two sessions at 3:30 and 5 o'clock, and one in the evening at 7:45, at which the Rev. Mars A. Dale, pastor of Medill Avenue Lutheran church, will preside.

The theme "Adventuring with Christ" will be discussed at the opening session with the Rev. Carl Wilhelmson of Racine, speaking on "On to the Adventure." The Rev. Oliver Fjeldstad, the Rev. H. Harms, the Rev. G. Hall, and the Rev. O. Groth, all of Chicago, will lead discussion groups, and at the final session, Dr. E. C. Bloomquist of Rockford, will address the congress.

The Rock River section of the Chicago area council of the Methodist Episcopal church will hold an all day meeting next Tuesday beginning with a devotional service led by Dr. John Thompson in the Chicago temple, 33 North Clark street, and concluding with a mass meeting in Medinah temple, 14 East Ohio street, at which Methodist leaders will address the 5,000 expected to attend.

There'll Be Sound of Revelry at R. O. T. C. Annual Ball

The shine of happy anticipation in their eyes rivaling the glistening ornaments of their party attire, these Calumet High school girls and their cadet escorts await the music that will open the R. O. T. C. Officers' club twelfth annual military ball, which will be on Friday evening at the Shoreland hotel. Reading from the bottom of the stair, upwards, the girls are Miss Ethel Hughes, Miss Charlotte Rexstrew, Miss Beatrice Lynch, Miss Dorothy Outhouse, and Miss Helen Reid. Their escorts are Lieut. Col. Ernest Hecht, Maj. Gordon Murray, Capt. Jack Fallon, Lieut. Arthur Hassell and Lieut. Raymond Pichard. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Cardinal's Boy Choir to Give First Public Concert March 9

Plans for a musical event of outstanding interest to Irish of Chicago and to music lovers generally were made public last week with the announcement from the rectory of the Holy Name cathedral, 730 North Wabash avenue, that the Cardinal's Cathedral choristers, directed by the Rev. Edwin V. Hoover, will give a performance of Pietro Yon's oratorio, "The Triumph of St. Patrick," in Orchestra hall on March 9.

MSGR. MORRISON. [Bayhull-Richter.]

The oratorio will be given under the joint sponsorship of Msgr. Joseph P. Morrison, rector of the Cathedral parish, and the Rev. Thomas J. Hayes, rector of old St. Patrick's church on the near west side. The occasion will mark the première in Chicago of the composition of Yon, noted organist of St. Patrick's cathedral in New York. The oratorio was originally presented in the New York cathedral by the Metropolitan Opera company of New York.

Orchestra to Play.

The presentation also will mark the first public appearance of the Cardinal's Cathedral choristers. An orchestra of 45 pieces will accompany the choral singing, and operatic artists will be features in the solo rôles. A narrator will relate the story dealing with the career of Ireland's patron saint.

The Cardinal's Cathedral choristers have been directed by Dr. Hoover for five years. They are boys from 12 to 14 years old who are in the first and second years of preparatory study for the priesthood at the Quigley Preparatory seminary.

The date of the oratorio has been purposely set near St. Patrick's day in accordance with a movement to support the shrine of Irish tradition in Chicago as represented in old St. Patrick's church.

Dr. John J. Killeen, widely known for his interest in Irish cultural movements, has been named chairman of the committee of Irish residents backing the oratorio concert. Others on the committee are Daniel

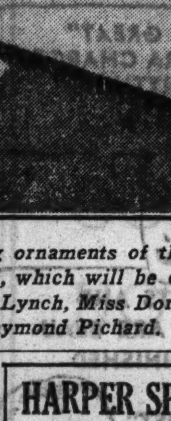
HARPER SPOT-LITERS WILL GIVE MYSTERY COMEDY THIS WEEK

The Spot-Liters, dramatic club at Harper High school, will present "Tiger House," a three act mystery comedy, on Thursday and Friday evenings, Dec. 12 and 13, in the school auditorium, 8520 South Wood street.



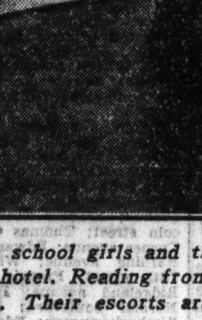
MISS DOROTHY DIETZ. [Gibson Photo.]

Miss Dorothy Dietz will play the leading rôle, a young shopgirl who, in order to inherit the fortune of her eccentric aunt, must live for a year in "Mystery Manor," the haunted house.

The supporting cast, which is directed by Mrs. Ida Connery, includes William Black, Albert Vare, Leonard Victor, Miss Marjorie Rouse, Miss Anna Gager, Miss Margaret Watt, Miss Olga Bistricky, David Parke, and Oscar Taft.

Golden Jubilee Bazar to Open This Week at Christ Church

A two day jubilee bazar, to be held Wednesday and Thursday at Christ Episcopal church, 65th street and Woodlawn avenue, will be a prelude to the golden jubilee celebration of the parish, to be held in January, it was announced last week. The women of the parish, under the leadership of Mrs. E. J. Hamilton, Mrs. Roscoe B. Starek and Mrs. Ward Burton will have charge of the bazar.



MRS. ROSCOE B. STAREK.

One of the highlights will be a minstrel show, to be presented under the direction of William Thorpe and Miss Margaret Lodge. The "Golden Belles," the title conferred upon the cigaret girls, will be much in evidence at the bazar. Mrs. P. Q. Griffiths has charge of cigaret sales and Mrs. W. B. Lodge will have charge of the waitresses.

Jubilee dinners are to be served on both evenings. The Ruth circle of the woman's guild will sponsor the Wednesday dinner and the Thursday dinner will be under the direction of Mrs. C. J. Scofield and Miss Ruth Bihler.

Concessions and booths and the chairman of each include:

Rector's table, Mrs. C. J. Blakeslee; woman's auxiliary, Mrs. E. J. Hamilton; choir girls, Miss Bihler; St. Agnes' circle, Mrs. William F. Fletcher; St. Anne's circle, Mrs. S. C. Sexauer Jr.; St. Elizabeth's circle, Mrs. B. C. Robins; St. Faith's circle, Miss Maxey Barber; St. Martha's circle, Mrs. Ward Burton, and Ruth circle, Mrs. H. G. Hollis.

General committee chairmen include Mrs. Harry J. Thorsen, Walter Smith, Mrs. Starek, Mrs. R. B. Rice, Miss Barber and Mrs. A. V. Lavidge.

Women of the parish are organized under the church service league, with Mrs. C. F. Weinberger as president. Officers of the league include Mrs. E. J. Hamilton, chairman of the women's auxiliary; Mrs. H. R. Rogers, chairman of the woman's guild; Mrs. C. R. Wineford, secretary; Mrs. James O. Hutchison, treasurer, and Mrs. W. B. Lodge, property custodian.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

ADD recent arrivals. Constance Sheila Eger arrived Nov. 1, her proud parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond I. Eger, 5121 Ingleside avenue, announce, and Mr. and Mrs. William R. Hendrickson of 7519 Coles avenue, also are the parents of a daughter, born Nov. 5.

That husky young man in the brightly hued uniform you have been seeing around in Englewood is Alfred Jesselson, 19 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Jesselson, 6617 Harvard avenue. Six months ago he enlisted in the Marine corps and has been stationed at the Quantico, Va., barracks. He is spending two weeks' furlough at home. Those three medals he wears are for proficiency in bayonet, rifle and pistol practice.

Bert Robechek, one of the most popular members of the Hyde Park Lions club, has recovered from his recent illness and is again in circulation, reports F. B. Rose, the club scribe.

"THE RECORDER" is the name of the monthly newspaper which the 18th Ward Republic Young Women will shortly present to a waiting world. The name was selected in a contest. Miss Florence Johnstone, 6337 Green street, won first prize for her suggestion.

News from the school front: Robert Benson, son of Mrs. M. C. Benson, 521 West Marquette road, a student at Missouri Military academy, Mexico, Mo., is one of 36 members of the cadet corps who are in the "Fusileers," crack drill team of the school. Jack Burns, son of Mrs. Ruth Burns, 7306 Harvard avenue, played a leading rôle in a one act play entitled, "Wurzel-Flummery," recently, at Eureka college, Eureka, Ill., where he is a freshman.

Back from a visit to his birthplace, Kilmeedy, County Limerick, Ireland, is P. J. Browne, 1406 East 70th street. The "Auld Sod" looked very good to him, he said.

CUPID NOTES: Thanksgiving day was the date of the Davis-McGrath nuptials. The former Miss Frances Davison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Davison of 7457 Coles avenue, was married to Edward L. McGrath, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. McGrath of Urbana. Another Thanksgiving wedding, held in the evening, was that of Miss Dorothy Mabel Congdon and Barrett Kinne Seeley. Miss Congdon's father, the Rev. Mr. James Edward Congdon, pastor of the Englewood Presbyterian church, read the service, assisted by his two sons, the Rev. Mr. James E. Congdon Jr., and the Rev. Mr. Howard Stewart Congdon.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Glass, 319 East 68th street, recently celebrated their 58th wedding anniversary at a party in their home.

THAT lovely portrait named Portrait of St. Gall's Altar Boy, by Gracenelle Brodt, for which Francis Lyons, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lyons, 5433 Sawyer avenue, was the model, is back in Chicago after a tour of art exhibits. It will be on display for a month at the Drake hotel.

SOCIETY TAKES 'JUST ANOTHER DOG' AS NAME

Possessing one of the most unique names ever adopted by a club, an organization known as "Just Another Dog," has been formed on the south side, it was made known last week. It has the serious purpose of promoting social activities and caring for the welfare of the south side.

The south side group is one of five in the city and eleven in the country, according to C. H. Thurman, the "Big Dog," or president, of the group. The members meet at the Viking temple, 69th street and Emerald avenue, every second Friday of each month.

Selection of the organization name was based on the thought that as boys the members always had faithful friends in their dogs. Other officers in addition to Mr. Thurman, are as follows: Little dog, G. J. Simons; keeper of the pedigree, A. B. Neill; keeper of the boneyard, Robert Hagen, and keeper of the kennel, E. B. Rook. George Ott Lewis, C. H. Berkstrom and John Creen are "watchdogs."

ALUMNI SOCIETY TO HEAR BRITISH ECONOMIST HERE

Christopher Hollis, English lecturer and economist, will address the Chicago chapter of the National Catholic Alumni federation, on Tuesday evening at the University club, 76 East Monroe street. His subject will be, "Has the Financial System Broken Down?"

Mr. Hollis is a member of the faculty of the economics department of the University of Notre Dame. He received his education at Eton college and Balliol college, Oxford, and is a former president of the Oxford union. Following his conversion to the Catholic faith in 1924, he became a master of Stonyhurst, the Jesuit college near Blackburn, England.

Mr. Hollis toured this country as a member of the Oxford debating team in 1922 and 1924. At 33 years of age, he is widely recognized as a monetary expert and writer.

CIVIC LEADERS ON SOUTH SIDE TELL BENEFITS

City Council Hearing to Be Tomorrow.

Community organizations of the south side—women's clubs, business men's groups and improvement associations—last week gave enthusiastic reception to the proposal, now before the city council, to change the names of more than 300 streets in the city. Adoption of a name "simplification plan" would result in large yearly financial benefits and saving of time to business and residents alike, it is asserted.

Confusion now results from the fact that streets on the same general line, although not continuing unbroken, carry as many as five different names throughout their length, it is pointed out. Large business houses and the postoffice spend nearly $500,000 yearly in redirecting packages and mail delivered to wrong addresses because of name duplication, it is said.

The confusion has not been confined alone to Chicago business and residents, proponents of the name change plan say. Visitors from other communities, particularly motorists, have experienced difficulty in traveling in the city and arriving at their proper destination because of the situation.

First Hearing Tomorrow.

Howard C. Brodman, city superintendent of mapping, has drafted a basic program which is to be used in public hearings on all phases of the proposal. The first hearing, which will take up the proposal as effecting four north side streets and one south side street, St. Lawrence avenue, is to be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the council chambers.

First of the south side organizations to go on record as approving the proposal was the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, which met Tuesday afternoon and adopted a resolution declaring its stand.

Aid in Modernizing.

John Francis Browne, president of the chamber, said: "We feel that this is a forward step in modernizing the city, which is still deplorably 'small town' in various aspects."

The 55th Street Business Men's association, which has given its support to the movement several times in the past, still favors the plan, J. G. Strader, president of the group, said last week.

"We thought it was a good idea when it was first conceived," Mr. Strader said, "and time hasn't changed our opinion in the least. It has our enthusiastic support."

T. A. Arnold, president of the South Side Federation of Improvement associations, an organization representing approximately 50,000 property owners, also placed his approval on the measure.

"Simplification of street names will go a long way toward making it easier to get around the city, both for Chicagoans and visitors," he said. "However, we believe that historical and sentimental value of present street names should be taken into consideration. Arbitrary changes, such as those made in the cases of Crawford avenue [now Pulaski road] and Robey street [now Damen avenue], without public hearings we do not favor."

Approved in Englewood.

The Englewood Business Men's association, of which Roy L. Wolf is president, also approves the plan.

"We heartily favor any plan which will end the confusion of names which now exists," Mr. Wolf said. "There is no doubt in my mind that uniformity would be a great improvement."

The Woodlawn Business Men's association has gone on record as approving the plan. Put to a vote at the latest meeting, the proposal received unanimous approval, according to George W. Webster Jr., president elect of the association.

The Brighton Park Civic and Improvement association is another group in favor of the plan. Frank J. Lassa, vice president of the group, said:

"We are very much in favor of the idea, which certainly will end a great deal of confusion now prevalent. The council can count on support from us."

Want Confusion Ended.

Mrs. D. Roy Kendall, president of the Englewood Woman's club, placing her approval on the plan, said: "It should prove advantageous to all concerned. No one could object to a plan which will end the present confusion."

The Grand Crossing-Chatham Chamber of Commerce, through its new president, Ambrose J. Burke, placed tentative approval on the plan.

"The general idea is good," Mr. Burke said, "but before we go on record as approving it we would like to be sure that the public at large will have a hand in the proceedings and that no arbitrary changes will be made."

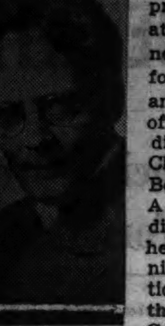
Mrs. William Johnson, president of the high school council of districts No. 1 and 25 of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, said:

"The P-T. A. membership is glad that action is to be taken to end the confusion and duplication of street names. It is a good plan and should be carried out."

ANNUAL SCOUT MEETING TO HEAR G. E. Q. JOHNSON

S. Shore District Leaders to Meet Tuesday.

George E. Q. Johnson, former United States district attorney for the Chicago district, will be the principal speaker at the annual dinner and meeting for Scout leaders and their friends of the south shore district of the Chicago council, Boy Scouts of America. The dinner is to be held Tuesday evening at International house of the University of Chicago, 59th street and Blackstone avenue.



GEORGE E. Q. JOHNSON.

Wayne Johnston, 8221 Kenwood avenue, chairman of the dinner program committee, said last week that the program would include the election of district officers, the recognition of 37 boys who attained Eagle Scout or quartermaster rank during 1935, the award of Scoutmaster keys to two south side leaders, and the award of veteran emblems to 28 south side Scout units.

The male chorus of the Woodlawn Kiwanis club will sing a number of selections under the direction of Andy Anderson, secretary of the club, Mr. Johnston said.

Name Winners of Keys.

The two Scout leaders who will be presented with the scoutmaster's key are Charles Jacobson, 8229 Merrill avenue, scoutmaster of Troop 736, and Harold Hill, 7542 Cornell avenue, scoutmaster of Troop 595.

To be eligible for the key, a scoutmaster must have at least five years active experience as leader of a troop and must have completed a progressive training program. This training program includes courses in the elements and principles of scoutmastership, the principles of first aid treatment and at least one specialization course in such subjects as swimming, life saving, nature study, handicraft, Indian lore and artcraft.

Twenty-eight south shore scout units will be awarded veteran emblems signifying 5, 10, 15 or 20 years of service to the boyhood of Chicago. The three 20 year veteran troops are 501, First Presbyterian church, 64th and Kimbark avenue; 508, St. James M. E. church, 4611 Ellis avenue; and 510, Isaiah Israel temple, 5025 Greenwood avenue.

9 Troops 15 Years Old.

Nine troops have been in existence 15 years. They are 514, United Church of Hyde Park; 516, Trinity Episcopal church, 125 East 26th street; 544, St. Paul Universalist church, 6101 Dorchester avenue; 563, St. Constantine Greek Orthodox church, 61st and Michigan avenue; 569, Essex Community church, 7400 Blackstone avenue; 594, South Shore Presbyterian church, 7600 South Shore drive; 595, South Shore Community church, 7401 Yates avenue; 703, St. Stephens M. E. church, 113th and State streets, and 704, Calumet Park field house, 10421 Avenue J.

Four troops are celebrating their 10th anniversary. They are No. 513, Congregation Rodfei Zedek, 54th place and Grenwood avenue; 520, Southfield Community church, 78th street and Cregier avenue; 754, Holy Rosary church, 351 East 113th street, and 783, City Hall building, Blue Island.

Among the five year units are six troops, two Sea Scout ships and four Cub packs. The troops are 522, Woodlawn Park M. E. church, 54th and Woodlawn avenue; 702, South Chicago Y. M. C. A., 91st and Houston avenue; 706, Grand Crossing park, 76th and Ingleside avenue; 763, All Saints church, 10806 Wabash avenue; 790, St. Patrick's church, 95th street and Commercial avenue; 797, Our Saviors United Lutheran church, 13614 Indiana avenue.

Cubbing Recent Project.

The two Sea Scout ships are the Hesperus and the Cuttlefish. The former, ship 5560, is sponsored by Christ Episcopal church, 65th and Woodlawn avenue; the latter, ship 5514, meets at the United Church of Hyde Park, 1448 East 53rd street.

Cubbing, the Scout program for boys 9, 10, and 11 years old, is a comparatively recent addition to the Scout movement. For the first time, some of the south shore cub packs are eligible for the five year emblem. The veteran packs are 3508, St. James M. E. church, 4611 Ellis avenue; 3567, Bryn Mawr Community church, 7000 Jeffery avenue; 3587, Wakeford Methodist church, 7600 St. Lawrence avenue; and 3740, Crerar Memorial Presbyterian church, 8100 Calumet avenue.

The annual meeting of the south shore district will bring together scoutmasters, cubmasters, Sea Scout skippers, their assistants, commissioners, committeemen, and representatives of institutions sponsoring Sout units.

BUSINESS MEN TO BANQUET MAROONS

Tribute to the University of Chicago football team will be paid Wednesday evening, when the 55th Street Business Men's association holds its twelfth annual banquet for the players at the Del Prado hotel. Officers and members of the banquet committee, left to right, front row, are: Frank Kelly, R. O. Byerrum, general chairman; J. G. Strader, president, and J. V. Parker, vice president. Rear row, left to right: Arthur Winter, Gordon Ramsay, Lou J. Harris, Leslie G. Drake, secretary, and George X. Rosenthal.

U. OF C. GRID TEAM WILL BE GUESTS AT 2 BANQUETS

Business Men, Alumni to Be Hosts.

More than 400 south siders as well as residents from all over Chicago, are expected to attend the banquet to be given Wednesday evening by the 55th Street Business Men's association, in compliment to the University of Chicago football team. The banquet, the twelfth to be tendered to the Midway teams, will be held in the Del Prado hotel, 53d street and Hyde Park boulevard.

The entire Maroon team, led by Capt. Jay Berwanger, who climaxed his career in his last game with a victory over Illinois, will be there, according to J. G. Strader, president of the association. Coach Clark Shaughnessy and Athletic Director T. N. Metcalfe also are to be present.

R. O. Byerrum Toastmaster.

R. O. Byerrum is in charge of arrangements and also will be the toastmaster. His committee includes Frank Kelly, D. G. Ramsay, J. V. Parker, Arthur Winter, W. N. Karlson, E. T. Braithwaite, L. J. Harris, E. J. McLaughlin, Harry Herzog, George Rosenthal, Max M. Moser, J. H. Finigan, Harry Brown, M. H. Hutson, Harry S. Kamen, Leslie Johnson and Arthur Borgeau. Following the dinner there will be dancing.

The team will be guests at another banquet on the following evening in the Hotel Sherman, the occasion being the annual football dinner of the Chicago Alumni club of the University of Chicago. The dinner will be unique in that no speeches, other than a few remarks to be made by Capt. Berwanger, will be given, according to Roy J. Maddigan, president of the club.

The program will include the awarding of the "C" to members of the varsity squad by Frederick Woodward, vice president of the university; presentation of numerals to the freshmen grid players and the award of trophies to the best tackler, blocker and most valuable player who received least recognition during the year.

South Side Letter Men.

Bethseda Lutheran Club to Give Play This Week

The Fellowship club of Bethesda Lutheran church, 105th street and Avenue J, will present "Yimmy Yonson's Yob," a three act comedy, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The performances will be held in the church hall starting each evening at 8 o'clock.

ON HONEYMOON

A Thanksgiving week wedding was that of Mr. and Mrs. George Iskos, solemnized last Sunday at St. Basil church. The bride is the former Miss Panagiota Chronis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory V. Chronis of 7150 Eberhart avenue. The couple is now on a honeymoon in California.

SOUTH CHICAGO MEDICAL BRANCH AIDS WILL MEET

The newly organized woman's auxiliary of the South Chicago branch of the Chicago Medical society will hold its second meeting tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the nurses' home of the South Chicago Community hospital. A program has been arranged by Mrs. Frank G. Murphy, president, which will be followed by a social hour in charge of Mrs. W. K. Hermann, hospitality chairman.

Officers in addition to Mrs. Murphy are: President-elect, Mrs. Louis D. Smith; vice president, Mrs. John W. Stanton; recording secretary, Mrs. Clarence S. Duner; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Casper M. Epstein; treasurer, Mrs. Stanley J. Mintek; council delegate, Mrs. Clyde R. Landis, and alternate delegate, Mrs. Thomas R. Bondus.

Committee chairmen include Mrs. H. W. Zimmerman, press and publicity; Mrs. Dwight C. Reeves, ways and means; Mrs. John W. Stanton, membership; Mrs. William Murray, legislative; Mrs. H. W. Elghammer, finance and auditing; Mrs. George M. Lucas, public relations. Mrs. W. J. Wanninger is the correspondent for Hygeia, national health magazine.

NEW SOUTH SIDE LODGE IS FORMED BY B'NAI B'RITH

The new south side lodge of the B'nai B'rith will be instituted at the Shoreland hotel this evening. The lodge has an initial membership of 350, the largest number ever applying for a lodge charter in this 92 year old organization. Its first officers are Mark L. Levy, president; Herbert Nickelson, Max F. Goldberg, and David Milgrim, vice presidents; Saul Manaster, treasurer, and Jerome J. Friedman, secretary. Dancing will follow the ceremonies.

SOUTH SIDE HAS 13 MILLIONS FOR PARK PROJECTS

But 4 Months Deadline to Reduce Amount.

Sixteen Chicago park district projects on the south and southwest sides, involving a proposed federal expenditure of $10,236,895 and a park district expenditure of $2,731,681 were given final though conditional approval by the Works Progress administration last week.

The condition imposes upon Robert J. Dunham, state administrator and president of the park board, the job of selecting from among the 16 projects those which can be completed within the next four months. Only such projects as can meet the WPA deadline will be undertaken.

The grant for south side park improvements is part of a total conditional grant to the park district of $33,743,533. Of this amount $8,348,507 was approved for general improvements in which the south side would share. The park district would supply $7,706,477 toward the total cost of the 47 projects approved for all parts of the city.

Bird Sanctuary Listed.

The south side projects which are to be undertaken at an early date will be selected from the following approved list:

A project to complete an extensive water fowl and songbird sanctuary in Jackson park, which was 25 per cent finished under the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. Government cost, $50,314; park district cost, $12,960.

Construction of a mall and erection of a flagpole on and landscaping the area in Washington park directly north of the 124th Field Artillery armory at 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue. Government, $27,357; park district, $9,350.

Rehabilitation of 31 parks and 94 miles of boulevard parkways in the south division of the park district, including changes in contours, rough and fine grading, preparation of flower beds and gardens, installation of drainage facilities, and sodding of ground and planting of trees and shrubbery. Government, $1,434,260; park district, $90,000.

Boulevard Landscaping.

Landscaping and construction work on California boulevard from 19th street to 31st street. Government, $103,199; park district, $49,417.

Development of roadways and walks, installation of sewer and water supply systems, and construction of band shell, grandstand, bath house, comfort station, lagoon bridges, tennis courts, swimming and wading pools at Marquette park. Government, $588,380; park district, $481,507.

Development of 55th street promontory, 55th street and Lake Michigan. Government, $320,257; park district, $191,489.

Construction and rehabilitation work at Jackson park; including removal and replacing of old pavements, curbs, walks, and parking spaces, relocation of the "Cahocia Court" building, completing of interior construction and decoration of the Japanese building and tea house, installation of water supply and sprinkler systems, and landscaping and planting of golf links. Government cost, $851,495; park district, $193,255.

A project involving the moving of the Lama temple, formerly in a Century of Progress grounds, to Wooded Island in Jackson park. Government, $205,659; park district, $75,795.

Remodeling, rehabilitation, and extension work at Washington park. Government, $734,767; park district, $156,082.

A project involving the excavation of approximately 400,000 cubic yards of long standing spoil banks along the Sag channel of the sanitary canal west of 132d street and Western avenue. Government, $1,239,252; park district, none.

Construction, rehabilitation, painting and landscape work at Burnham park. Government, $497,237; park district, $122,763.

Foster Park Project.

Construction and landscaping work at Foster park, 83d street and Loomis boulevard. Government, $334,420; park district, $83,620.

Filling, grading, landscaping and construction of combination shelter and comfort station at Calumet park, East 98th street and Lake Michigan. Government, $453,020; park district, $46,800.

Laying of pavement, installation of drainage system, and construction of swimming pool and bath house at Avalon park, 83d street and Dorchester avenue. Government, $570,097; park district, $74,945.

Development of park facilities in that part of Burnham park between 12th and 39th streets used as the grounds of A Century of Progress. Government, $2,143,103; park district, $1,040,898.

Recreation Program.

Filling, grading and planting the 98 acre triangular area comprising the undeveloped part of Calumet park. Government, $954,000; park district, $226,000.

The list of general park district projects improved includes a grant of $4,090,982 for the financing of an extensive recreation program in parks and playgrounds throughout the city.

Other major general projects are one for $1,239,170, for the rehabilitation of 117 small parks and recreation centers in the city; a grant of $592,000 for the replacement of 442 clay surfaced tennis courts, and an allotment of $568,000 for the resurfacing of approximately 770,000 square yards of asphalt park district boulevard pavements.

Proposed Street Name Changes

Twenty south side streets have been included in the proposal now before the city council to simplify names of 300 streets in Chicago by changing the names of "broken line" streets so that one name would serve for the entire length through the city. Changes recommended are as follows:

WOODLAWN CLUB TO HEAR STORY OF OLD TIME QUILT

Members to Show Their Work Tomorrow.

"Friendship Medley," the story told by grandmother's patchwork quilt, will be narrated to the Woodlawn Study club tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. R. W. Gailbraith. Members will contribute their handiwork to the exhibit that will complement her talk, the occasion being their observance of American home day. Mrs. John C. Moore is chairman.

The morning will be devoted to business, beginning with a board meeting at 10 o'clock. A demonstration of parliamentary practice and the reports of committee chairmen will follow.

Bryn Mawr Woman's Club.

Mrs. Richard M. McClure, whose subjects will be "The Pied Piper," and Mrs. Jennie Franklin Parvin, who will discuss "Our Public Library," will share the club program tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. D. B. Bisbee, home and education chairman, will have charge.

Department chairmen and delegates will give their monthly reports at the morning business session.

Park Manor Woman's Club.

Mrs. John E. Baillie will be guest speaker at the club on Tuesday afternoon and the Missionary chorus of South Chicago, directed by Mrs. E. E. Swanson, will sing. The board will meet at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Hyde Park Travel Club.

Marie Peary Stafford will describe her childhood experiences in Greenland before the club tomorrow afternoon and Mrs. Ethel Colzon Brazleton will review five new books.

University Church Women.

A board meeting at 11 o'clock will precede the luncheon of the Woman's club of the University Church of Disciples of Christ on Tuesday.

Woodlawn Mothers' Round Table.

Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological seminary, will discuss "International Relations" at the club on Wednesday afternoon.

Arche Club.

The literature study class will hold a reception on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank Newton Gage, 4032 Ellis avenue. Mrs. Charles Leonard Samson will present a program made up of readings by Carolyn Barr, songs by Arvesta Parrish, and Alice Jane Blair.

Chrysolite Club.

The club will tour the NBC studios on Tuesday afternoon, the trip being planned by Mrs. Arthur L. Stang, program chairman. The board will meet at 10 o'clock in the morning and members will continue their industrial sewing.

District Activities.

The public health committee of the Second district will meet for a round table discussion and tea tomorrow afternoon at the home of its chairman, Mrs. Milton H. Mack, 4530 Oakenwald avenue.

Chesterfield Woman's Club.

Mrs. C. C. Lively, Second district chairman, will conduct an American citizenship institute at the club meeting tomorrow afternoon. A. W. Johnson will demonstrate the voting machine, and Mrs. L. T. Depoy will sing.

South Side Catholic Women.

"The Human Side of the Orient" will be described at the club meeting on Thursday afternoon by the Rev. James Mayner, and the club chorus, directed by Mrs. Albert Few, will sing a program of Christmas carols.

Windsor Park Woman's Club.

The public welfare department, of which Mrs. J. W. Stanton is chairman, will present Miss Gertrude Clarny, guest speaker, at the meeting on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. R. L. Shawhan and Mrs. P. G. Rinken will receive.

Chicago-Calumet Club.

The meeting tomorrow afternoon will have a holiday theme. Mrs. John Barton Skinner, district music chairman, will lead the group in singing Christmas carols, Mrs. Thomas Linneweaver will talk on "Christmas, 1935," and Miss Margaret Quanstrom will give readings.

Woodlawn Young Women.

Miss Estelle Hunter will discuss "Effective Speech" at the club meeting on Tuesday evening, and Miss Eleanor Wendt will sing. Hostesses will be Miss Doris Jacobs, Miss Mildred Stone, Miss Marjorie Schultz, and Miss Marie Stichter.

Art Student Returns to U. S.

Miss Jane Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clayton Morrison, 6144 Kimbark avenue, who arrived in New York on Thanksgiving day after spending a year and a half abroad. Miss Morrison visited the art centers of England and France and then went on to Italy, where she spent a year studying Italian art and its history.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH WELCOMES NEW PASTOR TODAY

Rev. Belliss 4th Leader in 55 Years.

THE REV. F. C. BENSON BELLISS.

St. Paul's Episcopal church, 50th street and Dorchester avenue, today will welcome a new pastor, the Rev. F. C. Benson Belliss, who will preach this morning at the 11 o'clock services.

The Rev. Mr. Belliss was called from Trinity church Lenox, Mass., to succeed the late Dr. George H. Thomas, who died last January. He was pastor of Trinity church for four years and previously served at Fitchburg, Mass., in California, and in the Philippine Islands. He is a graduate of the University of California and the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Harvard university.

The new pastor is the fourth spiritual leader of St. Paul's in the past 55 years. Dr. Thomas, his immediate predecessor, was pastor for 20 years; Bishop Herman Page, now leader of the Detroit archdiocese, was pastor for 15 years before Dr. Thomas, and the late Dr. Charles H. Bixby served as leader for 20 years prior.

Reception Wednesday

The first opportunity for parishioners of the church to meet the new pastor formally will be provided by the woman's guild on Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Belliss will receive visitors after luncheon and again in the evening after dinner, in the Byllesby room of the parish house.

Wednesday also is important to the parish in another sense, because the women have chosen that day to give their annual bazaar. Under the leadership of Mrs. Paul Flagg, president of the women's guild, a varied program has been laid out, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning and continuing until late in the evening.

Novelties from Abroad

Mystery boxes, fortune tellers, and novelties from foreign countries, as well as the usual attractions of bazaars and Christmas sales, will be offered at the bazaar. Tables offering items for sale will include those for aprons, comforters, handkerchiefs, linens, delicatessen, second hand books, ladies' accessories, Christmas gifts and candy.

Officers of the woman's guild, other than Mrs. Flagg, are: Treasurer, Miss Ruth Power, and secretary, Mrs. George A. Funkey. All of the various parish organizations are co-operating in the venture. Some of those prominent in the groups are: Mrs. Leonard Reid, Mrs. A. S. Cumming, Mrs. Henry C. Cummins, Mrs. Lester E. Frankenthal, Mrs. Paul Klugh and Mrs. E. M. Anderson.

Thanksgiving Bride

MRS. PHILIP J. KENNEDY.

A Thanksgiving day event was the marriage of Miss Leona Marie Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas, 7941 Saginaw avenue, to Philip James Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Kennedy, 7816 Euclid avenue, at St. Bride's church. Miss Adele Thomas, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Francis Kennedy, twin brother of the groom, was best man. Mr. Kennedy attended Mount Carmel High school and his bride is a graduate of Loretto academy of Woodlawn. They will reside at 7653 Phillips avenue.

HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. COUNCIL TO HOLD U. OF C. LUNCHEON

Campus Tour on Program for Wednesday.

MRS. WARNER SIVYER.
[Kamen Studio.]

Friendly rivalry among the thirteen member associations in the matter of filling their quotas promises to crowd the tables on Wednesday when the members of the high school council of districts 2 and 25 assemble for luncheon at Judson court on the University of Chicago campus.

Afterwards the group will tour the campus, including in its itinerary the university chapel, Ida Noyes hall, the Reynolds club, the Oriental institute, Hudson commons, Mandel hall, the Lincoln collections, and the International house.

Parent-Teacher magazine chairmen of the high school council will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of the district chairman, Mrs. Ray Smale, 6344 Honore avenue.

"Youth and the Community" will be discussed at the Fenger High School P.-T. A. meeting on Tuesday afternoon. Robert Avery, student, will present the viewpoint of youth and W. E. Scott will speak for the community.

The Calumet High School P.-T. A. will give a tea on Wednesday afternoon for Miss Alice McKinley, who recently retired from the Calumet faculty after 38 years of service. There will be music by the string quartet and Mrs. C. B. Smith, a former president, will receive. School alumni, students, and former members of the P.-T. A. will be invited.

The south central council of District No. 1 will hold its second meeting of the year on Tuesday afternoon in the Burnside Elementary school, 91st place and Langley avenue, with Mrs. I. A. Olchovy, president, presiding.

"The Neighborhood: What Does It Mean to Your Child?" is the title of an address to be given by Dr. Clifford Shaw, director of the Institute for Juvenile Research, in the third series of talks about children and the forces which mold their character, on Thursday morning in the Englewood Y. M. C. A., 6545 Union avenue. The series is sponsored by the south central council parent education committee, of which Mrs. E. E. Molner is chairman, and by the Y. M. C. A.

The United Mothersingers of districts 1 and 25 will hold its regular monthly rehersal tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Hamilton park fieldhouse, 72d street and Normal avenue, under the direction of William Lester.

The ways and means committee of the Arthur Dixon P.-T. A. are sponsors of a card party to be given on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at 753 East 79th street. Entertainment will be offered by the Steinman School of Dramatic Art.

"North to the Orient," by Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, and "Spring Came On Forever," by Bess Streeter Aldrich, will be reviewed by Mrs. Merwin W. Pratt and Mrs. F. J. Mehl of the Arthur Dixon P.-T. A. book review club at the group's meeting tomorrow afternoon at the school. "Honey in the Horn," a book by H. L. Davis, is to be reviewed by Mrs. Henry Lassers.

The Kenwood P.-T. A. will present Ann Birk Kuper, dramatic reader, on Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock in a benefit program to be held in the Aragon hotel, 5401 Cornell avenue.

The annual benefit luncheon of the Wadsworth P.-T. A. is to be held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. C. H. Faust, 6338 Kimbark avenue. Mrs. F. C. Keiterberg, chairman of the ways and means committee, is conducting arrangements. The association's parent education class is to meet on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Katzman, 6643 Greenwood avenue.

Bring out your Baby Skin

Just Melt Off those dead flaky patches

Powder goes on smoothly

SKIN as smooth as a baby's!—that's what is hidden under those dead flaky patches which spot your face.

These patches are simply places where the skin cells are drying up. They thicken—try to flake off. Yet they never come off clean. And your powder makes them show up even worse—like whitish scuff!

There's only one thing to do—melt them off. Only then can your baby skin come out, smooth for powdering. A leading dermatologist tells how easily you can do this:

"The cells on the surface of the skin are constantly drying. The shedding of these dried-out cells can be quickened by melting them off with a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream). Then the young underlying cells—full of life—are brought into view."

This explains the immediate softening effect of Pond's Vanishing Cream. This light fluffy cream contains an ingredient having keratolytic properties. As you put it on, you can see flaky patches melt away—new smooth skin come instead. Even harsh roughnesses like chappings are smoothed away. The cream itself disappears from sight!

Now your skin is ready for powder—smooth, clear-toned, dewy fresh. Make-up goes on with a soft, even finish. Won't smudge or cake. Your skin keeps that "just-powdered" look for hours.

Overnight for lasting softness—Every night after cleansing, smooth Pond's Vanishing Cream on face, hands, arms, elbows. All night long, this delicate cream is bringing your skin a beautiful softness. Your face is cool, free of shine—and this greaseless cream is not smearing itself on the pillowcase.

Used regularly this way, Pond's Vanishing Cream keeps your skin entirely free of chappings, roughnesses of any kind. Your own baby skin is kept in full view—unclouded by the dead flaky patches that thicken so many skins—make them harsh, coarse—rough-looking even under powder! See special offer below.

Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb

great-granddaughter of the late William H. Vanderbilt, has more than her share of the noted Vanderbilt beauty. "Pond's Vanishing Cream," she says, "leaves my skin smooth and keeps my make-up fresh. I have it on my skin practically all the time—even overnight."

Send for Generous Package

Free your skin of flakiness!

POND'S, Dept. M-3, Clinton, Conn. I enclose 10c (to cover postage and packing) for special tube of Pond's Vanishing Cream with generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder.

EVERY 5TH GLASS FREE OF THE SWEETEST ORANGE JUICE YOU EVER TASTED!

Florida Oranges

give ¼ more juice . . . sweeter flavor . . . more vitamins, too, because

"Tree Fresh"

NO NEED to tell you how good orange juice is for young and old alike—how rich it is in the vitamins and mineral salts our systems crave. You know all this. You've heard it often. But do you know which oranges give the most juice—the sweetest juice?

Do you realize that you can get a fourth more juice for your money if you pick a certain kind of oranges? Think of it—5 glasses instead of 4. Why, that's just the same as getting every fifth glass FREE.

All you have to do is say to your dealer, "I want FLORIDAS." They're thin-skinned, heavy-laden with juice—the sweetest, most delicious juice you ever tasted, the richest in vitamins.

For Florida oranges are fresh oranges. They grow under ideal conditions of soil and climate. They slowly ripen on the tree in Nature's own good time. At their full golden perfection, they're picked, sorted, crated and fairly rushed to your dealer to reach your table "tree fresh," flavor-perfect, vitamin-rich. Get a share of Florida sunshine—order a dozen FLORIDAS today.

QUALITY NOW CONTROLLED BY THE

State of Florida

JUST ASK YOUR DEALER FOR Floridas

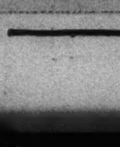
GRAPEFRUIT TWICE OR MORE A DAY FOR HEALTH



● Have fewer colds, more pep, more resistance. Eat luscious "tree fresh" Florida grapefruit at least twice daily or drink the tangy, delicious juice. "Tree fresh" Floridas build up your alkaline reserve, correct the acid-forming tendencies of other foods, help keep you in "vacation health" all winter long. And how you'll love their flavor!

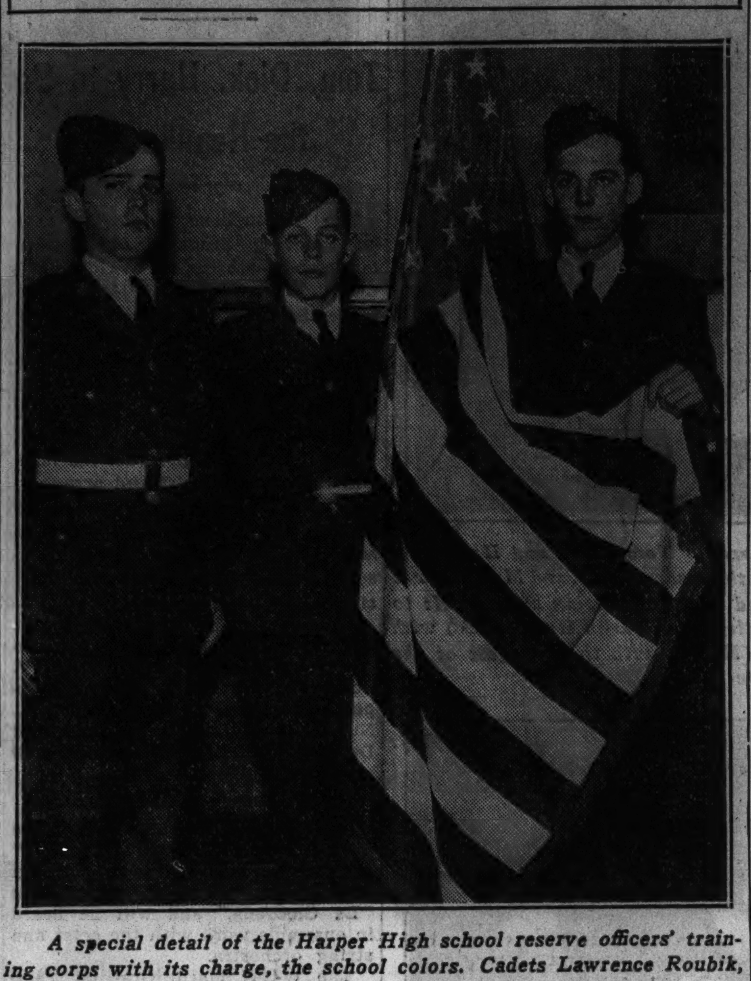
HARPER HIGH COLOR GUARD



A special detail of the Harper High school reserve officers' training corps with its charge, the school colors. Cadets Lawrence Roubik, Albert Vare, and Fred Krueger compose the color guard, raising and lowering the flag at all school assemblies. The unit was established this fall and has an enrollment of more than 200.

TWO BANQUETS IN STORE FOR FENGER SQUAD

Kiwanis, Hi-Y Clubs to Feast Players.

Two banquets will be given this week for the Fenger High school football squad. Tomorrow evening its members will dine with the school Hi-Y at the 111th Street Y. M. C. A. and at noon on Tuesday they will be the guests of the Roseland Kiwanis club at the Calumet Commercial club, 219 East 113th street.

ALFRED J. TENINGA

The Kiwanis banquet will be its tenth annual celebration for the high school players and Alfred J. Teninga will be in charge of plans, as he has been for each one in the past. Detlof Nelson, president, will preside, and Lynn O. Waldorf, coach at Northwestern university, will be guest speaker.

Charles Palmer, coach at Fenger, and Ray Apolskie, captain of the squad, also will speak, and Oscar Melillo and Bruce Campbell, American league baseball players, have been invited as special guests.

The committee planning the Hi-Y banquet includes George Anderson, Richard Ferrari, John Miller, Robert Prystalski, and George Peterson.

Lettermen among the fifty players who will attend the banquets are Rudy Mucha, Kenneth Anderson, George Hensley, Edward Howes, John Petersoli, Arthur Yompolski, Richard Shirvis, Bernard Moorman, James Parker, Harry Schwartzenberg, Mario Canello, Al Gumulaskas, Fred Greco, and Sam Gaglin. Managers who will attend are William Plankin and Walter Grzesina.

Academy of Our Lady Aids to Have Party Saturday

The auxiliary of the Academy of Our Lady will hold its annual card party for the benefit of the scholarship fund on Saturday afternoon at the school, 95th and Throop streets. Mrs. Jay Farrell is president of the auxiliary and the party committee includes Mrs. John Bolton, Mrs. D. J. Sullivan, and Mrs. William Gorman.

—Harper—

Sergt. Wilbur L. Peshia, U. S. A., is instructing classes in military training at Harper High school where the R. O. T. C. was established in September. The unit has more than 200 members already, and interested cadets are given additional instruction in special classes conducted after school hours. Harper has one of the most modern rifle ranges in the city, a range accommodating eight marksmen. A column is reserved in the Harper Highway, school paper, for news of the unit though no publicity officer has been appointed yet. Classes meet five days a week.

—Calumet—

The twelfth semi-annual concert of the Calumet High school band and orchestra will be given on Thursday evening in the school auditorium, 8115 May street. Soloists will be Alfred Aulwurm, violinist, and Miss Nina June Eckhar, soprano, who will be accompanied by David Nelson.

The Beverly Hills American Legion drum and bugle corps and drill team will assist, and after the musical program a movie, "Flying the Lindbergh Trail," will be shown.

Proceeds will be used to buy new and to repair old instruments for the two organizations. James Thatcher is director of the orchestra, and Capt. William Morris, leader of the band.

The Calumet Band and Orchestra Sponsors' club, a parents' organization, is assisting. Newly elected officers of the club are: President, Thomas Cafcas; vice president, Anton Chinick; treasurer, George Stone; recording secretary, Mrs. Frank J. Brennan, and corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. J. Walter.

—Kelly—

Dedication of the new drill hall at Kelly High school will take place some time this week, as soon as construction is completed, according to Private J. G. Hickman, U. S. A., instructor. The R. O. T. C. was organized last September and has had no place to drill. Work on the hall was started two weeks ago. The unit numbers 210, including 40 in the band.

ROSELAND POST ACTS TO SPREAD YULETIDE GIFTS

Hopes to Unite Agencies Assisting Needy.

Roseland post of the American Legion has invited all charitable organizations and others interested in the distribution of Christmas baskets for the needy of the community to participate in a drive that will eliminate duplication. Baskets will go not only to needy veterans but to others who are deserving. A meeting to discuss the project will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the Legion clubrooms, 11447 Michigan avenue.

The Roseland Kiwanis and Lions' clubs have already endorsed the plan. The Roseland post has started the subscription list with $50, to which the executive committee has added $16.

Fort Dearborn post, No. 268, will hold a Christmas "grab bag party," Saturday night at headquarters, 6412 Cottage Grove avenue.

Mrs. Melville Mucklestone, national president of the American Legion auxiliary, will be honored at a dinner-dance Tuesday night in the grand ballroom of the Medinah-Michigan Avenue club.

The homecoming reception for Mrs. Mucklestone, who has been away from the city following her election to the national presidency, is being sponsored by the Cook county council of the American Legion auxiliary, of which Mrs. George Cassidy is president.

Members of the reception committee are Mrs. George Cassidy, general chairman, and the eight district presidents, Mrs. G. G. Speir, Mrs. Joseph Van Derhaeghen, Mrs. Sue Hanes, Mrs. R. C. Webber, Mrs. Ernest Duckett, Mrs. Thomas McManus, Mrs. Frank Dowd, and Mrs. Joseph Bernhard. Mrs. Duckett is chairman of reservations.

Joint installation of officers recently was held by Greater Chicago post, No. 866, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Auxiliary. New officers of the post are Ed Zydorek, commander; Martin Egney, senior vice commander; Frank Baker, junior vice commander; Michael Bartens, adjutant; Charles Linse, quartermaster; James Christenson, chaplain; Frank Hartnich, officer of the day, and Frank Goebel, judge advocate.

New officers of the auxiliary are Mrs. Bertha Hein, president; Mrs. Minnie Canty, senior vice president; Mrs. Lilly Roark, junior vice president; Mrs. Julia Hodgdon, secretary; Mrs. Cora Krusinger, treasurer; Mrs. Sarah Cochrane, chaplain; Mrs. Gladys Gallagher, conductress; Miss Evelyn Link, patriotic instructor, and Mrs. Helen Walgreen, guard.

Beverly Hills, unit, No. 407, will hold a party Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, at the Ridge park fieldhouse. Mrs. Edward Babel has charge.

Englewood unit, No. 61, will meet tomorrow night at Thornton hall, 69th street and Normal boulevard. Mrs. Thelma Halwax, president, has requested members to make pastries for the Christmas dinners at the Orland Convalescent camp. The food will be delivered by Mrs. Eva Palm, rehabilitation chairman.

The annual installation of officers of Murphy-Gaynor post, No. 1117, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be held Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the Hamilton Park clubhouse, 72d street and Normal avenue.

ARTHUR MIDDLETON.
[Herring Photo.]

The guild, an organization of the high school journalists in the city's public and private schools, has four sections—newspaper, creative writing, annual and business staf—and each meets monthly for a round table conference. In his new position Middleton will preside over the discussions of the newspaper representatives.

This is his third year as a member of the "E" Weekly staf. Last year he was sports editor. He also was one of the six students who last spring compiled the school history which took fifth place, the only award received in Chicago, in a national contest sponsored by the Scholastic magazine.

—Fenger—

"Commencement is a leading light on the path of success," will be the class motto of the February graduating class of Fenger High school, it is announced. The class colors are orchid and peach and the orchid was chosen as the official flower, according to Jack Ohmans, senior president.

Cecilia Schmiedl, Harry Fratz, and Leonard Hylander comprised the committee that selected the colors and Verne Martin, Mildred Richards, and Genevieve Pocius chose the flower. The class motto was the result of the work of Bernard Entin, Mae Paterson, and Edward Borman.

Plans are being made for an assembly sponsored by the class at which several outstanding seniors will appear.

R. O. T. C. INSTRUCTOR AT FENGER HIGH IS CALUMET GRADUATE

Private William Robinson, U. S. A., instructor of the Fenger High school R. O. T. C., has spent most of his life in Chicago. He was graduated from Calumet High school, where he was a member of the reserve officers training corps.

PRIVATE WILLIAM ROBINSON.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

After school Private Robinson joined the 61st coast artillery at Fort Sheridan, where he was assigned to a search light detail, an honorary appointment, as there are only four such details in the United States.

In 1934, prior to his appointment at Fenger, he was in charge of a CCC camp at Fort Sheridan.

OLSEN RECALLS 1ST BENNY SHOW ON ANNIVERSARY

Idea of Kidding Sponsor Was George's.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Oddly enough, the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra and Jack Benny are both putting on their 200th broadcast this afternoon. The symphony will present an all request program. Jack Benny will turn back the clock [6 p. m. on WENR] and recreate his very first program. In that show, incidentally, George Olsen and Ethel Shutta were probably regarded as the stars by radio listeners since they were already well acquainted with them. But they soon decided that Benny was good, too.

George recalled some of the amusing incidents at the College inn the other evening in connection with that first broadcast. The idea for the program was Bertha Brainerd's, the NBC executive. George and Ethel were selected to provide the music. A comedian was wanted and Benny was finally picked as one who ought to click on the air.

Kidding Product, Olsen's Idea.

And here's something for which millions of radio fans have George Olsen to thank. The idea of kidding the sponsor and the product was his. When it was suggested to the sponsor he said, "Go as far as you like." The rest, of course, is history. That suggestion has had a mighty effect in radio. In the three intervening years the heavy, stodgy hand of many a sponsor has been eased because of the success of the foolery over the sponsor's wares initiated on the Benny program.

The first Benny show went on from the old "Midnight Frolics" on the Amsterdam roof in New York in April, 1932. There was an audience, but a glass curtain separated them from the performers.

Benny Introduced as Denny.

Olsen introduced Benny thus: "Ladies and gentlemen, Jack Denny, the Canada [pause] dry humorist." [Denny was a favorite band leader that season. What's become of him now?]

To which Jack retorted, "Jack Benny is the name, Lopez." And so the show was off amid a welter of confusion, prevailing to this day.

Ethel Shutta sang "Rockabye Moon" and "Listen to the German Band," two numbers which are almost her trade marks now. Olsen recalls that his crew played "That's How We Make Music."

In order to make the laughter spontaneous the Olsen bandsmen were not allowed to hear Benny in rehersal. In a few weeks the program became so popular that Olsen was besieged by players from other bands who wanted to join his outfit just to hear the comedy. Bob Rice who sat fairly near the microphone laughed so loudly during the first broadcast that they had to move him back. Listeners wrote in complaining that the one fellow roared so boisterously that he obviously was a stooge. But it was really the spontaneous reaction of Rice.

How Mary Got In.

Mary Livingstone didn't even see Jack's first broadcast. She listened in on the radio. She was first introduced as a New Jersey fan who had written a letter asking Benny for a job as secretary. Her first big laugh line came when Jack asked her whether he might take her home and she retorted that Dick [later Hotcha] Gardiner, one of the orchestra men, was taking her.

Ethel encouraged and coached Mary a lot. George and Ethel were working for NBC at the time and when the sponsor moved to CBS after 26 weeks because he found a better spot they were forced to drop out. Mary then took over the leading feminine part and Ted Weems was engaged to do the music.

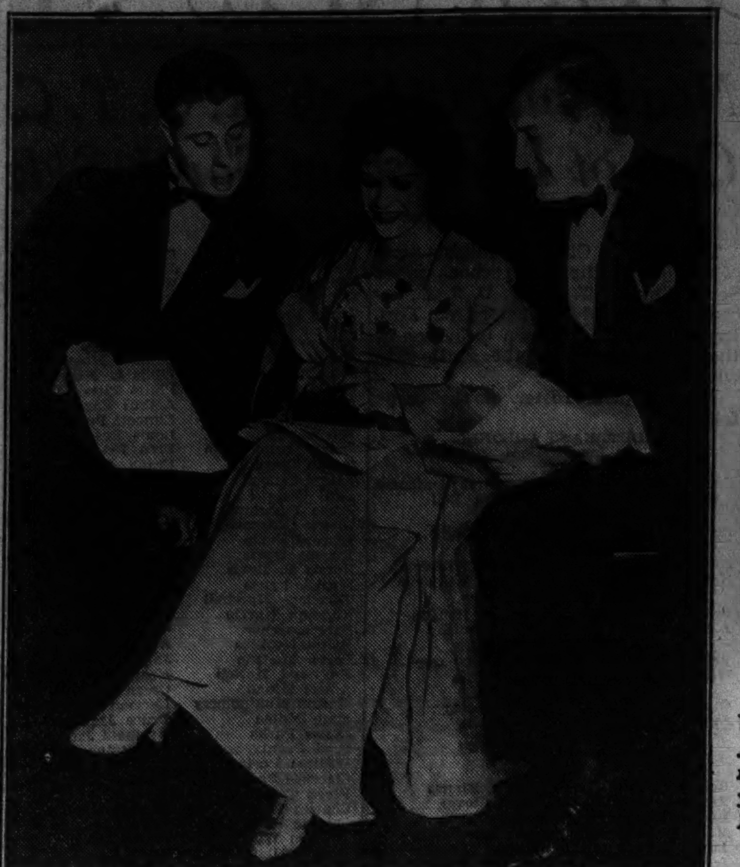
For his first series Benny got $1,250 for two programs a week. Now he is reported getting $7,000 for one program a week. His band masters after the two mentioned above: Frank Black, Don Bestor, Jimmy Grier, and Johnny Green. Other soloists: Andrea Marsh, James Melton, Frank Parker, Michael Bartlett, and Kenny Baker.

High Spots of the Week.

Choice dialings of the week: The Carefree Carnival with Ransom Sherman as Dr. Right. . . . Alec Templeton's interpretation a la Handel of Wendell Hall's "It Aint Gonna Rain No More." . . . Harold Stokes' Sunday evening show "Bandanna Days." . . . James Melton's grand singing in "Stars Over Broadway." . . . The Magic Key's contact with Capt. Musick aboard the China Clipper. . . . Kirsten Flagstad's magnificent singing on the Sunday Evening hour. . . . Nelson Eddy's return to the air on Monday.

The King's Jesters' infectious harmony. . . . Jack Hylton's medley of songs from Lily Pons new picture, "I Dream Too Much." . . . Wallace Beery's introductions. . . . Leopold Spitalny's NBC Musical Comedy Revue at 7 on Sunday evening. . . . Donald Novis' singing on "Jumbo." . . . Gladys Swarthout's noble pinch-singing for Grace Moore. . . . Edward McHugh's hymns. . . . The gay humor in the commercials on Isham Jones, MBS serenade.

REPORTING RADIO PHOTOGRAPHICALLY



An informal glimpse of Don Ameche (left), Betty Lou Gerson, and Francis X. Bushman, headliners of the NBC First Nighter program, looking over their scripts before stepping to the microphone. First Nighter rounded out its fifth year on the air Friday evening.

Two pairs of Tom, Dick, and Harrys. Tom, Dick, and Harry, the W-G-N comedy-harmony trio, and the three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Hynds of Chicago who were named after the singing stars. Left to right: Bud Vandover (Tom) with little Tom, Marlin Hurt (Dick) with young Dick, and Gordon Vandover (Harry) with the youngest of the Hynds trio, little Harry, born last Oct. 19.

'LIFE' IS THEME ON MIDDAY HOUR FOR THIS WEEK

"Life," a theme in keeping with the Advent season, will be the subject for the guest speakers on the W-G-N midday service this week. The service is heard every week day at 12:35 p. m. Speakers for the week follow: Monday, President Irving Maurer of Beloit college; Tuesday, Harold Stanley Stewart, minister First Baptist church, Oak Park; Wednesday, David Almond, rabbi Edgewater Hebrew congregation; Thursday, Alfred Newbery, rector Church of the Atonement; Friday, O. P. Kretzmann, executive secretary Walther league of the Evangelical Lutheran church; Saturday, John W. R. McGuire, St. Viator's college.

Kirbery and the Ladies.

Ralph Kirbery, the "Dream Singer," heard over W-G-N and Mutual at 11:15 a. m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, has always drawn the bulk of his audience from the fair sex.

Fred Allen Writes

Dear Larry: Congress will probably give a medal to those record-breaking army balloonists. No senator could help getting excited when a gas-bag climbs that high. . . . The world-wide blockade has Mussolini worried. With exports at a standstill tenors will now be confined to Italy. . . . Auto manufacturers are getting things so streamlined drivers will soon be pinning back their ears. . . . Then there was the Scot who fed his children jumping beans—so he wouldn't have to buy them a pogo stick. . . . It's terrible the way laundries shrink stuff these days. Last week I sent out a pair of white socks and got back two tea bags. . . . It's a good thing the Pilgrims didn't land in Russia. Turkeys raised on the five year plan would be too tough to eat. . . . Italian soldiers in Africa have at last found a use for the Fascist salute. The lifted palm keeps the sun out of their eyes.

Cordially,
FRED ALLEN.

Sunday Evening Club.

Dr. Samuel S. Drury of the St. Paul's school at Concord, Mass., will be the guest speaker on the Sunday Evening club service to be broadcast over W-G-N at 8:30 tonight.

EVA CONDON OF W-G-N SERIAL IS STAGE VETERAN

Eva Condon as "Ma Jordan," a sort of godmother to Molly in "Molly of the Movies" on W-G-N and MBS, brings to radio a wealth of experience gained on the stage of New York, Chicago, and other leading cities. She was born in Washington, D. C., and is the daughter of a noted Irish-American, Capt. Edward O'Meagher Condon. Miss Condon made her first stage appearance with John Drew at the Empire theater in New York. She has been cast in two Pulitzer prize plays, "Ice Bound" and "Strange Interlude."

While with "Strange Interlude" she played five months at the Blackstone theater in Chicago. She is now an executive member of the Catholic Actors' Guild of America. Miss Condon has appeared with Eddie Cantor, Angelo Patri, and Sigmund Romberg, and in the sketch, Red Davis. Among the plays she played in were: "The Guardsman," "The Detour," "The Late Christopher Bean," "Fear," "The Pure in Heart," "Give Us This Day," "Small Miracle," and "Joyous Season."

Noted Parachute Jumper on Whistler's Hour Today

Lieut. E. Vern Stewart of the United States army air corps, who has made 301 accredited parachute jumps and who is a member of the famed "Caterpillar club," will be the guest speaker on the "Whistler and His Dog" program on W-G-N at 12:45 p. m. today. Lieut. Stewart will recount many of his adventures in the air and during jumps.

Memorial Broadcast Today for Slain Missionaries

A memorial program in observance of the first anniversary of the death of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Stamm, missionaries and former students at the Moody Bible institute, Chicago, at the hands of Chinese communists will be broadcast by the Moody Bible institute singers during their program today, over WCFL and NBS at 4:30 p. m.

Blackhawks Vs. Canadiens on W-G-N at 9:45 Tonight

Tonight at 9:45 o'clock W-G-N and MBS will present an exclusive broadcast of the third period of the National Hockey league game between the Chicago Blackhawks and the Montreal Canadiens, with Bob Elson describing the play by play.

NEW FUNNYBONE FOLLIES' FIRST SHOW TONIGHT

Tom, Dick, Harry to Be the Headliners.

The "Funnybone Follies," a new fast moving program of popular music and featuring the W-G-N comedians, Tom, Dick, and Harry, will make its debut at 7:30 tonight over W-G-N. The program will be heard each Sunday evening with Harold Stokes and the W-G-N dance orchestra, the trio and guest soloists from Studio 1.

For the opening program the boys and their accompanist and arranger, Carl Hoefle, promise a group of comedy songs and the introduction of some of their famous comedy characters. Sally Jo Nelson, petite songstress, will be guest vocalist.

Evensong at 6 o'clock will present the choir of the First German Methodist church, directed by Henry V. Loeppert, with Miss gnes E. Loeppert accompanist. Bishop John L. Nuelson of Zurich, Switzerland, and Dr. Henry C. Loeppert, pastor, will participate in the services.

Lucille Long with Northerners.

Lucille Long, contralto, will be the guest soloist on "The Northerners" program at 9:30 tomorrow evening. She will sing "Zoce De Donne" from "La Gioconda," and will be heard in ensemble work with the octet and string orchestra.

The W-G-N Mardi Gras on Tuesday evening will present a variety of entertainment with Mr. Stokes and the dance orchestra. Helen Ward, soloist with Benny Goodman's orchestra; Ann Tiffany, Wayne Van Dine, George Wald, and The Doring Sisters trio and Grenediers quartet will combine their vocal talents in this 45 minute program.

Baggiore and LaMance.

Attilio Baggiore, tenor, and Eleanor LaMance, soprano of the City Opera company, will be heard with Henry Weber and the W-G-N Concert orchestra at 9:30 Wednesday. Miss LaMance will offer "Song of the Soul" as her solo and will be heard in a duet, "Play Gypsies, Dance Gypsies," with Mr. Baggiore. The tenor will sing Schubert's "Serenade" and Ware's "Mammy Song." Philip Kaufman will be heard in a violin solo "Meditation."

Thursday evening the concert orchestra will be heard in their "Musical Revue" program, with Kathryn Witwer and Emery as the vocal soloists and Edward Vito, harpist, as featured instrumentalist.

"Behind the Camera Lines" at 9:30 Friday will present another half hour of drama with June Meredith, Charles P. Hughes, and the orchestra, directed by Henry Weber.

Two Trios to Be Heard on Penthouse Serenade Today

Two thirds of a former Paul Whiteman threesome is to be reunited in a new trio today at 4 over WMAQ on the Penthouse Serenade program. Jack Fulton and Charlie Gaylord, who with Skin Young made up a popular Whiteman trio several years ago, will be joined by Jimmie Hatton in some close harmony. Betty, Jean, and Jim, regular harmony trio, will also be heard. Soloists are Don Mario and Fulton.

PRETTY

Here's proof of the story about good looking girls in radio published last Sunday. It's Sally Smith, who plays Priscilla Webster in the W-G-N sketch "We Are Four."

SPALDING TO BE GUEST TONIGHT ON CBS CONCERT

Albert Spalding, distinguished American violinist, will play two movements of Mendelssohn's Concerto in E minor for violin and orchestra and a group of lighter compositions with the symphony orchestra and chorus directed by Victor Kolar over WBBM-CBS at 8 o'clock tonight.

Spalding will present the concerto movements first—the andante and the allegretto. Later he will play Rimsky-Korsakoff's colorful "Song of India," "Songs My Mother Taught Me," by Dvorak, and Sarasate's brilliant "Zigeunerweisen."

Kolar will open the hour with Wolf-Ferrari's Overture to "The Secrets of Suzanne." The chorus, with orchestral accompaniment, will then sing "Hail to the Happy Day," from Donizetti's opera "Lucia di Lammermoor." Following Spalding's first group the orchestra will play Sibelius' "Valse Triste" and Berlioz's stirring "Rakoczy March."

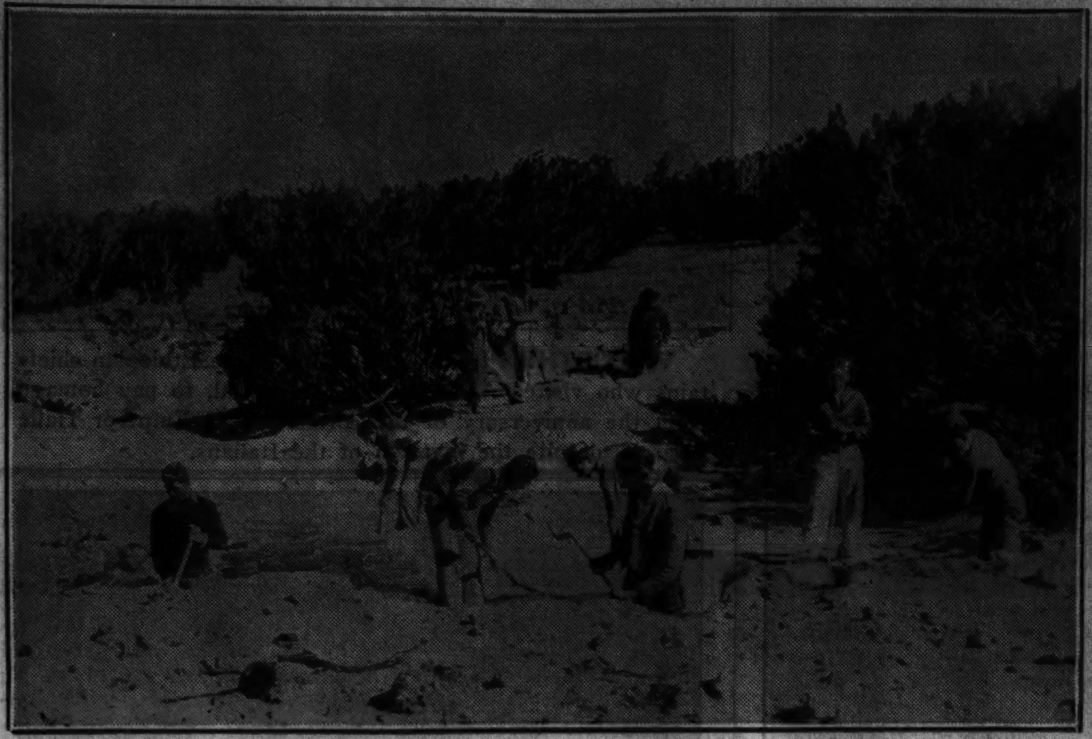
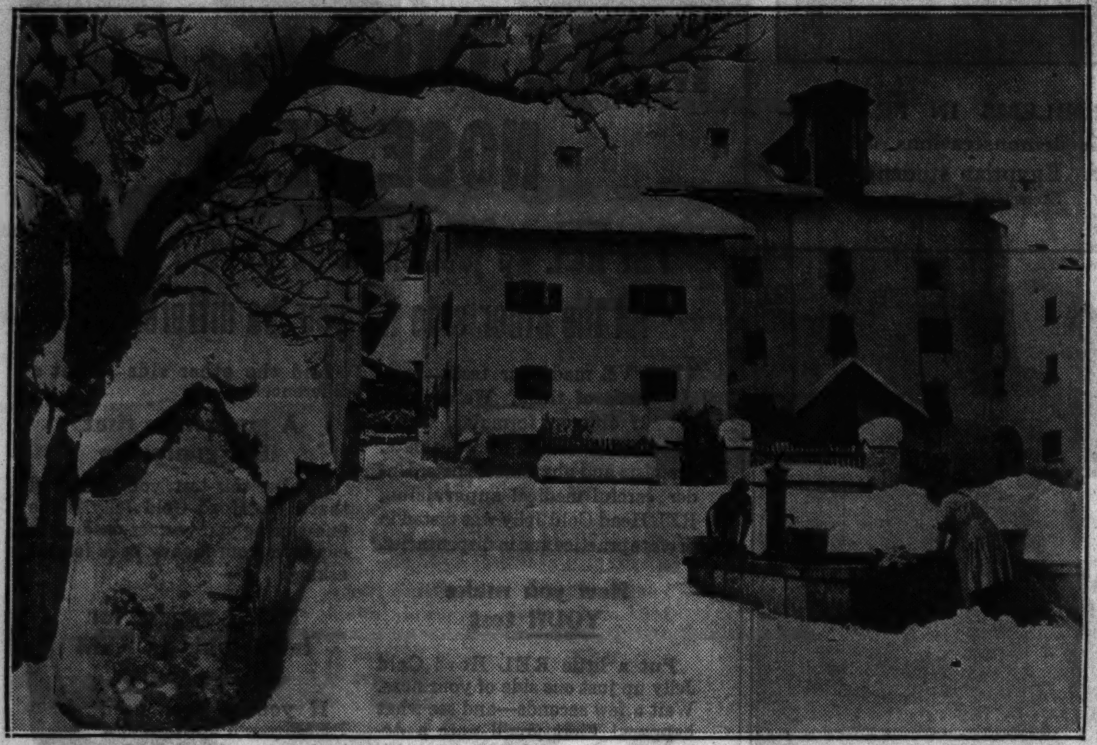
Link Prehistoric Dwellers of South and North America; Find Game Courts 800 Years Old in Arizona



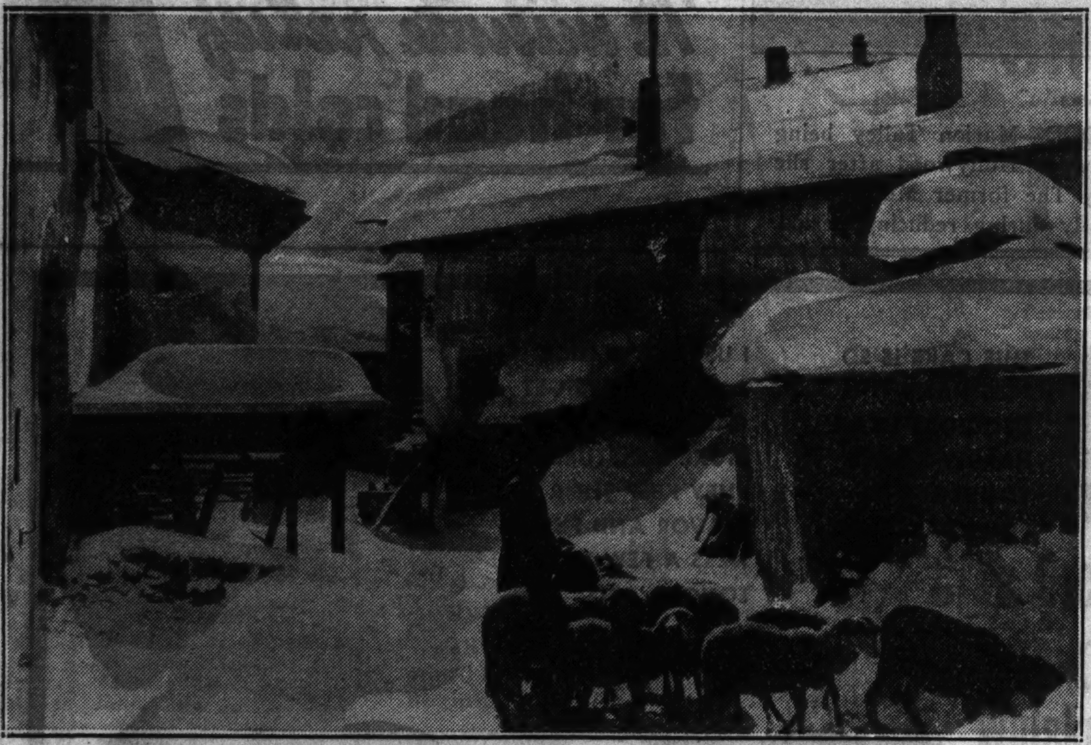
[Acme Photo.]

INDIAN GAME COURTS—Courts resembling the ball courts of ancient Mayans were built by Pueblo Indians of northern Arizona 800 years ago, according to John McGregor, instructor in archæology at Arizona State Teachers college, Flagstaff, after two months of excavation of site near Flagstaff. The courts were oval, with level floors and sloping sides. Rocks set in floor served as goals.



[Acme Photo.]

WORKING AMID THE SNOW—Since winter days at Zuoz in the upper Engadine, Switzerland, are bright with sunshine, the women attend to their usual laundry work quite cheerfully at the village fountain.



[Acme Photo.]

WINTER BEDECKS SWITZERLAND'S LANDSCAPES—Peace and contentment fall over Europe's winter playground as snow and sunshine combine to wrap the Zuoz, in the Engadine, Switzerland, in tourist luring beauty.

[Acme Photo.]

NEW OPEN AIR THEATER IN GERMANY—View of the newly erected Dietrich-Eckart open air theater on the reich sports field of Berlin, Germany. The Nazis are making elaborate preparations for entertaining the 1936 Olympic games in their capital and have built several new buildings.

ART WORK IN COOKERY—Among the more startling exhibits at the recent annual cookery exhibition held in Vienna was this replica of St. Stephan's cathedral. It was made of sugar by a skilled chef.

TONS OF CHALK FALL FROM CLIFF—Cleft in cliff near Deal, Kent, England, with thousands of tons of chalk in the sea below after tens of thousands of tons were hurled into the water by slide. The chalk formed a natural pier almost a quarter of a mile into the sea. The gap left is 200 yards wide.

THE MODERN SWING IS TO TOOTH POWDER

Advised by dentists. Safer. More effective. More economical. Rinses cleanly off brush. No unsanitary deposit.

See and feel the cleansing action of oxygen bubbles on

"The Forgotten 60"

(hidden surfaces between the teeth)

YOU owe yourself this new experience in mouth hygiene. Put Calox Tooth Powder on your brush and start cleaning your teeth. Then watch what happens. You can really see that active foam of oxygen bubbles penetrating the crevices between the teeth — purging the 60 "forgotten" surfaces. And you can feel the refreshing cleanness it leaves in your mouth.

How Oxygen Fights Decay

Hidden tooth surfaces, out of reach of ordinary brushing, are favorite strongholds of decay. Food particles collect there and ferment. Germ-colonies form and throw off acids which attack the teeth. Oxygen, freed by Calox, reaches and cleans those areas. It ferrets out germs, deodorizes food debris. The breath is sweetened. Mouth acids are neutralized. A special ingredient tones and firms the gums. And the teeth are safely polished to gleaming whiteness. Even tobacco stains disappear. The penetrating action of Calox makes it an ideal cleanser for artificial teeth.

Follow your dentist's advice and join the swing to this great powder. Discover how pleasant it is to the taste, and how much money it saves you.

Costs Less to Use

From an average tube of tooth paste you get 45 to 50 brushings. The handy-size package of Calox gives you more than 150 brushings, and the family-size more than 300! Buy it today at any good drug store.

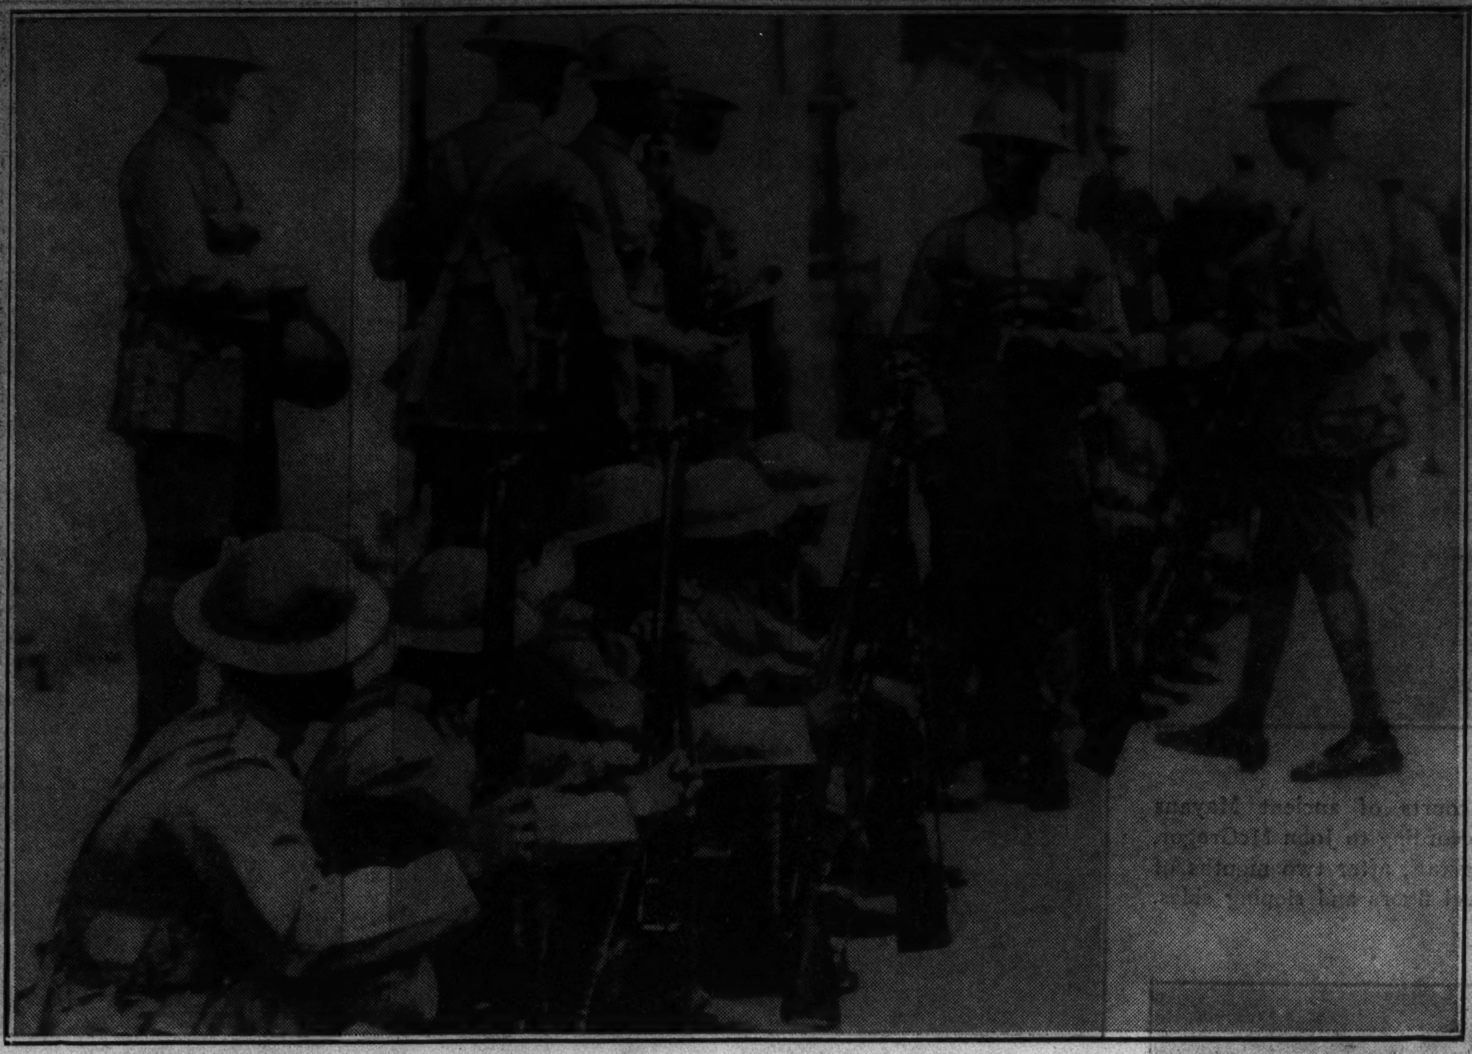
Egyptian Student Riot Perturbs British Foreign Office—Chiefs Gather to Honor Haile Selassie Anniversary

MISS RADIO BROADCAST—Freeman Gosden (right) and Charles Correll, radio's Amos and Andy, respectively, missed their first broadcast since they became stars when they were delayed recently on hunting trip.



BRITAIN TROUBLED BY EGYPTIAN RIOTS IN MIDST OF DIPLOMATIC PROBLEMS IN FRANCE→ Steel helmeted troops relax on the curb, but hold on to their muskets during serious anti-British demonstrations in Cairo. Expecting fresh outbursts momentarily, these soldiers were on guard near the Maison dux Peuple. Egyptian students rioted in protest against speech by Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary.

VISIT ETHIOPIAN EMPEROR—Three Ethiopian chieftains who visited Addis Ababa, the capital, to pay homage upon the anniversary of the coronation of Emperor Haile Selassie, despite the invasion of the Italians.

COMPETE FOR ACCORDION CHAMPIONSHIP IN LONDON—A group of girl accordionists with their instruments, part of the hundreds of accordionists who gathered at Central hall, London, England, to compete in music contest. It was the first national championship competition for amateur accordionists and drew a large audience and an unexpected number of participants.

REL
HEAD COLD JELLY

MAKE THIS One Side NOSE TEST

Put REL up just one side of your nose—let the other side tell you the difference!

WE'VE made our tests—hundreds of them. We've tried out 137 different formulas. We've consulted doctors, pharmacists, chemists and pharmacologists. Under careful medical supervision, REL Head Cold Jelly was tested in private practice and in dispensaries.

Now you make YOUR test

Put a little REL Head Cold Jelly up just one side of your nose. Wait a few seconds—and see what happens! First you'll note a delightful, refreshing "pine woods" odor. Then you'll feel that side of the nostril open—clearly—all the way up. That "stuffed up" feeling is gone! You breathe freely and naturally again!

And the other side—what a difference!

A guarantee that IS a guarantee

If, after this test, you don't feel that REL Head Cold Jelly is the finest thing you've ever used—you can have your money back for the asking!

REL is as good for head colds as REM is for coughs

If you've ever used REM, you'll know that's saying something! REL comes in handy tubes convenient for pocket or purse. We say it's good . . . you'll say it's wonderful!

How GOOD LUCK Makes Cakes Hold More Moisture—Stay Fresh Longer

A Scientific Pure Food Creation—Approved by Good Housekeeping Institute—Accepted by The American Medical Association, Committee on Foods

Women by the thousands everywhere are quitting old-type shortenings for GOOD LUCK. They note that (apparently accompanying the velvety-crumb, smooth, even texture this creation produces) their cakes stay moist and fresh much longer.

When you try GOOD LUCK, you will note that even when taken cold from the refrigerator it creams up beautifully and takes up sugar almost instantly. Hence, "air holes" and "air tunnels" are virtually eliminated. Moisture retention is increased; your cakes keep better.

GOOD LUCK has a delicious natural flavor. Hence, your cakes have a better flavor. Make this test: Taste a little of the shortening you now use. Then taste GOOD LUCK. The difference you note is the difference in the flavor you get in the cakes you make.

GOOD LUCK is a scientific pure food creation of the Jelke Company. It is pure vegetable—churned in wholesome milk. Not to be confused with ordinary margarines. It comes to you mild and sweet and fresh—"dated-for-freshness." And is guaranteed to be absolutely free from cheap imported coconut oils.

GOOD LUCK is approved by Good Housekeeping and accepted by the American Medical Association, Committee on Foods. Get a pound today from your grocer and try it. You'll be glad you did.

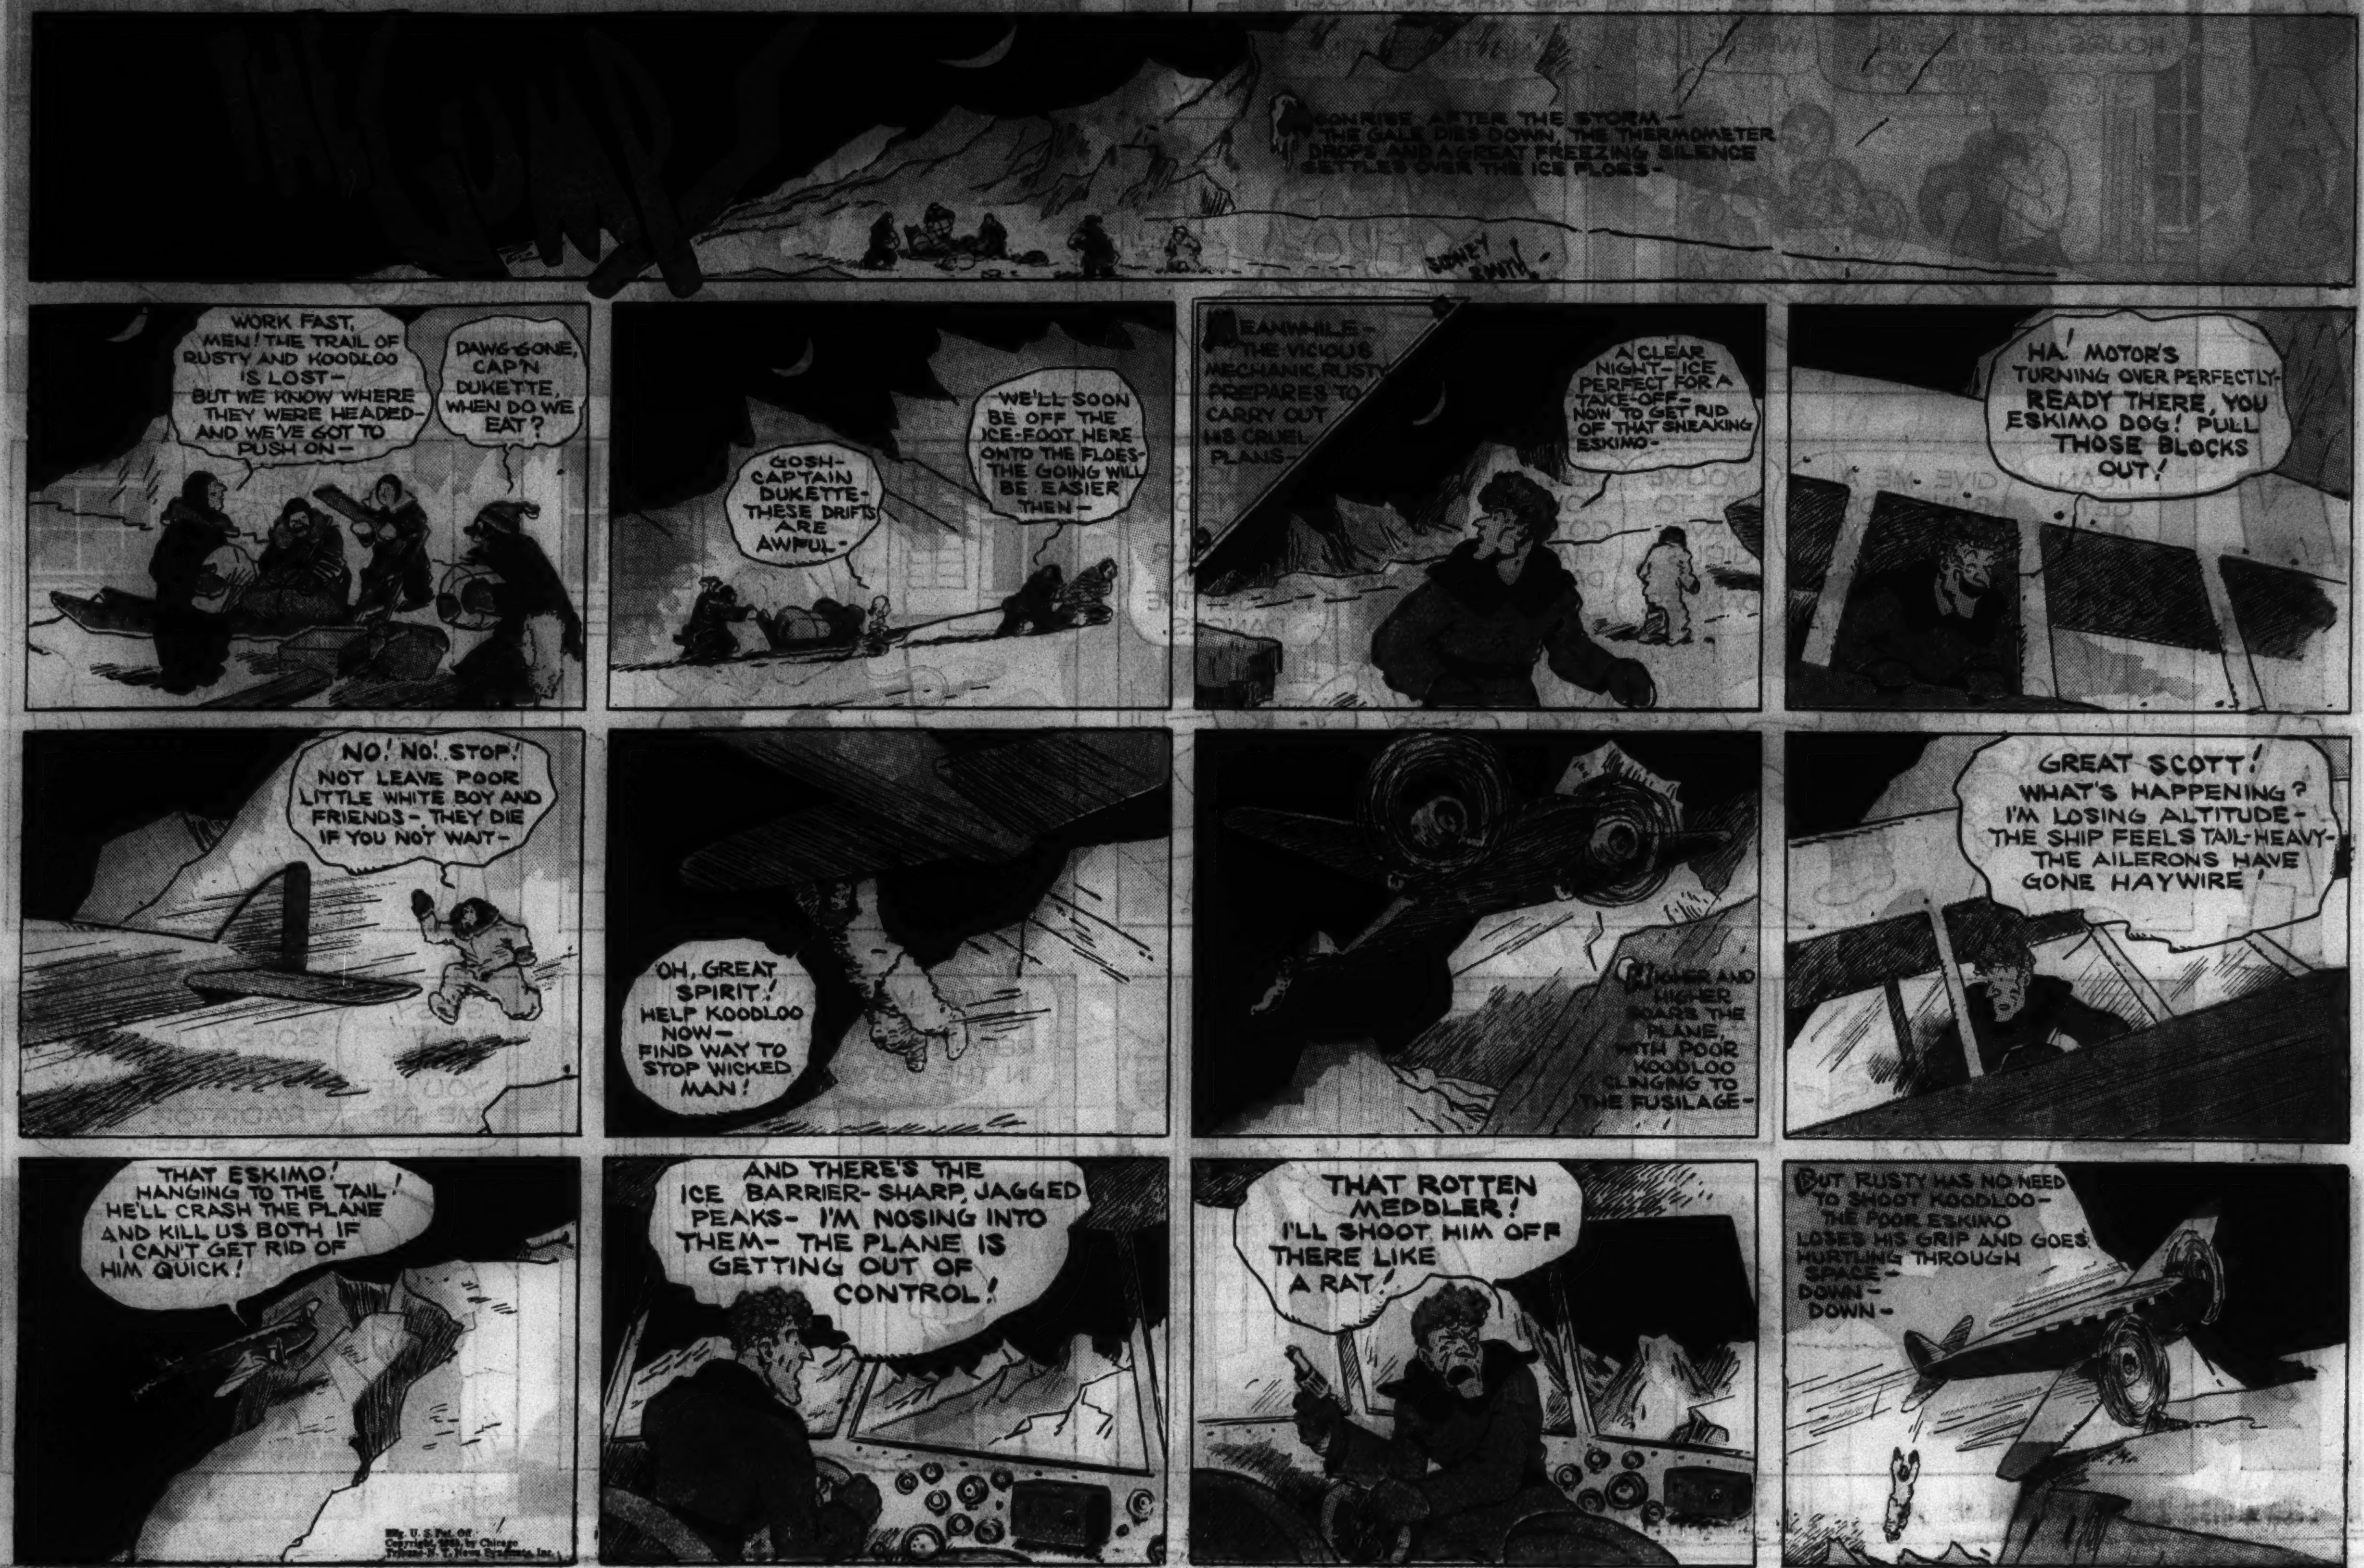
DECEMBER 1, 1935.

20 OR MORE COMICS



SUNRISE AFTER THE STORM— THE GALE DIES DOWN, THE THERMOMETER DROPS AND A GREAT FREEZING SILENCE SETTLES OVER THE ICE FLOES—
SIDNEY SMITH
WORK FAST, MEN! THE TRAIL OF RUSTY AND KOODLOO IS LOST— BUT WE KNOW WHERE THEY WERE HEADED— AND WE'VE GOT TO PUSH ON—DAWG-GONE, CAP'N DUKETTE, WHEN DO WE EAT?
GOSH— CAPTAIN DUKETTE— THESE DRIFTS ARE AWFUL—
WE'LL SOON BE OFF THE ICE-FOOT HERE ONTO THE FLOES— THE GOING WILL BE EASIER THEN—
MEANWHILE— THE VICIOUS MECHANIC, RUSTY, PREPARES TO CARRY OUT HIS CRUEL PLANS—
A CLEAR NIGHT— ICE PERFECT FOR A TAKE-OFF— NOW TO GET RID OF THAT SNEAKING ESKIMO—HA! MOTOR'S TURNING OVER PERFECTLY— READY THERE, YOU ESKIMO DOG! PULL THOSE BLOCKS OUT!
NO! NO! STOP! NOT LEAVE POOR LITTLE WHITE BOY AND FRIENDS— THEY DIE IF YOU NOT WAIT—
OH, GREAT SPIRIT! HELP KOODLOO NOW— FIND WAY TO STOP WICKED MAN!
HIGHER AND HIGHER SOARS THE PLANE, WITH POOR KOODLOO CLINGING TO THE FUSILAGE—
GREAT SCOTT! WHAT'S HAPPENING? I'M LOSING ALTITUDE— THE SHIP FEELS TAIL-HEAVY— THE AILERONS HAVE GONE HAYWIRE!
THAT ESKIMO! HANGING TO THE TAIL! HE'LL CRASH THE PLANE AND KILL US BOTH IF I CAN'T GET RID OF HIM QUICK!
AND THERE'S THE ICE BARRIER— SHARP, JAGGED PEAKS— I'M NOSING INTO THEM— THE PLANE IS GETTING OUT OF CONTROL!
THAT ROTTEN MEDDLER! I'LL SHOOT HIM OFF THERE LIKE A RAT!
BUT RUSTY HAS NO NEED TO SHOOT KOODLOO— THE POOR ESKIMO LOSES HIS GRIP AND GOES HURTLING THROUGH SPACE— DOWN— DOWN—

DICK TRACY
by CHESTER GOULD
SCENE: THE CITY HALL OF HOMEVILLE! THE CITY COUNCILMEN ARE JUST MARCHING OUT OF THE COUNCIL CHAMBER AFTER A VERY HECTIC SESSION. . . .
MAYOR COUNCIL ROOM
YOU CROOK!
ARRESTING ALDERMEN FOR SPEEDING WHEN YOU'RE RIGHT IN CAHOOTS WITH GANGSTERS! YOU'RE THROUGH IN THIS TOWN, TRACY— YOU CROOK!
GET INTO MY OFFICE, TRACY. . . BEFORE YOU'RE KILLED!
WHAT IN THE WORLD ARE YOU SO EXCITED ABOUT, MAYOR?
TRACY, THE CITY COUNCIL HAS JUST PASSED A RESOLUTION ASKING FOR A COMPLETE INVESTIGATION OF YOUR OFFICE, AND I DON'T BLAME THEM.
WHAT DO YOU MEAN?
READ THAT LETTER AND LOOK AT THAT PHOTOGRAPH!
Dear Mayor:— Herewith is a photographic copy of a promissory note showing your chief of Police is borrowing money from "Cut" Famon. Check up on it. It's a big story if we can print it. John Nibbis— Editor of the Gazette
Nov. 23. 1935.
$2000.00
FOR VALUE RECEIVED, I PROMISE TO PAY TO THE ORDER OF Cut Famon THE PRINCIPAL SUM OF $2000.00 WITHIN ONE YEAR FROM DATE HEREOF WITH INTEREST AT THE RATE OF 4% PER ANNUM PAYABLE SEMI-ANNUALLY AFTER DATE.
SIGNED Dick Tracy
YES, MAYOR— THAT'S MY SIGNATURE! BUT MR. FAMON'S NAME WAS INSERTED AFTER I SIGNED THE NOTES. . . THE CROOKS IN THIS TOWN TRIED TO FRAME ME. BUT HAVE ONLY SUCCEEDED IN CARRYING OUT MY PLANS TO THE LETTER!
PHONE YOUR EDITOR TO HOLD HIS PRESSES ONE HOUR! HE'S GOING TO GET THE BIGGEST STORY HE EVER PRINTED!
HELLO PAT! GO TO THE OFFICE OF BOWMAN BASIL THE REAL ESTATE LOAN SHARK. ARREST HIM AND THROW HIM IN A CELL. DO THE SAME WITH ALDERMEN JERBS AND HEMSEN. WE'RE READY TO CLOSE OUR NET!
ABOUT THIS SAME INSTANT— TIMED ALMOST TO THE SECOND. . . . .
THAT'S IT! KEEP 'EM UP HIGH, BOYS— AND YOU, "CUT"— HAND OVER THAT PROMISSORY NOTE, AND THE BUNDLE OF LETTERS IN YOUR INSIDE COAT POCKET.
GORDON! WHAT'S THE IDEA? ARE YOU NUTS?
SAY— "CUT"! LOOK— THE "BAIL" GORDON WE USED TO KNOW YEARS AGO— THIS AIN'T. . .
"BAIL" GORDON!— JUST WHAT IS HIS GAME?? JUST WHO IS HE ANYWAY?

GASOLINE ALLEY
SISSY, DO ME A FAVOR, WILL YOU? I'LL BE OUT TO A BULL SESSION UNTIL AFTER HOURS. LET ME IN, WILL YOU?
HOW WILL I KNOW WHEN?
I'LL TIE THIS ROPE AROUND YOUR ARM AND THROW IT OUT THE WINDOW. I'LL YANK THREE TIMES.
OKAY.

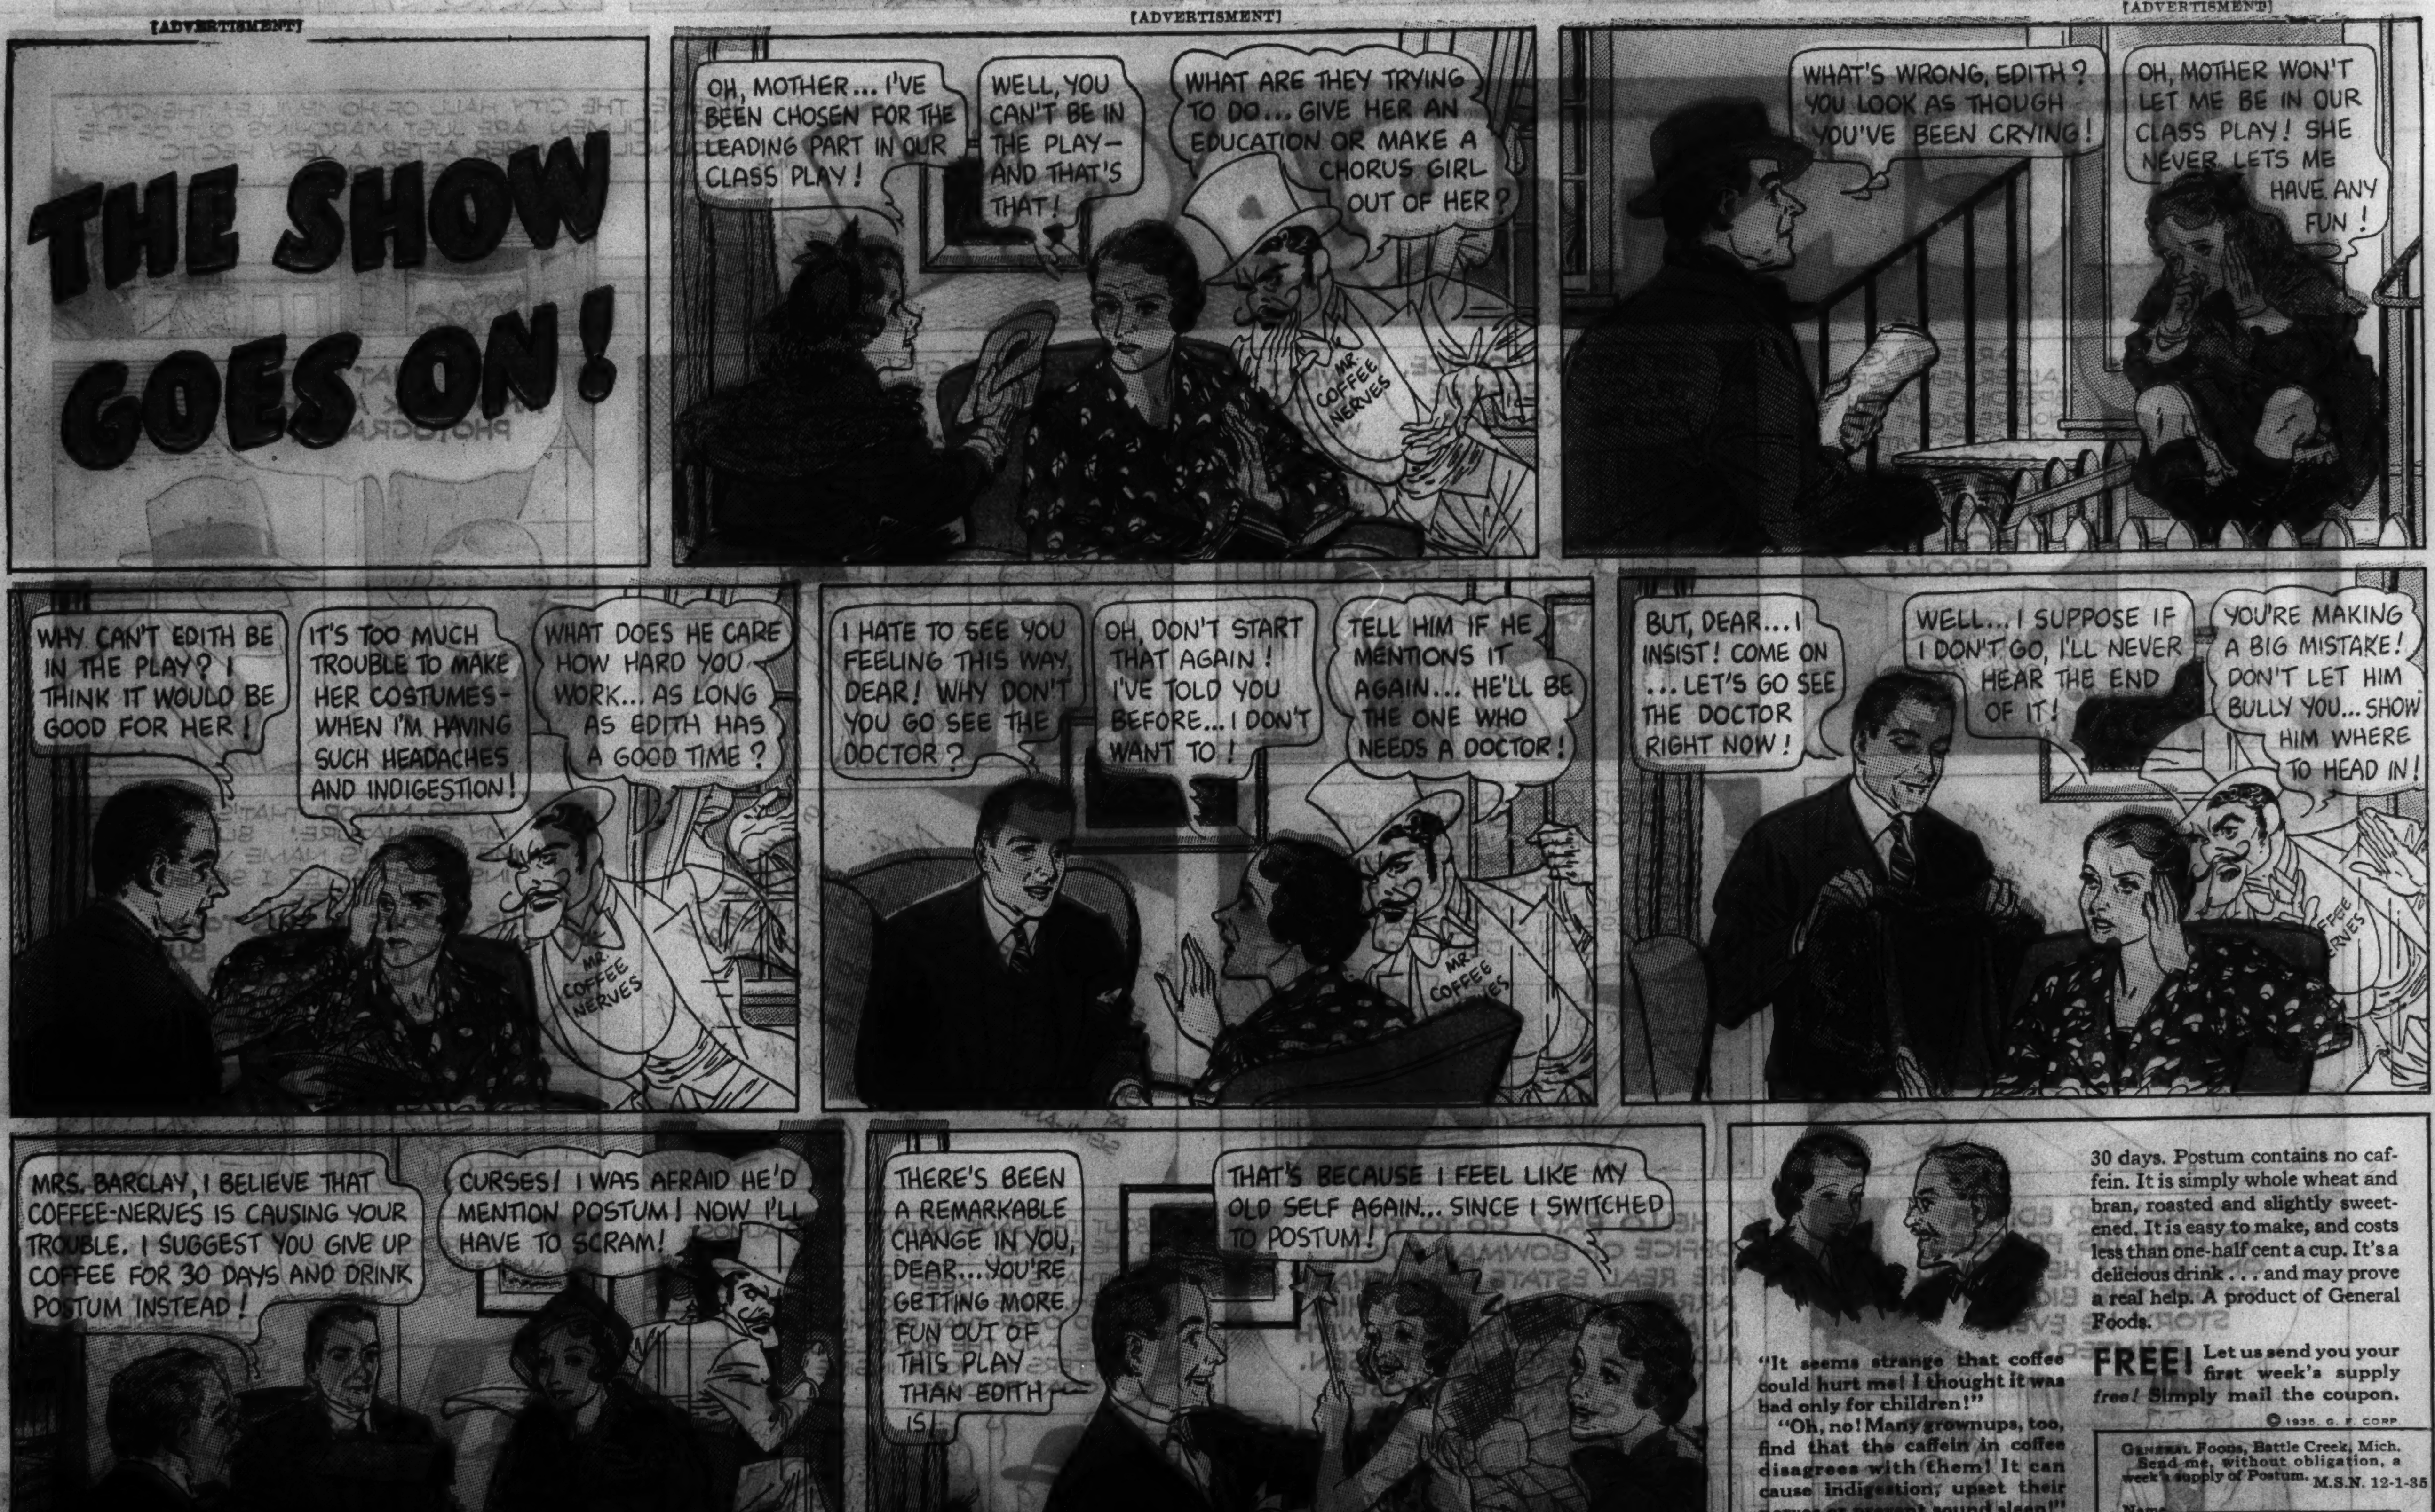
[ADVERTISMENT] [ADVERTISMENT] [ADVERTISMENT]



THE SHOW GOES ON!
OH, MOTHER... I'VE BEEN CHOSEN FOR THE LEADING PART IN OUR CLASS PLAY!
WELL, YOU CAN'T BE IN THE PLAY— AND THAT'S THAT!
WHAT ARE THEY TRYING TO DO... GIVE HER AN EDUCATION OR MAKE A CHORUS GIRL OUT OF HER?
MR. COFFEE NERVES
WHAT'S WRONG, EDITH? YOU LOOK AS THOUGH YOU'VE BEEN CRYING!
OH, MOTHER WON'T LET ME BE IN OUR CLASS PLAY! SHE NEVER LETS ME HAVE ANY FUN!
WHY CAN'T EDITH BE IN THE PLAY? I THINK IT WOULD BE GOOD FOR HER!
IT'S TOO MUCH TROUBLE TO MAKE HER COSTUMES— WHEN I'M HAVING SUCH HEADACHES AND INDIGESTION!
WHAT DOES HE CARE HOW HARD YOU WORK... AS LONG AS EDITH HAS A GOOD TIME?
MR. COFFEE NERVES
I HATE TO SEE YOU FEELING THIS WAY, DEAR! WHY DON'T YOU GO SEE THE DOCTOR?
OH, DON'T START THAT AGAIN! I'VE TOLD YOU BEFORE... I DON'T WANT TO!
TELL HIM IF HE MENTIONS IT AGAIN... HE'LL BE THE ONE WHO NEEDS A DOCTOR!
MR. COFFEE NERVES
BUT, DEAR... I INSIST! COME ON... LET'S GO SEE THE DOCTOR RIGHT NOW!
WELL... I SUPPOSE IF I DON'T GO, I'LL NEVER HEAR THE END OF IT!
YOU'RE MAKING A BIG MISTAKE! DON'T LET HIM BULLY YOU... SHOW HIM WHERE TO HEAD IN!
COFFEE NERVES
MRS. BARCLAY, I BELIEVE THAT COFFEE-NERVES IS CAUSING YOUR TROUBLE. I SUGGEST YOU GIVE UP COFFEE FOR 30 DAYS AND DRINK POSTUM INSTEAD!
CURSES! I WAS AFRAID HE'D MENTION POSTUM! NOW I'LL HAVE TO SCRAM!
THERE'S BEEN A REMARKABLE CHANGE IN YOU, DEAR... YOU'RE GETTING MORE FUN OUT OF THIS PLAY THAN EDITH IS!
THAT'S BECAUSE I FEEL LIKE MY OLD SELF AGAIN... SINCE I SWITCHED TO POSTUM!
30 DAYS LATER

"It seems strange that coffee could hurt me! I thought it was bad only for children!"

"Oh, no! Many grownups, too, find that the caffein in coffee disagrees with them! It can cause indigestion, upset their nerves or prevent sound sleep!"

If you are bothered with headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly . . . try Postum for 30 days. Postum contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink . . . and may prove a real help. A PLOT AGAINST GRANNY
GIVE GRANNY A GREAT BIG KISS, DARLING...
NO... I WON'T!
TOMMY! COME HERE THIS INSTANT!
YOU'RE A NAUGHTY, RUDE LITTLE BOY. YOU GO RIGHT OUT AND...
AW, MOM... I LIKE GRANNY, BUT, GEE—HER BREATH...
I KNOW JUST WHAT HE MEANS, BETTY. I'VE NOTICED HER BREATH, TOO. AND LISTEN, I'VE THOUGHT OF A WAY TO TELL HER WITHOUT HURTING HER FEELINGS...
SO, THE NEXT DAY...
MOTHER, I'VE GOT TO GO TO THE DENTIST'S TODAY. COME ALONG AND KEEP ME COMPANY
I'D LOVE TO, BETTY.
WHISPER→
...AND NOW, DOCTOR, TALK LOUDLY. I WANT MOTHER TO HEAR YOU.
YES, BETTY—MOST BAD BREATH COMES FROM IMPROPERLY CLEANED TEETH. DECAYING FOOD PARTICLES COLLECT IN THE CREVICES BETWEEN THE TEETH AND CAUSE ODORS. I RECOMMEND DAILY USE OF COLGATE DENTAL CREAM BECAUSE OF ITS PENETRATING FOAM!
WHAT'S THAT THE DENTIST IS SAYING?.. MAYBE THAT'S WHY TOMMY AVOIDS ME..! I'LL JUST GET SOME COLGATE'S AND SEE...
NEXT MORNING
DOESN'T COLGATE'S TASTE GOOD, GRANNY?
UM-M-M MY MOUTH CERTAINLY FEELS FRESH AND CLEAN. AND I DO BELIEVE MY TEETH ARE BRIGHTER, TOO!
THAT NIGHT
KISS ME GOOD-NIGHT, GRANNY, AND TUCK ME IN...
YOU'RE A SWEET LAMB, TOMMY—SLEEP TIGHT!..
...HOW GLAD I AM I GOT THAT HINT ABOUT COLGATE'S!

Most Bad Breath Begins with the teeth!

How Colgate Dental Cream Protects You!

NO MATTER what precautions you may be taking against bad breath, remember this: "The commonest cause by far of all bad breath," say authorities, "is improperly cleaned teeth!" Here's why: Tiny particles of food and acid deposits collect in the hidden crevices between your teeth. There they decay . . . and give rise to that social handicap—offensive breath.

So don't take chances! Make sure your teeth are thoroughly cleaned! Use Colgate Dental Cream daily. Its special penetrating foam gets into every crevice . . . washes away those odor-breeding food deposits that ordinary cleaning methods fail to reach!

At the same time, a soft, grit-free ingredient gently, safely polishes tooth enamel. Thus Colgate's makes your teeth cleaner and brighter while it makes your breath sweeter and purer.

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK

If, after using one tube of Colgate's, your teeth aren't brighter—your breath sweeter—send the empty tube to Colgate, Jersey City, N. J. We'll refund TWICE what you paid.

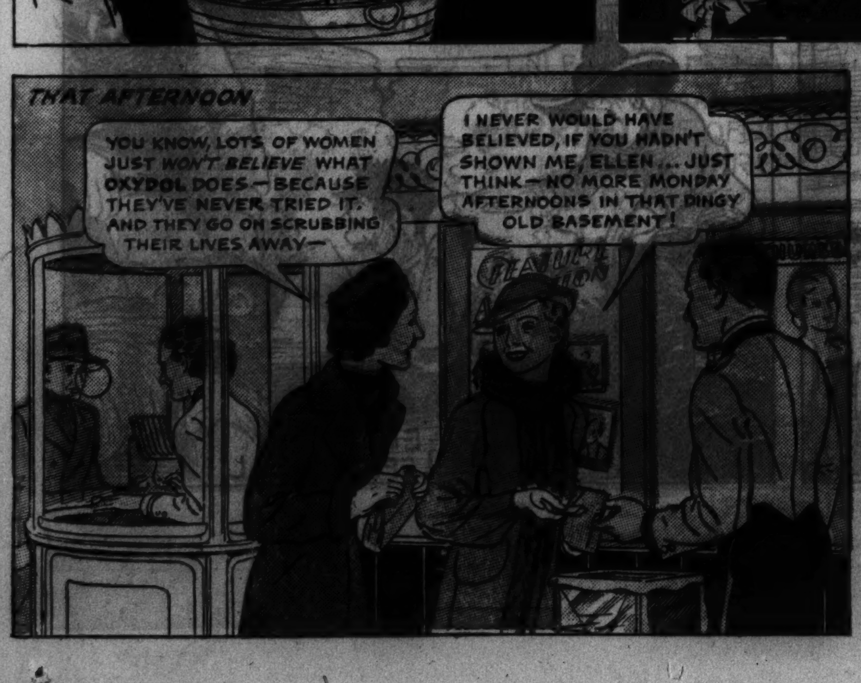
Della's Dungeon
HA HA HA
HA HA HA
HA HA HA
THIS OLD BASEMENT'S LIKE A DUNGEON... SEEMS LIKE I NEVER GET OUT... GUESS I'LL HAVE TO SIT DOWN AND REST A MINUTE, I'M SO TIRED.
5 MINUTES LATER — DELLA'S DREAM
YOU BET YOU WON'T GET OUT — NOT TILL 6 O'CLOCK, OR LATER. SEE — YOU'RE LOCKED IN, AND YOU CAN'T GET AWAY. HA, HA, HA!
BOY, I'LL BET SHE'S SO TIRED FROM ALL THAT SCRUBBING IT'LL LAY HER UP ALL WEEK!
BAR SOAP
OH ELLEN, I'VE JUST HAD THE AWFULLEST DREAM — ABOUT THAT OLD WASHBOARD!
WHAT! YOU STILL USING A WASHBOARD IN THIS NEW DAY OF "NO-SCRUB" GRANULATED SOAPS?
YOU CAN'T TELL ME ABOUT THOSE "NO-SCRUB" SOAPS — THEY'RE HARSH! I TRIED ONE ONCE AND IT FADED THINGS TERRIBLY.
BUT OXYDOL'S DIFFERENT, DEAR. IT'S MADE BY THE IVORY SOAP PEOPLE — AND IT'S SO SAFE AND MILD! YET IT SOAKS OUT DIRT IN 15 MINUTES WITHOUT SCRUBBING OR BOILING AT ALL. WAIT — I'LL GET MY PACKAGE.
WHAT! YOU SAY IT WORKS IN 15 MINUTES' SOAKING — AND STILL GETS CLOTHES 4 TO 5 SHADES WHITER THAN OTHER SOAPS? I CAN'T BELIEVE IT!
YOU WAIT AND SEE!
15 MINUTES LATER
IT'S MARVELOUS! JUST 15 MINUTES' SOAKING — AND THESE SHEETS ARE LOVELY WHITE! BUT ELLEN — ARE YOU SURE IT'S SAFE ON COLORS?
REMEMBER MY PRINT DRESSES LAST SUMMER? I WASHED THEM SCORES OF TIMES IN OXYDOL WITHOUT A SIGN OF FADING.
IMAGINE — THROUGH ALREADY! AND MY, THEY SMELL SO FRESH AND SWEET.
NOW — HOW ABOUT A "MOVIE" THIS AFTERNOON. THEY SAY THAT NEW CLARK GABLE PICTURE IS GRAND!



THAT AFTERNOON
YOU KNOW, LOTS OF WOMEN JUST WON'T BELIEVE WHAT OXYDOL DOES — BECAUSE THEY'VE NEVER TRIED IT. AND THEY GO ON SCRUBBING THEIR LIVES AWAY —
I NEVER WOULD HAVE BELIEVED, IF YOU HADN'T SHOWN ME, ELLEN... JUST THINK — NO MORE MONDAY AFTERNOONS IN THAT DINGY OLD BASEMENT!

NEW "NO-SCRUB" SOAP A SENSATION!

Thousands Refuse to Believe Until They Try! Cuts Washing Time in Half—Gets White Clothes 4 to 5 Shades Whiter —Yet Works With Greatest Safety to Colors, Fabrics, Hands

● There is no longer need to scrub your clothes to pieces to get them white. Today millions are quitting old-fashioned bar soaps, chips, and flakes, for this amazing new invention.

OXYDOL is an utterly new kind of laundry soap, perfected by the makers of gentle Ivory. It is the result of a patented process which makes mild, gentle soap much faster acting . . . a formula that makes it 2 to 4 times whiter washing. Just 15 minutes' soaking to the tubful . . . no scrubbing, no boiling . . . and your white things come so white it will amaze you!

Yet OXYDOL works with greatest safety to your clothes and hands. Even sheerest cotton prints, soaked for 25 hours through 100 consecutive washings, show no perceptible sign of fading!

With OXYDOL you get thick 3-inch suds instantly—even in hardest water. Suds that go to work on grease, dirt, and stains, 2 to 3 times faster than less modern soaps. And bring white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter than ordinary soaps can do. Yet every washable color stays brilliant, fresh!

OXYDOL is economical, too. One package often does twice the work—gives twice the suds—lasts twice as long as old-fashioned bars, flakes, or chips.

No wonder women everywhere are switching to this marvelous new laundry soap—discarding washboards forever!

AS A BOY, DAVE IRWIN WAS DELICATE, AND THE OTHER BOYS LOVED TO TEASE HIM

YEARS PASS

AND HIS RESOLVE TO BECOME STRONG LEADS HIM AROUND THE WORLD AS STOKER ON OIL TANKERS, MINER, AND LABORER. FINALLY HIS ADVENTUROUS SPIRIT LEADS HIM TO ALASKA, WHERE HE CONCEIVES A DARING PROJECT

I'M HEADING FOR HUDSON BAY
WHAT! ALONE? YOU'LL NEVER MAKE IT MUSH!

HE STARTS HIS LONG TREK TO HUDSON BAY (SEE MAP ABOVE)

SUDDENLY—WHILE HE WAS CROSSING THE ARCTIC SEA—50 MILES FROM SHORE THE ICE GAVE WAY. DAVE LOST MOST OF HIS AMMUNITION AND HIS AXE, AND FACED STARVATION

TIME OUT FOR A CAMEL, WHILE I DECIDE WHAT TO DO WELL-OLD MAN-THIS LOOKS LIKE THE END FOR US

FIGHTING DEATH AT EVERY TURN, HE FINDS HIMSELF WITH BUT ONE DOG. WET, COLD AND HUNGRY, AND BARELY ABLE TO STAND, HE BUILDS A CRUDE SNOW SHELTER

OOGLA! OOGLA!

DAYS LATER AN ESKIMO HUNTING PARTY COMES ACROSS STRANGE TRACKS IN THE SNOW

JUST IN THE NICK OF TIME DAVE IS RESCUED BY THE ESKIMOS, WHO NURSE HIM BACK TO LIFE

WITH A FRESH DOG TEAM, FOOD, AND AMMUNITION, DAVE STARTS ON THE LAST LEG OF HIS EPOCH-MAKING TREK — 800 MILES — TO BAKER LAKE AND CIVILIZATION

IT TAKES PLENTY OF NERVE TO DO WHAT HE DID
YES — IT'S THE GREATEST THING EVER DONE BY ONE MAN UP HERE

BACK TO CIVILIZATION AT LAST AND WORLD-FAMOUS FOR HIS AMAZING EXPLOIT

DAVE IRWIN, WHO CONQUERED THE ARCTIC SINGLE-HANDED, Says—

"I'VE HAD SOME CLOSE CALLS IN THE FROZEN NORTH, TOUGH SPOTS WHERE I HAD TO USE EVERY OUNCE OF ENERGY AND STAMINA I COULD PUT FORTH. I GET A 'LIFT' IN ENERGY WITH A CAMEL. AND AS A CAMEL SMOKER OF LONG STANDING, I FIND THAT CAMELS DON'T AFFECT MY WIND OR JANGLE MY NERVES"

OH, BOBBY
ANYBODY SEEN BOB?
BOBBY'S A REGULAR PRIMA DONNA NOW. YOU WERE RIGHT ABOUT HIS BEING THE BEST BOY HERE-EVERYONE WANTS HIM, NOW HIS SKIN IS CLEARED UP!
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES KEEP YOU FROM GETTING AHEAD

THE adolescent years, 13 to 25—the very years when you should be working up to a good job—are the years when pimples make you hate to face people

Important glands develop at this time. This causes disturbances throughout the body The skin becomes oversensitive. Harmful waste products in the blood stream irritate this sensitive skin so it breaks out in pimples.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast clears up these adolescent pimples . . by clearing the poisonous skin irritants out of your blood stream.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals, until skin clears. Many cases of pimples clear up in a week or two. Bad cases sometimes take a month or more.

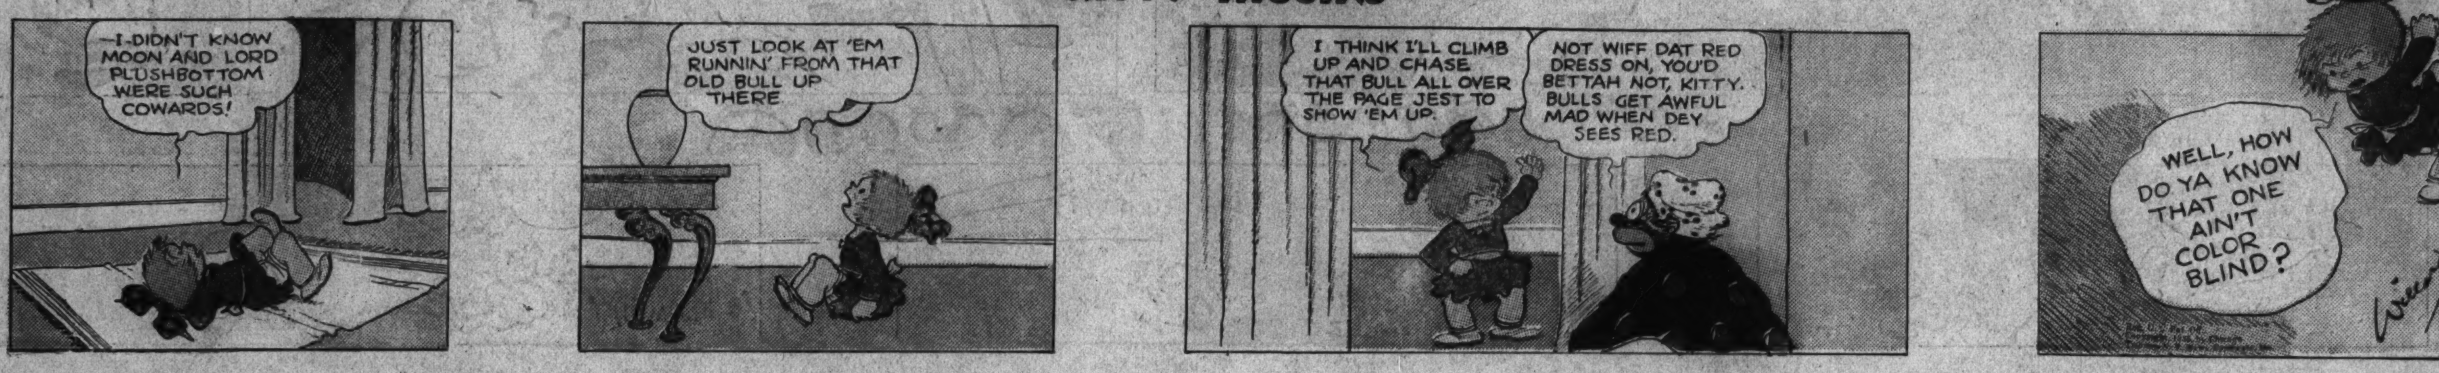
MOON MULLINS
LORD PLUSHBOTTOM & KAYO SPEND THEIR WEEK END ON THE FARM OF LADY PLUSHBOTTOM'S UNCLE AMBROSE
by Frank Willard
YAS, KAYO- WE ARE GOING HUNTING- AND DON'T ASK US WHAT WE'VE LOST?
AND YOU'D BETTER STAY HERE, KAYO- LORD PLUSHBOTTOM CAN'T HIT A BULL IN THE BACK WITH A BASS FIDDLE.
OH IS THAT SO? WELL, SEE THAT KNOT IN THE BARN DOOR— WELL WATCH!
BAM!
BOO!
WHAT'S THAT? SOMEBODY'S BOOING YOUR SHOOTIN'!
MY WORD!
KAYO, I TOLD YOU NOT TO OPEN THAT DOOR!
WELL, CAN'TCHA SEE HE WANTED OUT?
AMBROSE! OH-H AMBROSE!!
KAYO, GO BRING UNCLE AMBROSE AND WHEN I GET DOWN FROM HERE I'M GOING TO SPANK THE DAYLIGHTS OUTTA YOU!
I WONDER WHY KAYO DON'T GET AMBROSE.
OHHH AMBROSE! WELL, I GUESS THE ONLY WAY WE'LL EVER GET DOWN IS TO SHOOT THE BLOOMING BULL, MOON!
WELL, GO AHEAD AND SHOOT HIM.
I CAN'T- YOU'VE GOT THE SHELLS!
CAME THE DAWN, THE TWITTER OF BIRDS AND SERENE SNORES FROM UNCLE AMBROSE'S PRIZE BULL.
PSST! LOOK!!
AT LAST IT LOOKS LIKE WE CAN DESCEND WITH SAFETY.
HEY, WAKE UP, UNCLE AMBROSE!
HE'S NOT UNDER THE BED.
WAL, WOTT'RE YOU BOYS HUNTING AT THIS HOUR OF THE MORNING?
KAYO!
WAL, GIT OUTTA HERE- I AIN'T SEEN HIM.
WOT IN TH' —?
PHEEWEY! I'M GLAD THEY'VE WENT AWAY AT LAST. IT'S GETTIN' SORTA STUFFY UNDER HERE.

KITTY HIGGINS



—I DIDN'T KNOW MOON AND LORD PLUSHBOTTOM WERE SUCH COWARDS!
JUST LOOK AT 'EM RUNNIN' FROM THAT OLD BULL UP THERE
I THINK I'LL CLIMB UP AND CHASE THAT BULL ALL OVER THE PAGE JEST TO SHOW 'EM UP.
NOT WIFF DAT RED DRESS ON, YOU'D BETTAH NOT, KITTY. BULLS GET AWFUL MAD WHEN DEY SEES RED.
WELL, HOW DO YA KNOW THAT ONE AIN'T COLOR BLIND?

FIRST TIME!

A REAL LOCOMOTIVE WHISTLE ON A MODEL TRAIN !

GET THIS BIG 44-PAGE BOOK THAT TELLS YOU ALL ABOUT IT!

On comes your Lionel streamliner, streaking down the track, clipping away split-seconds. Out pops the gateman from his shanty to wave it by—bells ring—gates lower—lights flash. Thrills! Excitement! Action every second! But wait—

Down goes your finger on the tiny button of a control box. Instantly, the locomotive lets out a long, loud, blasting, railroad whistle!

Or short, sharp, piercing ones, just as your finger commands. The tap of that tiny button opens to you the whole range of the official railway signal code. There isn't a whistle signal in railroading you can't sound, when and as you want it, whether your Lionel is swinging around a curve, flashing to a crossing, switching, backing or standing still.

Greatest achievement in all Lionel's history of model railroad building—and right "on time" for Christmas. No other train has anything like it, or can have. The whistle has been invented, designed, perfected by Lionel, so only in a Lionel can you get this whistling thrill!

BUT THAT'S ONLY HALF THE STORY

A hundred questions bob up in your mind. Where is the whistle located? How can it signal anywhere along the track? Where can you see and hear it? So we've printed a big 44-page book in full colors—and it's got all the answers.

AND, IN ADDITION, ALL THIS—

On page after page, rail kings of the nation parade before you. Glittering new streamliners. Powerful, massive steam types. Not just one or two—but scale-models of all the great new speed trains of America—built right from the original railroad blueprints. Don't miss page 31, which tells how that gateman scoots from his shanty as the train approaches, flashes his lantern, and as magically disappears.

And don't miss the thrilling Lionel story of complete remote control—how you can make your train go forwards or backwards, fast or slow, without even touching it. Read how, from an engine and a couple of coaches, you can build a great railroad system, with bridges, tunnels, signals, everything! And how you can own a genuine Lionel, built to the high standards of Lionel quality, with eight accessories, speed-control transformer, tracks, 24 pieces for only $6.75.

NOW, HERE'S THE WAY TO GET THIS BIG LIONEL RAILROADING BOOK FREE

Go to your nearest department store, toy, hardware or electrical dealer and ask for the new 1935 Lionel catalog. Or, if you want to be the first in your neighborhood to own a copy, tear out the coupon below and mail it, enclosing 10c to cover the cost of postage and handling. And, when you get your Lionel catalog, don't fail to let Dad take a squint at it, too.

Put Your Personality Into Your Classified Ad for a Job, Veteran Tribune Experts Advise

[This is the tenth of a series of articles to appear on Sundays carrying advice to job seekers. The articles are based on interviews with employers and others who are vitally interested in helping the unemployed sell their services in the best ways possible.]

"Be natural!" is never better advice to job hunters than when it concerns the writing of "situation wanted" advertisments for the classified columns of a newspaper, where the investment of a few dollars aims at obtaining results of possible lifelong importance.

This statement comes from the keenly observant copy and survey division of THE TRIBUNE classified advertisment department. As a result of its constant study of "appeal" or "pulling power," the copy and survey division is able to offer the most advanced suggestions on the subject.

Just as in writing a letter to a prospective employer, when writing to all the employers who read newspapers, the unemployed man or woman should avoid the stereotyped or cut and dried approach as much as possible. That is simply because employers are human—and their interest is aroused by the injection of a human note into the necessary formalities of the business of hiring employés.

Example of Human Note.

Consider the example of the girl stenographer whose advertisment stated that she would "even humor your mother-in-law if necessary, in order to make good." Regardless of the practicability of this statement, what reader [employers included] could help but be interested? At any rate, she obtained a number of offers of positions.

A primary warning of an expert, the head of the copy and survey division, is against copying the style of most classified advertisments, which has developed into a rather set pattern failing to express the individuality of the writer.

"Don't copy the general run of the 'ads' you see," he declared. "Tell about yourself IN YOUR OWN WORDS, whether they sound like a typical 'situation wanted' advertisment or not."

Give Time to Thought.

That isn't a task requiring a trained advertising copywriter, the expert said, but it does require that the job hunter give a little time and thought to the problem instead of following the well worn path of thousands of earlier "ads."

"Remember that there is, after all, just one YOU," he said. "No person is exactly like another; each is truly an individual, even though each has many characteristics in common with others. You are not merely another stenographer, another bookkeeper, another executive. But it is up to you to sit down and find your own best sales points—because it is a selling job that your 'ad' has to do.

"These 'best points' about YOU should deal not only with your ability and experience but with your personality. And in telling about these 'best points,' do so in the words you would use in talking to some one. Be natural. Obviously you must consider space limitations in an 'ad,' but probably just one or several of your own words will make a world of difference between your 'ad' and others. That's what you are striving for."

Avoid the Generalities.

Close to the "be natural" command in importance is: "Avoid generalities." As Mr. Jones explained:

"Men, for instance, often advertise that they are seeking a position as 'assistant to an executive' and tell little more. Looking at it from the viewpoint of the employer, we find here a generality that holds small appeal. The employer has men in his own business from among whom he can select an assistant—unless he is given a reason to take some one from outside.

"What the employer wants is some one capable of doing a specific job—whether it's driving a truck, running a machine, managing an office, or filling the position of vice president. The man he wants might be his assistant in fact, but he seldom thinks of him in such general terms.

Describe Your Skill.

"A statement as to ability in specific lines goes far. Is it welding, chemistry, engineering, or accounting? And if it is one of these or some other, or others, support the statement by a mention of definite accomplishments. Even mention figures where this is properly a part of the picture. If you cut production overhead by 30 per cent while factory manager—tell it; if you handled a bank account of large amount, showing responsibility, tell that. Such things as these make excellent advertising material."

An example of how radically different types of appeal interest employers was the happy experience of an ex-convict about a week ago. Scores of inquiries were received by this unusual advertiser, resulting in fourteen legitimate offers of good positions. Headed by the single word, "EX-CONVICT," it read as follows:

"Two years experience in a penal institution of high national standing. Contrary to Lombroso's theories, I am minus the underslung jaw, taking toys, and baby killing ambitions. My references [jail included] describe me as young, traveled, an excellent secretary-stenographer-correspondent, and possessed of business judgment [apologies to press agents].

"A Good Investment."

"While the market for penal alumni is admittedly in a slump, here's an 'ex' who believes his value to an employer is enhanced BECAUSE of the experience and for a good judge of human nature I am and will be a good investment."

This authority declared that there is a large lesson in this for all "ad" writers. Aside from showing that there ARE jobs and that employers do read the "situation wanted" columns, he said it illustrates that "ads" should impress employers with something definite about the job hunter.

"Certainly this example, aside from its odd approach, expresses earnestness and the ability to get out of the 'thought rut,' he said. "This man overcame a great handicap with something much greater—ideas. It is clear that the fact that he was an exconvict did not in itself help him get a job."

Then there was the example some months ago of the young man who advertised that he was lazy, incapable of doing anything, but would accept a good job if one were offered to him.

Again Attention Is Won.

Again it was by stepping out of the beaten path that he won attention; there was human appeal here that caused many human smiles—and some job offers.

"These ideas have been used once, and could not be used again to advantage, because they depended upon originality for their appeal," he said. "Obviously, it would be futile to copy them; knowing this, we have discouraged the insertion of exact duplicates."

A less freakish approach was accomplished through an "ad" written by a job hunter as though it had originated with a former employer. Of course, the former employer gave his consent and coöperated by permitting inquiries to be addressed to him.

Such an "ad" brought eight answers. Four of them were received after the third appearance of the insertion. This shows not only the value of a slightly different kind of approach, but that one cannot expect to "hit all prospects with one shot," the expert said.

Examine the Market.

His last suggestion was that job hunters examine the labor market in an effort to determine what lines of work offer the greatest possibilities at any given time. Perhaps a man may be well qualified as both a mechanic and as a welder. Since it happens [in fact] that there is a more insistent demand for welders than for mechanics, this man would be wise to stress his ability as a welder first, allowing his other experience to be secondary.

There are many such opportunities for "thinking the situation through" when it comes to writing that "situation wanted" advertisment, if you have the will to explore them—and a few suggestions.

[Next Sunday's Tribune will present another article in this series.]

NEAR NORTH SIDE

It's very nice when you close your desk at the end of the day to know that after a short, brisk walk just 5 blocks north of the river, you will come to a quaint little lamplighted court that makes you feel far away from Chicago, where up a winding stairway there's a charming little studio, high ceiling living room, 2 bedrooms, and 2 baths and—well you're glad you live there, that's all. We also have 5 and 6 room apts. with fireplaces where we can build you a little home which will be delightful to live in and most interesting to your friends. We are glad to make changes that you personally may suggest. One little sky parlor artist studio with excellent north light in the Italian court, $50. Also daytime studios and shop space.

USED AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE.

M. J. Lanahan SAYS:

"I cannot afford to risk a personal and business reputation, built up over a period of more than 25 years, by selling anything but the Best Used Cars."

HOW WE Price Cars

We believe that every prospect wants to buy the best possible Used Car at the lowest possible price—and we have priced our cars with that idea in mind.

$5 Down—20 Months to Pay.

We have cars at every price and for every purpose—some admittedly better than others, but each one ready to fill a particular need and fill it well, and all prices are slashed to rock bottom.

$5 Down—20 Months to Pay.

We have never priced our cars to include the cost of a gift of any kind, be it a fur coat, a piano, a motorcycle, or anything else.

We don't mind telling you that right now we need the room for new cars, and present prices are at record lows.

Every Day Is Sale Day at Cadillac

In keeping with our policy of 30 years' standing, Cadillac leads in giving the greatest value at the lowest cost. You're under no obligation when you visit our showroom—we would like to have you see for yourself that quality here is not a matter of price.

CADILLAC—1934 Sedan V-8 5-pass. De Luxe model. Ebony black finish, broadcloth upholstery, chrome trim; 6 wire wheels with apple green discs, side mountings white wall tires, Lorraine spotlight, etc. As new in appearance as the day it was delivered. Guaranteed. $1,495.

CADILLAC—1933 Coupe V-12 2-pass model with rumble seat. Has radio, almost new tires, 6 wire wheels and side mountings. Splendid original brewster green finish. In perfect condition throughout and guaranteed. $1,295.

CADILLAC—1932 Convertible Sedan. Custom De Luxe V-16. A most distinctive model. All-weather Phaeton. Long wheelbase, extreme riding comfort. Smart appearing royal blue iridescent finish, burbank top, 6 wire wheels, with chrome discs, side mountings, luggage compartment, white wall tires, etc. Tremendous reduction. $945.

LA SALLE—1934 Club Sedan. A very popular 5 pass. body style with almost the identical streamline appearance of the latest model. Deep blue duco finish, broadcloth interior, large luggage compartment in rear. Finish and tires comparable only to those of a new car. $895.

LA SALLE—1933 Sedan 5-pass. Attractive gray finish, de luxe equipment with 6 wire wheels and side mountings, metal tire covers and rear view mirrors, trunk rack, excellent tires. Will pass a critical inspection. $645.

LA SALLE—1932 Sedan 5-pass. We recommend this car to the exacting buyer. Black finish, red striping, mohair upholstery, 6 wire wheels and side mountings, hot water heater, excellent tires, etc. In wonderful condition and a real buy at $595.

PACKARD—1934 Sedan 5-pass. In condition this car is comparable only to a brand new car. Does not show a sign of prior service. Has Philco radio, practically new tires, wire wheels, etc. Two tone gray finish, broadcloth interior. Ready for delivery. $1,145.

BUICK—1934 Convertible Sedan. "980." Shows exceptionally fine care. Unusually attractive cream duco, burbank top, harmonizing leather upholstery, 6 wire wheels, side mountings, metal tire covers, built in trunk, etc. Outstanding value at $845.

OLDSMOBILE—1935 Touring Sedan. Virtually brand new with many of the latest mechanical features. All-steel turret top, knee action wheels, etc. Special at $825.

FORD—1935 Coupe 2-pass. Exceptionally low mileage. Not a mark on it. Seat covers, metal tire cover. Gray finish. $485.

PLYMOUTH—1934 Tudor Sedan. The beautiful new appearance and perfect condition of this car will sell it today. $375.

Rich Yarns Make Hand Knit Ensembles That Will Ride the Southbound Special

By JEAN MACDONALD

IN spite of the rush of Christmas shopping, woman's subconscious is considering and discarding possible and impossible items for the southern trip just after the New Year. Hand knits are among the three groups of clothes which are included as "musts" in the fashionable wardrobe—hand knits, afternoon and evening clothes.

Color is the first thought in every manner of costume. The feminine fashion cry for hand knits is "at least" one bright, vivid hand knit, while the rest may be white or pastel. A brilliant turquoise, vivid coral, clear jade, jaune canari, and golden poppy are just a few of the favored yarns for southern wear. White and off-white will as always be topnotchers, but such delicate pastels as peach and cherry blossom, fawn, rose blush, sky and baby blue, and soft, dusty pinks will be among those present and noted in the ever moving kaleidoscope of fashion in southern resorts.

Yarns for these luscious southern frocks include all the crêpe yarns, which are nothing more nor less than a fine, zephyr wool spun with a matching or contrasting strand of rayon. The popular and good looking yarn introduced near the close of last season, which is made of imported fiber and which has an intriguing, suede-like surface, will be quite the rage among the hand knitted sports ensembles.

Two piece models still retain the style lead, with the skirts following the straight and narrow. Touches of contrasts are allowed in the blouse in the form of stripes—diagonal, vertical, and horizontal depending upon the "figger"—checks, and bands placed up, down, or around at becoming angles. High necks and low necks share and share alike. There is no preferred style unless it is by individual taste. A woman may decide she wears one or the other more becomingly. The lovely, hand knitted, two piece crepe illustrated at the right is destined to be one of the most desired of the models for southern wear.

Illustrated upper left is an ensemble done in the checks which are so becoming and which will play an important rôle in the wardrobe of the youthful members of the clan of winter sun worshipers. The collar, belt, and buttons match the skirt. The surplice effect is one of the fashion standbys. The V-neck demands a graceful carriage and extreme care of the lily white neck.

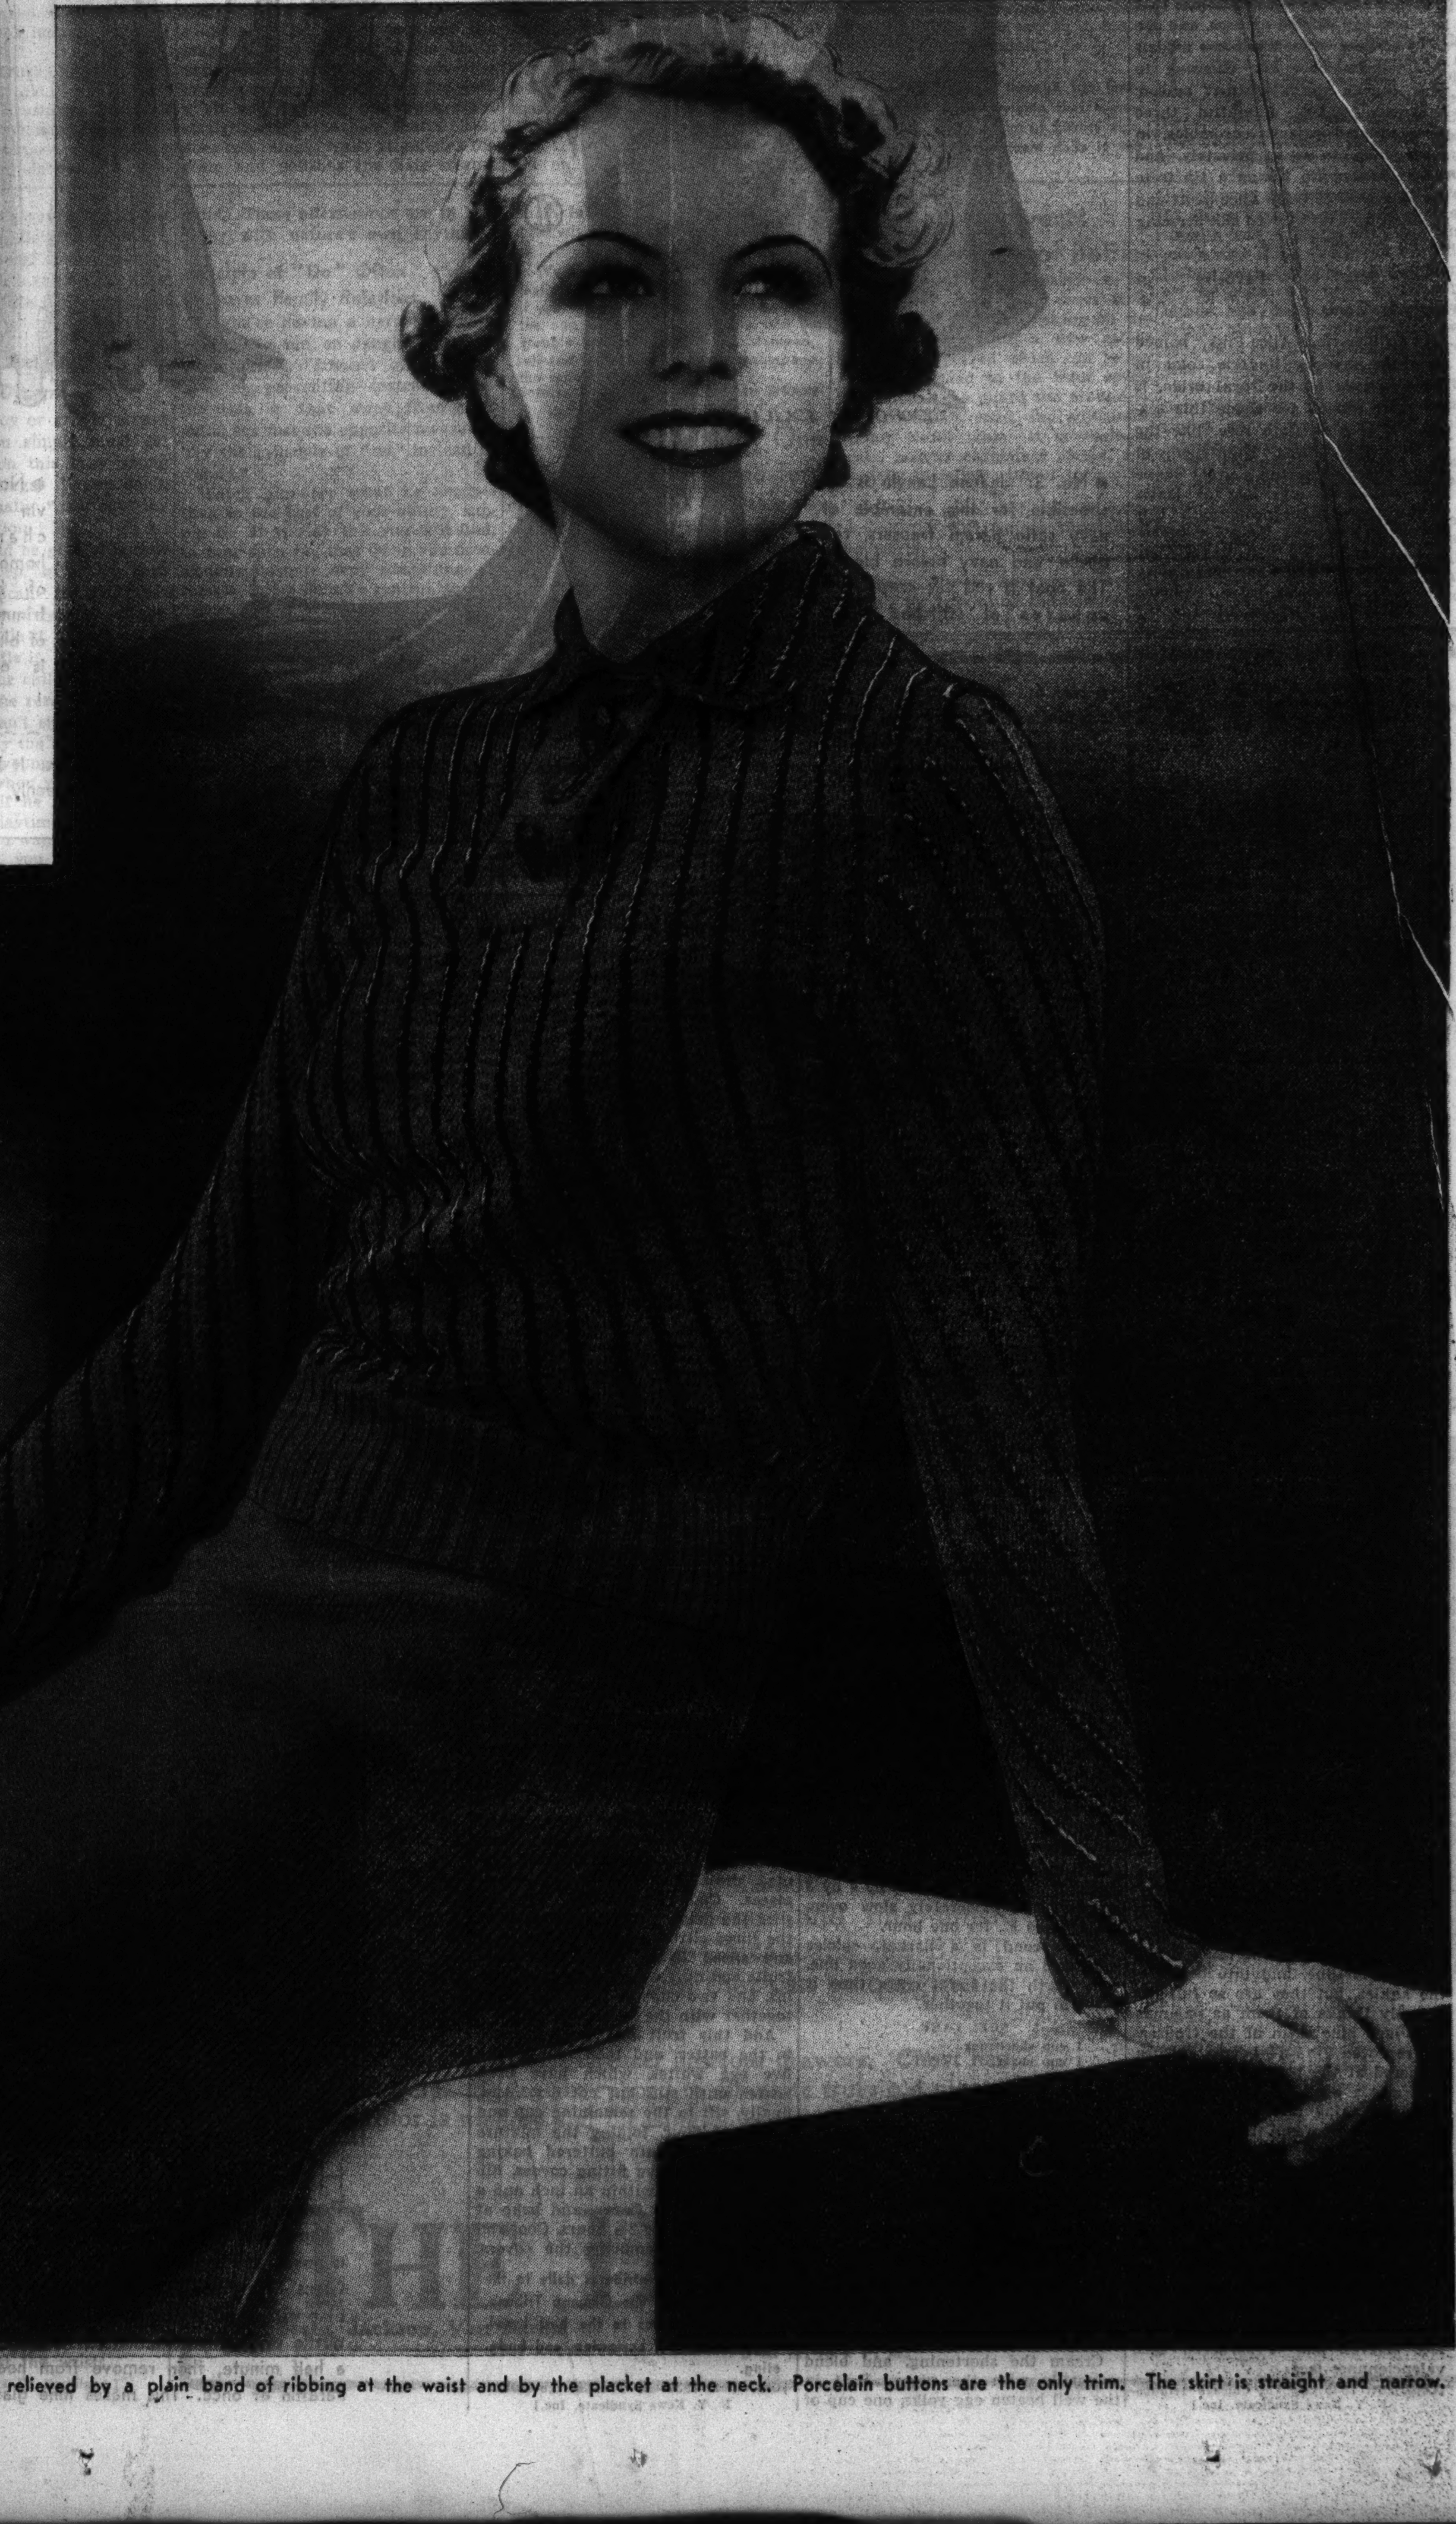
Checks are features of the blouse in this good looking two piece crepe dress. Belt, collar, buttons, and edging along the surplice and V-neck match the crepe skirt.



Contrasting diagonal stripes in the blouse are relieved by a plain band of ribbing at the waist and by the placket at the neck. Porcelain buttons are the only trim. The skirt is straight and narrow.

Traditional Recipes and Prepared Mixes Create Fruit Cakes of Holidays

BY MARY MEADE.

SIGNS reading: "Only twenty more shopping days before Christmas" are turning most of us into milling shophounds. And, if we're planning to play holiday hostess as well as Mrs. S. Claus, those same signs are none too gentle reminders that there are fewer days than twenty for the baking of the holiday fruit cakes.

Not only do a few weeks of ageing improve the flavorsome firmness of fruit cake, but having the comfortable assurance of fruity reserves on the pantry shelf adds much to one's unflurried hospitality during the holiday season. So, even if it means picking out Junior's skates and Dad's slippers and Aunt Mattie's knitting bag in a paltry nineteen days, the cook with forethought is setting one day this week [or next] for the assembling of all those good things that make the fruit cake a traditional symbol of good cheer.

Some Cooks Prefer Own Mixes.

For those cooks who enjoy the leisurely ritual of home-made fruit cake, the fun of cutting up colorful fruit, sniffing the fragrant spices, even cracking nut meats, we've collected several truly impressive recipes, favorites of years gone by which still meet appreciative murmurs of delight from the most critical of guests and callers.

On the other hand, for the woman who enjoys good fruit cake, but who can't take time for this pleasant ritual, we'd recommend investigating the ready prepared fruit cake mixes now on the market.

One of the best of these that we've tried comes in a 17 ounce can, with the ready prepared batter mixture in the bottom, and a truly elegant deep layer of fine fruits and nuts above it. All you need to do is to add a half cup of water, beat the mixture for a full minute, and then turn it into a greased and floured pan, either oblong [6 by 3 by 3½] or round [3 inches deep and 5 across].

Another Mix Is Baked in Its Tin.

The second mixture is packed right in the tin in which you are to bake it. Even the glassine lining is in place, so you needn't even grease the pan. This cake mixture requires the addition of an egg along with the liquid.

Both of these cakes are entirely satisfactory as to texture, we think you'll agree, and generously full of candied and dried fruits and nuts. Rather than mixing

Paris Insists Holiday Lingerie Be Ethereal

Delicacy, Not Novelty, the Secret of Distinction in "At Home" Ensembles.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Lingerie is created in a spirit of charm and delicacy, rather than in one of brazen novelty. It is something you wear in the interests of yourself—to feel daintier and more charming—and the person who makes you a lingerie gift is giving you a compliment, tendered to your personal attractiveness.

This also applies to the negligee and home frock that become important during the holidays when everybody who has a vestige of a home wants to be in it and to be charming.

One of the most attractive Paris house robes this winter, and one that many lovely women are going to wear on Christmas is the manteau d'interieure, or coat for the interior. There are also delectable handmade robes of silk, satin, and chiffon for holiday wear at home. These are usually extremely simple, without much lace or many frills, so they may be worn by women in every stage of society.

Jeanne Lanvin's house pajamas that look like full skirted dresses, and are made of dark satin, are home models that women here are choosing to wear during the Christmas season. Molyneux makes delightful three piece tailored pajama ensembles, in sober silks, to wear privately, and many women are taking a tip from the trousseau of Lady Alice Scott and stocking up with quilted silk dressing gowns for home wear.

"Alice Pink" Now Favorite Lingerie Color.

As for lingerie, "Alice Pink," named from the favorite lingerie color in the trousseau of the royal bride, is the most sought for shade this season. It is a delicate rose, like the petals of that flower. Nightgowns of pastel blue are having a great vogue here in Paris, and lots of ladies choose their nightgowns with tiny jackets to slip over them for breakfast in bed. This new lingerie ensemble would make a splendid Christmas gift. Frivolous little crocheted and padded silk jackets, called by the French "Leap from the Bed," are part of every Frenchwoman's lingerie trousseau. As the name implies they are to jump out of bed in, to protect your shoulders and arms. These jackets come, too, in pink and blue marabou, and there are de luxe models in ermine.

One piece chemise garments are what everybody here wears under daytime clothes. They are usually made of silk, satin, or triple voile, and they fit like the hair on your head. They are more often pale pink than any other color, and if you're giving a lingerie present and cannot learn what the girl at the receiving end prefers in the way of lingerie colors, pink is a pretty safe choice.

Heelless Sandal Replaces the Mule.

Heelless satin or velvet sandals are replacing mules in Paris amongst women who keep in fashion. They are worn in much the same form as the heelless evening slipper. Mules, in pastel colors with high, bright red heels, are new, and give the intimate costume a witch's touch that is piquant.

The house coat from Mainbocher, shown on figure No. 1, is worn with red heeled slippers. This is the famous manteau d'interieure, which such women as Mrs. Vincent Astor and Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle have chosen to wear at home. It is made of black velvet and buttoned down the front on black velvet buttons. It is cut away below the knees so one sees the feet and ankles, while in back it trails. Like a tailored outdoor coat, it has patch pockets and suit revers. A scarf of red velvet and gold threads fills in the neck, and a red velvet handkerchief hangs out of the left pocket. Without the trail this coat is suitable for any woman to wear at home.

Lanvin's Pajamas Look Like a Skirt.

No. 2 is a home gown by Jeanne Lanvin, which is soft and feminine and becoming. It is made of a madonna blue silk crêpe, and down the front of the bodice and on the big peasant sleeves Lanvin has appliqued squares of satin in the same color. The sleeves are shirred into the square neckline, and into the fitted band cuffs. A velvet sash of parma velvet gives a delightful note of contrast.

No. 3 is Jeanne Lanvin's new pajama model for home wear. The trousers are gathered to the tailored belt at the waistline, and into bands at the ankles, but they are so full one scarcely thinks of them as pajamas. The dark blue satin of the trousers is repeated in a bolero blouse, gathered at the base of the V neckline, and a girdle of bright and red crêpe de chine fills in the gap between the bolero and the trouser belt. A short coat of bright red crêpe goes over this model. It has big squares of silver cloth in the lower corners, which are covered with stitching.

No. 4 is Annek's nightgown and jacket ensemble, made of pink triple voile. The short bodice is of bands of shirred voile and valenciennes lace, and the hem is also of lace. The square jacket has short shirred and lace sleeves, and is bordered with valenciennes lace.

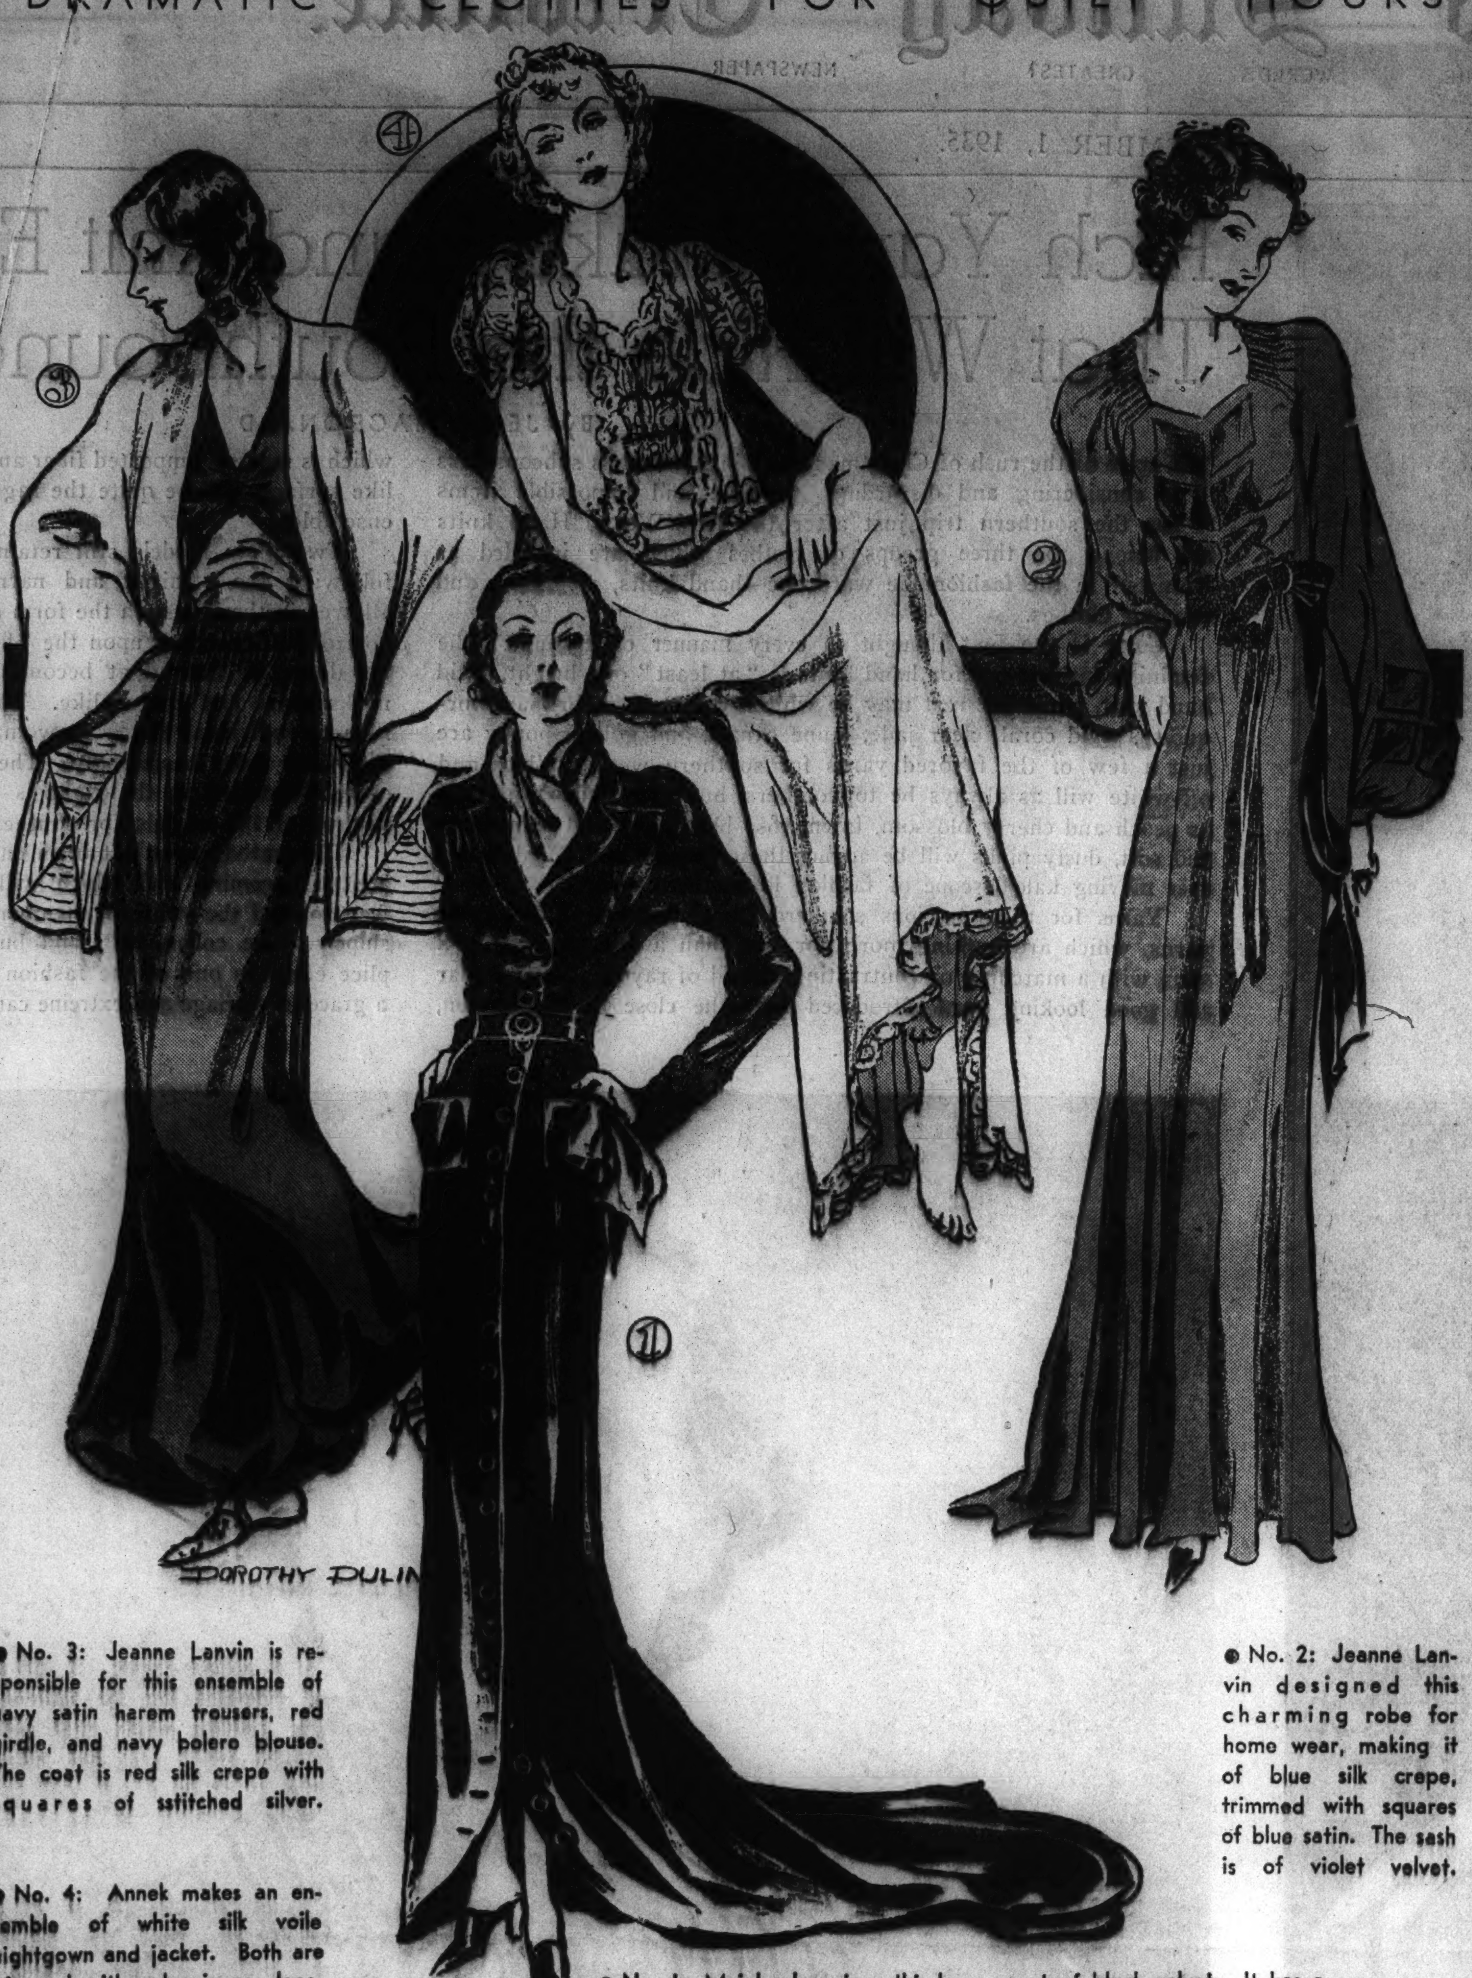
DRAMATIC CLOTHES FOR QUIET HOURS



● No. 3: Jeanne Lanvin is responsible for this ensemble of navy satin harem trousers, red girdle, and navy bolero blouse. The coat is red silk crepe with squares of sstitched silver.

● No. 4: Annek makes an ensemble of white silk voile nightgown and jacket. Both are trimmed with valenciennes lace.

● No. 2: Jeanne Lanvin designed this charming robe for home wear, making it of blue silk crepe, trimmed with squares of blue satin. The sash is of violet velvet.

● No. 1: Mainbocher signs this house coat of black velvet. It has a scarf and handkerchief of red and gold velvet, and a queenly train.

Holiday Fruit Cakes Hold the Cookery Stage

them with water, we like to vary their flavor and color by substituting unsweetened pineapple juice for the liquid, orange juice, grapefruit juice, or sweet cider. For a darker cake, a red cooking wine adds pleasant fragrance and flavor, or you may like to use grape juice or even clear coffee.

But now to get back to those cooks who like to have more of a part in creating their holiday specialties. In case any of them can be swerved from their own pet formulas, we're sure that they'll find these several fruit cakes interesting and full of fine traditional flavor.

The first of the lot is that joy forever, the light fruit cake which is neither expensive nor overly rich, yet boasts an elusive flavor.

PILGRIM FRUIT CAKE.

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk [scant]
2 teaspoons rose extract
1 cup seedless raisins, chopped
½ cup citron
½ cup almonds
¼ cup candied orange peel
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Cream the butter until light, and then add the sugar and well beaten whole eggs, beating constantly. Sift the dry ingredients together, and add alternately, in thirds, with the milk. Add the rose extract, chopped raisins, finely sliced citron, blanched and shredded almonds, orange peel, and lemon rind. Bake as a loaf in a buttered, floured pan [about 8 by 4 by 3 inches] in a moderately slow oven, 325 degrees F., for one hour.

The second is a darker, spicier cake, and an exceptionally good one, well worth the slight extra time it takes to put it together.

NOEL CAKE.

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
5 eggs
4½ cups flour
½ cup fruit jelly
½ cup grape juice
1 tablespoon brandy
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 cup dried figs
2 cups seeded raisins
3 cups uncooked prunes
1 cup sliced citron
1 cup sliced candied orange peel
1 cup sliced Brazil nuts
1 cup seedless raisins
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon salt

Cream the shortening, and blend gradually with the sugar. Beat in the well beaten egg yolks, one cup of the flour, the melted jelly, grape juice, brandy, and grated orange rind.

Boil the dried figs for several minutes, drain, cool, and cut in small pieces. Chop the raisins. Pit and slice the dried prunes, and mix with the sliced citron, candied orange peel, and sliced Brazil nuts. Mix these fruits and nuts with the seedless raisins, and two cups of the flour, sifted together with the spices and salt.

Add this fruit and flour mixture to the batter, and then fold in the five egg whites, which have been beaten until stiff but not dry. And, finally, sift in the remaining cup and a half of flour, folding the mixture lightly. Pour into buttered baking dishes which have fitting covers, filling the pans to within an inch and a half of the top. Cover, and bake at 275 degrees F. for 2½ hours. Cool and store without removing the covers.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 2.

When bulbs are planted late and the soil is likely to freeze, the surface of the beds should be immediately mulched or protected with a covering of strawy manure or litter. It is unnecessary to remove all the fallen leaves from the lawn, for they offer some protection to the grass. However, a well established blue grass lawn needs no covering or protection. Mulch the perennial borders after the ground has frozen, for the operation is done to keep the frost in the ground, not to keep the ground from freezing.

Tuesday, Dec. 3.

Mulch rose beds by hilling up around the individual plants with soil. Later cover them with strawy manure or straw. Lay down climbers and cover with soil. If this is impossible, wrap them with burlap and straw. Remove goldfish from outdoor pools into an indoor aquarium. Oftentimes fish can be safely kept by placing them in a tub of water in a light basement window. Do not be too generous with the fish food. Lift perennials that are semi-hardy and place them in a coldframe for the winter. Protect with sash and boards and when severe weather comes cover with strawy manure.

Wednesday, Dec. 4.

A good method to kill iris borers is to burn the tops of the plants with a swift fire, one that sweeps over and burns the dry foliage without injuring the rhizome. The borer lays its eggs on the foliage in September and October, and these will be instantly killed or removed. Unless it has been done, thoroughly clean up the vegetable garden, burn the debris, and leave it shipshape for the winter.

Thursday, Dec. 5.

Daily attention must be given house plants if they receive the proper amount of water. Be sure the ball of earth is thoroughly soaked, otherwise the interior of the ball may be left dry. Do not overwater to the point of continuous saturation, or the roots will not function. If water stands in the pot, remove the plant, shake out the soil, and repot with good drainage and soil. Water once and be careful with subsequent waterings. Wash the leaves with soapy water to kill eggs and insects. Syringe on bright days to remove any accumulation of dust and to provide a halo of moisture about the plant.

Friday, Dec. 6.

The Anthericum or Chlorophytum variegata [spiderplant] is decorative, and it is one of the foolproof house plants. Keep it in the morning sun. It has a drooping habit and is useful as a basket or shelf plant. Give ferns the maximum of light, but little or no sun. Keep from sudden changes in temperature. Keep the soil moist but watch that the drainage does not clog. Spray twice a week at least. An occasional use of soapy water will also benefit these plants. The regularly formed sori or seed cases that are found on the back of the fronds contain the spores. They are not insects.

Saturday, Dec. 7.

After the ground is frozen, mulch the strawberry bed with a two inch layer of any material that will not mat down. Straw or hay is excellent. Use material that does not contain weed seeds. Use some of the small spring flowering bulbs, such as grape hyacinth, squills, glory of the snow, and crocus in the rock garden. Plant in colonies irregularly placed. Several hardy lilies should be in the ground now. Among these are the Regal lily, speciosum rubrum, alba, and coral lily. A few will add materially to the border's array of bloom.

HAVE SANTA CLAUS SEND JELLY

There are a half dozen folks on any gift list who would love to be checked off with "homemade jelly" after their names. A cinnamon candy jelly is as delicious as it is novel, and inexpensive enough to cut down on the high cost of playing Santa Claus. It's made like this: Mix 5½ cups of sugar with 3 cups of water, and combine with a half pound of red cinnamon candies. Bring these to a boil and stir in a bottle of fruit pectin. When this again comes to a full boil, let it boil hard for a half minute, then remove from heat, skim, and pour into hot sterile glasses. Paraffin at once. This makes nine glasses, six ounces each, of cheerful red jelly.

Etiquet Editor Describes Way to Send Cards

Cites Rules on Addressing Holiday Greetings and Special Points to Note.

Miss Bartlett will be happy to answer your questions pertaining to etiquet and correct social behavior. For a personal reply, inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your letter.

By Helen Bartlett.

JUST a portion of the story and the rules concerning the etiquet of sending Christmas cards was presented in this column last week. We talked about the selection of cards, the use of printing and engraving, the proper signature for cards, and when to use the signature and when the social title.

Now, we still have the problem of addressing, acknowledging, etc., which subject we haven't discussed since last year about this same time. If you have chosen the design of your card and placed the order for the engraving, you now can center your attention on the few remaining details which will get your holiday greetings through the mails in the proper manner.

Envelopes Always Addressed in Ink in Dignified Hand.

We'll begin with addressing the envelopes. This always is done in ink. In a dignified, legible hand, address the envelopes to Miss So and So, Mr., Mrs., or Mr. and Mrs., whichever the case happens to be. By the way, widows are addressed Mrs. John Smith . . . never Mrs. Mary Smith. Do not add "and family" to the name on the envelope. If there are any other adult members of the family whom you would like to remember, send each an individual card. Younger members of the family may be forgotten, or implied in the plural "you."

Etiquet authorities say that the return address is not placed in the upper left corner or the flap of the envelope, in spite of the fact that the postal authorities would like to have one do so.

We so often are asked the question whether the tissue accompanying engraved cards for the protection of the type should be removed or left in place. Usually it is removed, although there is no serious offense involved if it is left in with the card.

Mourning Imposes Special Rules on Christmas Greetings.

It is not necessary, as a rule, to acknowledge by letter the receipt of Christmas cards. There may be some instances, however, in which sending cards meant a great deal of real effort on the part of the sender, and it would be a gracious gesture to acknowledge them. I am thinking of an invalid, perhaps, whose physical limitations make it difficult for her to carry on the custom. Other persons you can thank if and when you next see them.

Persons and families in mourning, that is, immediate mourning, when the death has occurred within a period of two or three months before Christmas, usually do not send Christmas greetings to their friends. But to intimate friends of the bereaved the fact of the mourning need not deter an individual's sending a simple expression of his good wishes. Any one, even though he be bereaved, would be pleased to receive the cards and good wishes of his acquaintances.

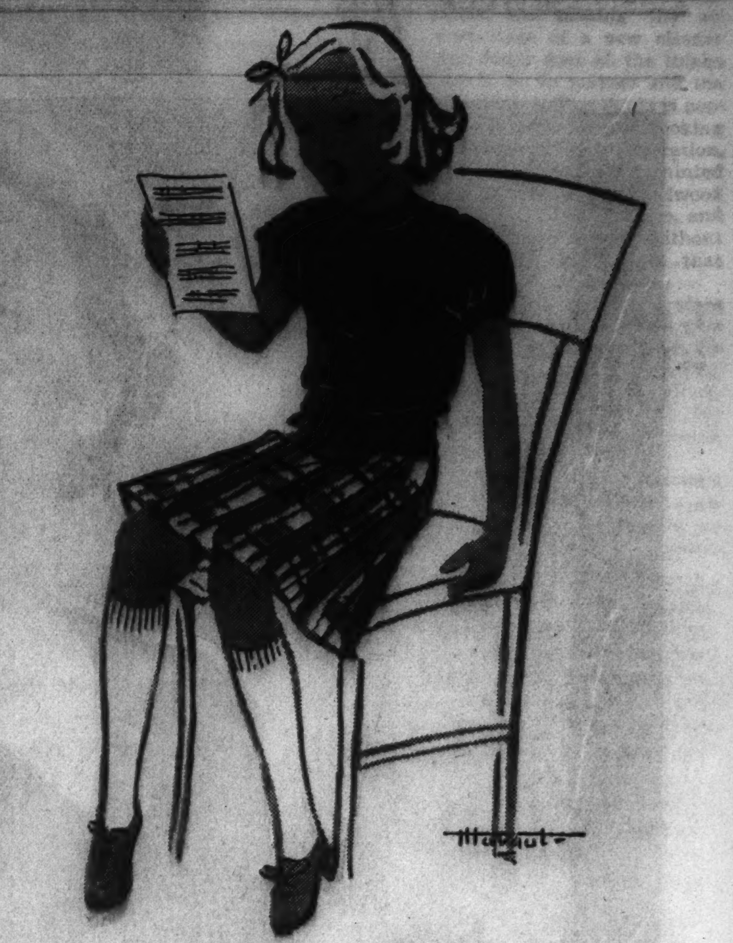
One Sweater Belongs in Every Small Girl's Christmas Loot



By Jean Macdonald.

THE 6 and 7 year old miss is looking forward to Christmas morning with utmost impatience and extreme good behavior. As one of the rewards for such virtue every adoring mother might include a hand knit sweater among the other gifts underneath the Christmas tree. There is nothing more becoming or comfortable for the young lady starting school than a pretty wool sweater and a plaid plaited skirt.

The sweater illustrated today—perhaps the one type best suited to the young school girl—is an easy one to knit. It takes no time to do. The short sleeves and crew neck are features every little girl likes in her sweaters. Shetland, fingering, or three ply Saxony may be used for a sweater of this type. Large needles and fairly heavy yarn make one of the easiest knitting jobs, assuring that the sweater will be ready in plenty of time for the holidays if it is started now.

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instructions for knitting the little girl's sweater with crew neck illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Initials Loom Importantly in Hollywood

Actresses Are Emphasizing Their Chic with Accents of Dashing Mongrams.

OUT in Hollywood the actresses who are noted for their chic are proudly displaying their initials in various accessories with their smart costumes. Monogramming gives a personality touch unequalled by any other phase of dress.

Petite Lily Pons puts her initials on the wrist bands of her gloves. The songbird's swank hand covering bears monograms on the tiny buckles which fasten the straps.

Wendy Barrie goes in for mannish shirts of white crêpe de chine, and with them she wears cuff links. These adornments are composed of dull gold letters, W and B, which are suspended from fine gold chains.

Actresses Show Individuality in Their Choice of Accessories.

In her favorite collection of accessories Molly Lamont treasures modern initials which form the clasp of a novel patent lether belt.

Some time ago Jeanette MacDonald found a large carnelian on the shores of Lake Tahoe. An Indian carved some symbols of his tribe on it, to keep the evil spirits away from the dashing songstress.

Joan Clancy, one of the newer arrivals to the circle of feminine stylists in Hollywood, has an accessory recipe which lends dash to the dullest ensemble. She recommends taking a navy costume, rust colored accessories, and to contribute a little green to the picture, perhaps in the form of a boutonniere.

Hollywood Brand of Handbag Takes on Large Proportions.

Smart women of the cinema colony are seen carrying some of the latest creations in the world of handbags. Suede bags are the "dernier mot" when worn with fancy suede gauntlets. Evening bags being toted around by some of the smartest women in the films are notably large, in envelope style. They are fashioned of gold or silver kid, or of velvet.

These tidbits of fashion give a clue to what some of Hollywood's fashionables are wearing. Ginger Rogers has been seen in brown suede, square-toed shoes. Heather Angel likes her formal evening jacket cut like a man's frock coat, but made of quilted white taffeta. Cecelia Parker has a novel black lether belt. It resembles a policeman's belt, and is fastened with a sterling silver lock. A tiny key opens this, to reveal Cecelia's preparedness in the way of makeup. The collection underneath the lock is composed of a business-like compact containing powder, rouge, and lipstick in her favorite shades.

Home Treatment For Keeping Skin Young

MERCOLIZED WAX is the one beauty aid you can afford because this single preparation embodies all the essentials of beauty that your skin needs. It cleanses, softens, bleaches, lubricates and protects. It is so simple to use, too. Just pat it on your skin each night as if it were an ordinary cold cream. That's all. Mercolized Wax seeps into your pores and dissolves grime and dust and all impurities. It absorbs the discolored surface skin in tiny, invisible particles, revealing the beautiful, soft, young skin that lies beneath. It clears away freckles, tan, oiliness, sunburn or any other blemishes. You use such a tiny bit of Mercolized Wax for each application that it proves an inexpensive beauty investment. Beauty cannot be taken for granted. It must be cared for regularly if you want to hold it through the years. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin.

POWDERED SAXOLITE dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel quickly reduces wrinkles and other age signs. It is a refreshing, stimulating astringent lotion. Use it daily. At all drug and department stores.

'Don't' Should Be Rarely Used in Child Care

Avoid Scotching Youthful Fun; When You Must, Provide a Substitute.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in the Tribune on Monday and every other weekday.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

"DON'T" advice is probably the commonest of any handed out to parents.

"Try not to say don't to your child." "Avoid negative commands." In these or similar ways are mothers advised to eschew the too easy "don't."

This suggestion is usually addressed particularly to the mother of small children, partly because she is with them all of every day and must constantly direct them, and partly because in the nature of things these near babies are apt to do each day dozens of things that they shouldn't, being so young that they know no better.

Even if you may be a little tired of hearing it, it's good advice. Try sincerely to avoid "don't-ing" your child.

Child Inevitably Full of Curiosity.

It's easier, almost, to say "don't" than not. Little children call it forth. They are so active, so busy, so interested in everything they see about the house and everything that is going on.

They are filled to the brim with curiosity—a natural curiosity. The investigating spirit drives them—one of the vital urges of nature. They can't help it. They can't be still—that is, still with empty hands. If they're quiet it's when they're asleep! Or when they are absorbed in some quiet play.

The result of all this constant activity is, alas, too often a shower of negative commands. With a lack of understanding too many parents think of the small child's ways as "getting into mischief." "Stop!" they cry. "Don't!" And they are astonished or grieved because, stopping that, their small boy or girl does something else.

The most usual plaint I hear is: "My little boy is so disobedient. I tell him to stop doing something and he stops—but the next minute he is into something else."

In that complaint lies the kernel of the cure.

The reason he is "into something else" is because he can't be idle. "Don't" leaves a void. The trick is to:

1. Let him do everything within reason.

2. Find satisfying occupation for him.

3. If he's doing something he should not, substitute for that activity something that he may do.

4. If you must stop him quickly, say your necessary "don't" but follow it by sensibly providing some other object of play.

Go on the principle, not that "Satan will find mischief for idle hands to do," but rather that "nature will find something for idle hands to do," and that "if I empty those busy little paws it's up to me to put something into them that I don't object to."

And, of course I don't mean necessarily only hands. Sometimes it's young legs that climb in the wrong places, like pianos or pet satin chairs and that must be given something they can use up their "climbing urge" on. Sometimes it's young teeth that nip into something neither edible nor meant for "teething," like a painted toy or the edge of a table—and must be given a substitute like a zweiback or a rubber doll.

Learn to Direct Activity of Your Young Dynamo.

If your little boy or girl is always "on the go," you simply must get the right slant on this busy young thing and his doings. If you don't, you'll be continually "put out" by his perpetual motion.

What you should be glad of is that he is so full of "pep," of vitality both mental and physical. Be glad that you have a young dynamo. Then learn how to handle it. Don't try to muffle it, to throttle it.

If you want your child to be quiet, don't try to get the result by saying, "Sit still." He can't sit still and do nothing. Virtually the only time you should expect a young child to be still and idle is when you settle him for his nap, or, if he has given up his nap, for his daytime rest period.

Otherwise, if you want your "small one" to be quiet, you must provide him with quiet play. In fact, you should make it your business to see that he has alternations of active, stimulating play with the quieter kind. Otherwise you're likely to have an over-tired, or perhaps a keyed-up, child. These alternations are in harmony with nature's own rhythm.

Principle of "Do" Often Improves Family Relations.

If you're having a hard time with your little son or daughter try today's advice. Instead of checking, blocking, preventing—instead of taking this or that away from your child, try just the opposite measures. Try the principle of "do" instead of "don't."

Watch him—see what he needs—then to the best of your ability, supply it. If you do this you will find, to your surprise, that when you occasionally have to deny something, to exercise some definite control, to say "don't," your word will be heeded. And you will find one more thing, which is that your relation to your child will be a much more interesting one.

We have a group of nearly a dozen leaflets on the young child's behavior. If you write in please be sure to specify the age of your child and the kind of trouble you are having. A stamped, self-addressed envelope must accompany the request.

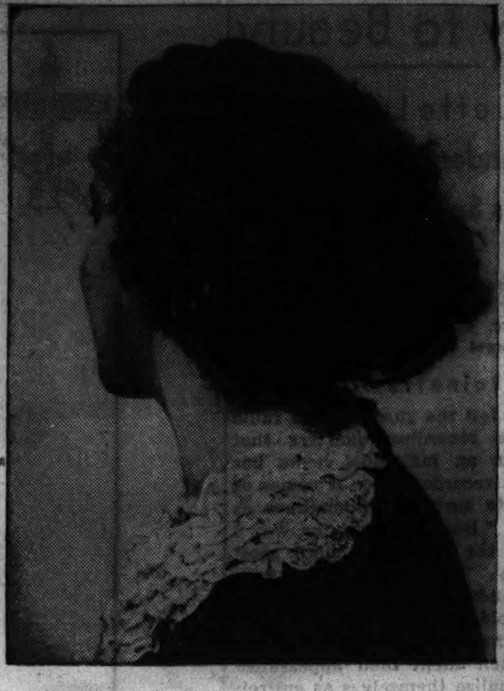
THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

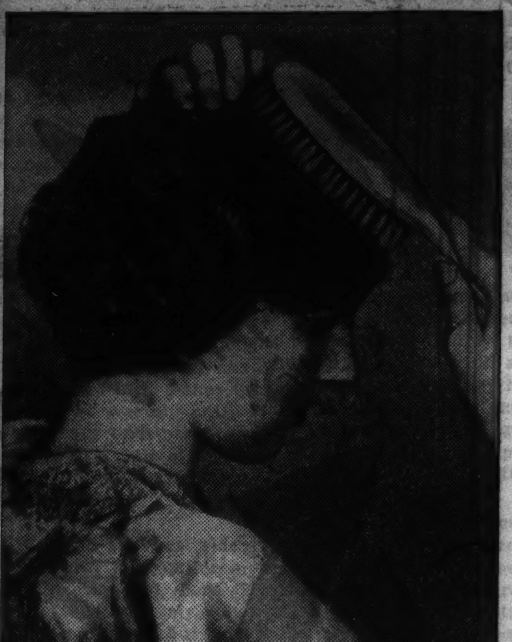


Neglect plus a series of poor permanents made this head of hair the sorry sight it is. Dryness, a tight scalp, and complete lack of luster were just a few of its many ailments.

First step in reconditioning was daily use of the hair brush, one with long, firm bristles. Brushing was the vigorous sort that stimulated the scalp as well as polished the hair strands.

Massage, night and morning, helped the cause of restoring beauty to the drab, brittle hair. Night and morning our subject massaged well the entire scalp.

[TRIBUNE Studio Photos.]



The same hair after three weeks of the simplest of home care, with a hair brush and elbow grease the only instruments of magic. Sheen and health are completely restored.

Good Brush, Massage, and Elbow Grease Give Dull Hair New Lease on Life.

JUST to prove to you that you can brush your hair, no matter how messy it is, right back to life and luster, we recently conducted an experiment. In the space of a few weeks we saw a head of hair that was dry and disorderly, from a combination of neglect and unsuccessful permanents, transformed into a crown of glory. There was no hocus-pocus about it, and all it cost, aside from a little elbow grease, was the price of a good but moderately priced brush. And, if exactly the same technique doesn't work with you, we'll eat the paper on which this is printed.

You know what the hair was like—many of you have exactly the same head condition. The color of the hair was nondescript and unattractive, not blonde and not brunette, just miserably wishy-washy. The scalp was tight. The hair ends were split, brittle, and no joy to look upon. There had been a succession of permanents, not too successful. But the operator wasn't to blame for that. Hair that is in poor condition is a poor permanent risk.

Brilliantine didn't work. No amount of hairdressing tricks could make the drab, dull hair look lustrous or even well behaved.

But the hair brush, properly and faithfully wielded, did.

First of all the brush was the right kind. Not handsome, maybe, but businesslike. It would stand washing. Its bristles were long enough to penetrate to the scalp and firm enough to give said scalp a good workout.

We put our subject with the bedraggled hair on a brushing schedule. Every day without fail. There was no necessity for the famous hundred strokes. Half that number of the right kind of strokes is more than sufficient. The idea is to plant the long, resilient bristles of the brush firmly on the scalp, then to give the brush a rotary twist, lifting the scalp a bit and drawing the brush right straight along the hair shafts. This does two things: really stimulates the scalp and polishes the hair strand. Nothing can improve on this as a scalp stimulant and hair cleanser.

We also asked our subject to get the good habit of massaging her scalp, quite the simplest thing in the world.

In one week the hair that had been dry began to take on luster. In another week it took on life. And at the end of the fourth week of brushing and massage the head that had looked like an untended parsley bed boasted a mass of satiny hair.

Where there had been mediocrity real beauty of color blossomed out. The undertones of color that are in the hair of the in-betweener shone forth in all their glory, with charming depth and highlighting as well.

This was as sorry a looking head of hair as we ever hope to see. With her little brush and some determination our subject made it superbly beautiful and healthy, all in the space of a few weeks. You can do it, too, if you make up your mind.

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

Efficient Liquid Cleans Surfaces Without Effort

A GOOD many Chicago housewives are making the acquaintance of a new cleaner that really does all the things claimed for it by its makers and the department store selling it. It is popular because it removes soil, cooking grease, smudge smoke, discoloration, and heavy gas grease from painted kitchen walls, woodwork, hardwood floors, tile, brick, interior stucco, and fireplaces. And it does it without wearing out the human arm that applies it, too!

All you do is to get a clean piece of old bath towel, wet it with this cleaning liquid, and then wipe the soiled surface with a dusting rather than a rubbing or scouring motion. You'll be surprised to see the dirt and grease coming off so easily and completely.

It isn't necessary to rinse the wall or woodwork afterward. And you won't see any rings or places to indicate where you stopped the cleaning work.

The makers state that no harmful chemical or any acid is used which might injure the paint or any delicate or glossy finish which is washable. Soil and grease are easily dissolved from the cloth used by cold water as it comes from the faucet. The same cloth may be used repeatedly.

This cleaner is sold in the household utilities department of a large Chicago store.

Weatherbeaten Walls Charming in Cape Cod Cottage

IF one is planning a new Cape Cod cottage, or hoping to renovate an old one, there are two exterior treatments which have long been popular with builders of the Cape Cod dwelling. In one of these the walls are of clapboard or shingles, painted white. In the other, shingle walls are allowed to weather to a soft gray. In either case the trim and sash are usually painted white, with the blinds green and the doors green or white. In late years dwellers in leased homes on the cape have been painting the blinds and doors in vivid colors—bright blues and yellows and even reds—but this is not running entirely true to early Cape Cod tradition.

Inside a Cape Cod cottage we often find the ceilings done in water colors, tinted to suit the general color scheme. Now there is a tendency to do the bathroom and kitchen ceilings in gloss paint to resist moisture and shed grease.

Dark ivory or deep cream is seen inside the house for trim and sash and doors, excepting possibly in bathroom and kitchen, where walls and trim alike are often painted a soft apple green or yellow.

Smart Juniors Go Military! Trimly Tailored Frock Has Soldierly Lines.

Clotilde is a daily contributor to the Chicago Tribune, offering constructive information to women who enjoy making their own clothes, and presenting a fascinating pattern every day of the week.

By Clotilde.

JUNIORS, let's go military! It's an accepted fashion which flatters and lends vivacity to the slim silhouette. This new model, pattern No. 2947, is simple to cut and to sew, and should be an important factor in your winter wardrobe.

The original of this frock is fashioned in bottle green novelty silk with a finish which suggests wool. Black braid frogs lend modish precision to the lines of the bodice. The shoulder is styled with a suggestion of epaulets. Even the little standing collar, open at the front, partakes of the military mood.

Another attractive ensemble suggestion for this style is black velveteen with a wide, flame red, suede belt. Wool, jersey, rabbit's hair woolen, crêpe silk, and velvet are other ideas in the way of materials.

Style No. 2947 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17, and 19 years. Size 15 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material.

Clothes conscious? Of course you are! And the winter edition of the Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions is right on time to guide your seasonal wardrobe to the latest in style. Coats, day and evening frocks, indispensable tips on fabrics and colors, and fashion news for the youngest set, all are presented in this fascinating volume, now on sale for 15 cents, 10 cents when ordered with a pattern. Address Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Fur or Fabric, Evening Wraps Spell Splendor

Short Coats Copy Swank Sports Models; Sleeves Full and Collars Small.

Miss Seeger's column also appears in the Tribune on Monday and on every other day throughout the week.

By Rhea Seeger.

NOT all the glitter and pomp and glory have been reserved for evening gowns . . . a good share has been cut and sewed into the lovely evening wraps fully guaranteed to make a picture of every one who wears them. Short or long, of fur or fabric, they are as sensationally picturesque and flattering as any gown of the year.

No matter what the size of your clothes allowance, it's a slim budget indeed that can't accommodate two evening coats, for the price tags are just as exciting as the coats and wraps themselves. You can spend your cash for a swirling cape of velvet, lined with a high color to dramatize the dark hue of the exterior; you can talk a wealthy uncle out of the wherewithal and have a snowy white caracul coat. Or you can go along with the moderately priced models having the time of your gadabout party existence with the best looking evening regalia that has been unpacked in years.

White Quilted Silks Delight the Younger Set.

Short coats invariably have a full backline, copying the dash and swank of tweed sports coats. Most of them have huge sleeves gathered into narrow cuffs to keep the weather out and to take care of all the yardage in the sleeves of the smartest evening gowns. All of them have moderate collars, with the favorites the small, stand up kind that can take a fur piece for extra warmth if needed.

White quilted silks are charming for the younger set. And so are the colorful velvets, quilted in the same manner. In these models the sleeves are also full and puffed into wristfitting cuffs, and the collars frame the face. Long, velvet coats, unfurred, are exceptionally good buys, being practical and most becoming. You'll find these evening coats lined with either white or black satin, and all of them warmly interlined, making them surprisingly warm and snug for the coldest night.

Silhouettes Still Follow Streamline.

Red Riding hoods on both the full capes and the coats are fascinating tops. They can be worn well over the head as a protection against wind and weather or hung back in soft folds as a glorified collar. Coat silhouettes cling close to the streamline and flare softly around the hemline, especially in the long models, following the clinging lines of the fashionable evening gowns worn under them.

Four new, high fashion coats have been sketched, four different types, priced for four kinds of clothes allowances. No 1 . . . a most sophisticated model of changeable, metallic taffeta, featuring black, shot with deep, garnet red. The huge sleeves accent the fitted yoke. There are large, covered buttons at the front. This swagger type coat is a trifle longer than the usual wrap. They have lots of fullness in the back section. It's an all-around, all-purpose coat. With it you can wear your extra furs, or carry a muff. It is a grand contrast for velvet, dull crêpe, satin, or chiffon evening clothes.

No. 2 . . . the peak of luxury—a snowy white, soft, ermine coat that is virtually undated as to line and general design. The sleeves are moderately wide and loose, the silhouette is just as restrained in fullness, and the collar fits smoothly and snugly high around the neckline. This wrap can be ordered lined with either dull crêpe or gleaming, slippery satin.

Hoods Lose Their Infantile Demeanor.

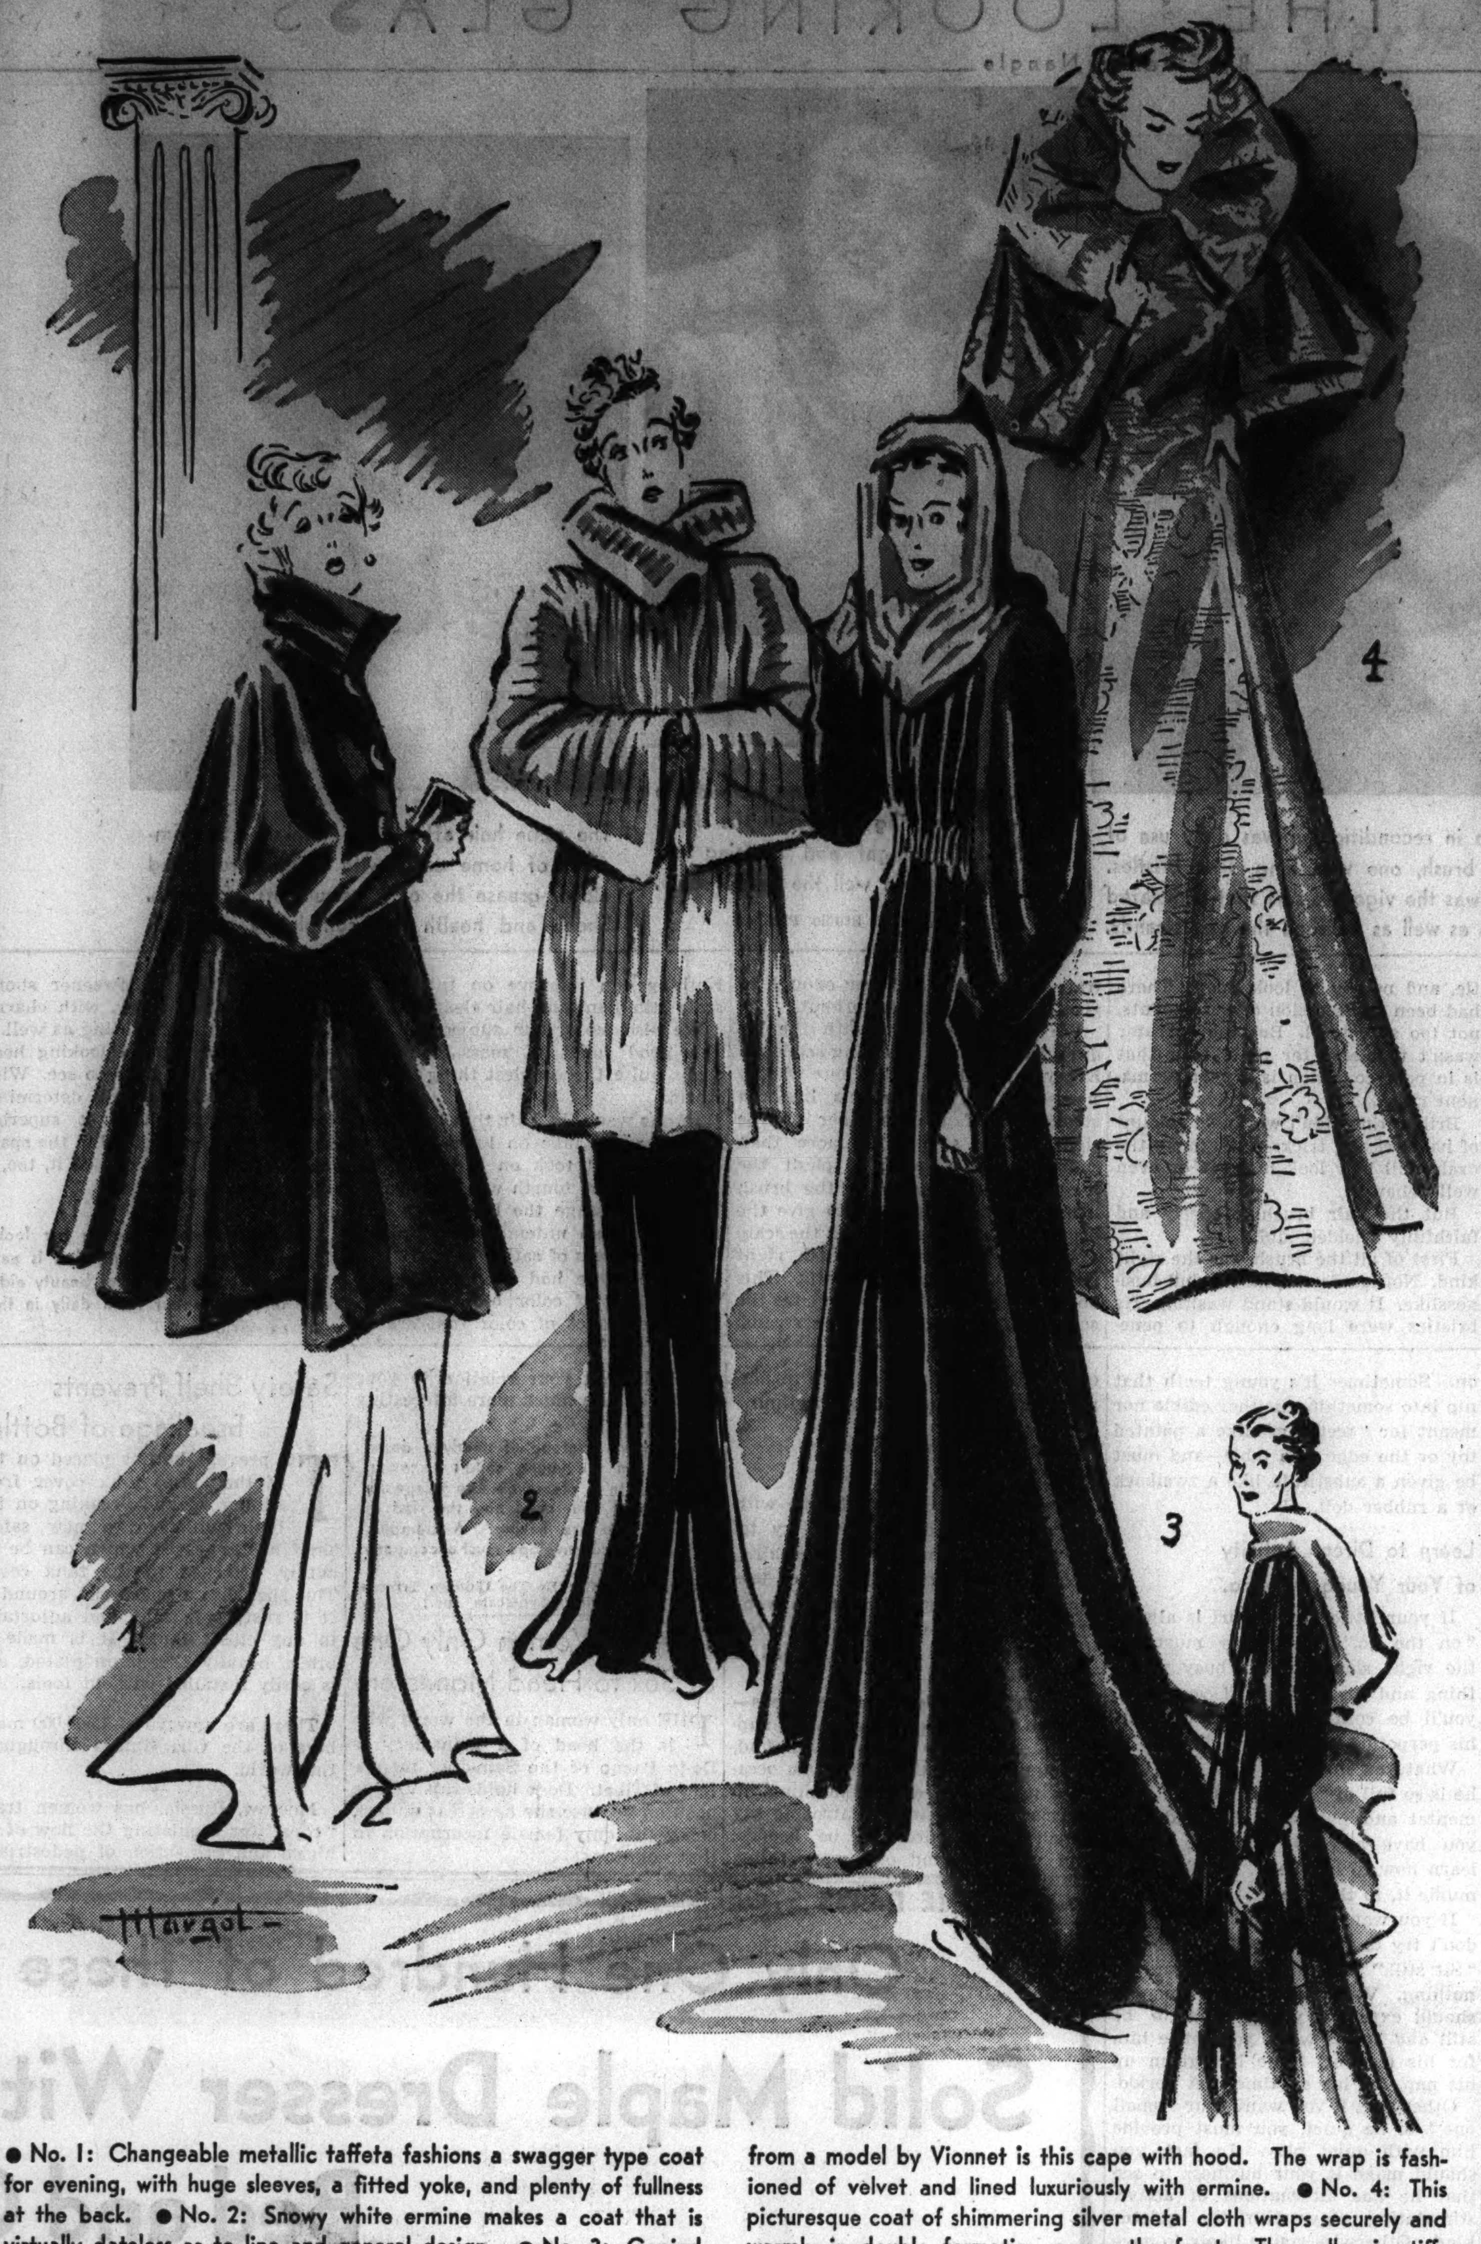
No. 3 . . . The find of the season—a long, velvet coat with a hood lined with ermine. This particular sketch shows the coat in black velvet with the stunning contrast of white ermine. However, you can order it in any color or dead white and with or without the fur lined hood. It is a copy of a Vionnet original, and the attractive top is the best example of a flattering hood without the usual rather infantile appeal of such an accessory. The hood is shown both as worn over the head and also as thrown back.

No. 4 . . . what the dancing crowd is wearing—a long, picturesque coat of shimmering silver metal cloth. It fits smoothly over the hipline and flares around the lower edge, wrapping securely and warmly in double formation across the front. The face framing collar is folded to achieve stiffness. The sleeves are moderately full and taper at the wrists.

All coats sketched and others just as practical and flattering and good to look at are from a collection to be found in a Chicago shop.

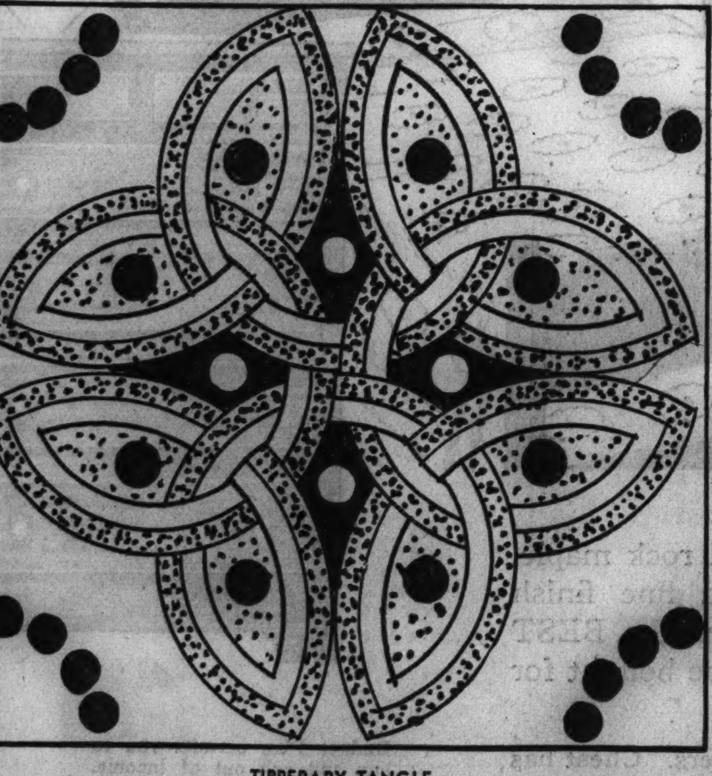
[For information on any item described in this article call Rhea Seeger, Superior 0100.]

FOUR FROM THE PARTY PARADE



● No. 1: Changeable metallic taffeta fashions a swagger type coat for evening, with huge sleeves, a fitted yoke, and plenty of fullness at the back. ● No. 2: Snowy white ermine makes a coat that is virtually dateless as to line and general design. ● No. 3: Copied from a model by Vionnet is this cape with hood. The wrap is fashioned of velvet and lined luxuriously with ermine. ● No. 4: This picturesque coat of shimmering silver metal cloth wraps securely and warmly in double formation across the front. The collar is stiff.

"Tipperary Tangle" Quilt Is Block for Able Needleworker



TIPPERARY TANGLE.

By Nancy Cabot.

HERE is a pattern to tempt the most experienced quiltmakers as well as the novice. Unless the amateur needle-worker has utmost patience, "Tipperary Tangle" is not to be recommended. It is one design which is aptly named. The completed block measures 16 inches square, and 30 applique blocks are required for an entire coverlet. Red, gray, blue, and white are the colors used in the original design, yet any number of attractive combinations may be arranged.

For a limited period Nancy Cabot offers 10 quilt patterns of her own choice at a price of 10 cents for the group (12 cents by mail). Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

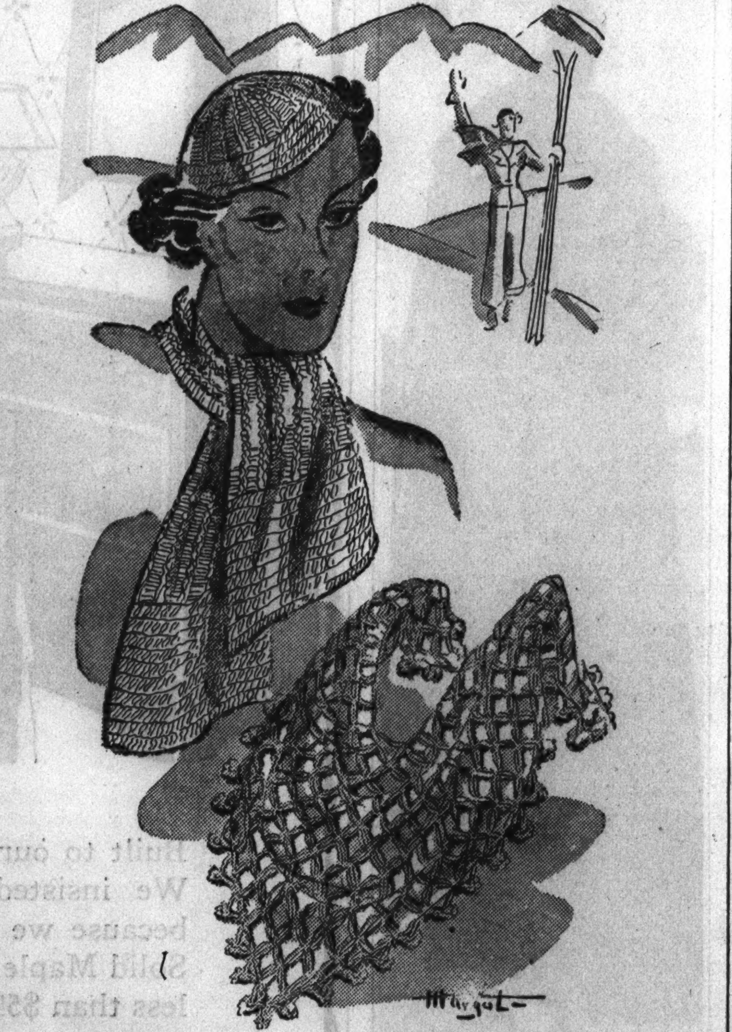
Circular Vases of Ivory Tinted Pottery Are New

CIRCULAR shaped vases of ivory tinted pottery produce attractive garland effects for table decorations that are lovely, dainty, and different. These troughlike flower containers perched upon tiny peg legs are less than two inches long. Gardenias, large daisies, or any flat petaled blossoms with stems cut off leaving one inch remaining, then arranged closely together, make a perfect ring-around-a-rosie.

This innovation in table decoration may be carried out with small, slightly curved containers of the same ware, six inches long and the same depth as the circular ones. They may be placed closely together, or slightly separated to increase the dimension of the ring. Used lengthwise, they have many tricky possibilities.

Smaller rings are available and may be placed within the outer one, the result being a delightfully charming double garland. One outstanding feature of this new flower mode is that guests can see persons on the opposite side of the table without constantly straining their necks while playing hide and seek, which often is the case with a mountainous arrangement of flowers.

Gay Designs in Cap and Scarf Challenge the Crochet Expert



By Ellen Bruce.

AT this season of the year small handmade items are the order of the day. Crochet cap and scarf sets for outdoor wear or simple triangular scarfs to serve as dress accessories make ideal Christmas gifts. And there is still sufficient time to make two or three sets of these items before Dec. 24. The love knot triangular scarf is one of the quickest and easiest articles in the crochet fields. One ball of yarn is sufficient to make two scarves. Only fine yarn is used; such as zephyr, two ply Saxony, or one of the fine crêpe yarns which is a combination of zephyr and a fine rayon thread.

The crochet skating set is another one of the simpler sets which work up most effectively. Double and treble crochet is used for the ends of the scarf and around the tiny rolled brim of the cap, while an easy-to-master pattern is used in the body of the scarf and the crown of the cap. This may be made in a fine, three ply fingering, Saxony, or sports wool.

If you wish instructions for crocheting the scarf and cap patterns illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

Viewing Figure Full Length Is Key to Beauty

Silhouette Loveliness Is Dependent Upon Seeing One's Self as Others Do.

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

THEY tell the story around radio voice recording quarters that when an individual hears her own recorded voice it comes as a complete surprise. Sometimes as a shock. "But that isn't the way I talk" is the comment heard most frequently. "But it is the way your voice sounds to others," the person will be told.

This same principle applies to certain women anent their appearance. They visualize themselves as entirely different in effect than they actually are. Sometimes, indeed, they do not recognize in themselves the assets that others attach to them.

Revelations of Long Mirror Display Faults of the Figure.

A certain woman, as an example, had not studied her figure in a long mirror for years. She may have given herself a fleeting glimpse when she couldn't escape a shop or window reflection. But what was seen in this fleeting look carried no personal message to the woman. Perhaps she didn't look. Anyway, it came as a great surprise when some one referred to her "enormous stomach."

It nettled her sufficiently to ask a friend if she might look at herself in the friend's long mirror, her own old-fashioned house boasting no such modern aid. The profile view brought her up with the confession: "But I never knew I looked like that!" It's a true story. The woman's body was far too thick. Front and back she protruded. The skirts she wore, without a relieving bit of fullness, exaggerated the effect and the woman was convinced that a new corset was immediately imperative, a new posture, and a diet.

Back of the Head Important Object of Self-Criticism.

In the matter of the back of the head, for another thing, women more often see themselves as they visualize that head back, not as it actually appears to others, because they never take a hand mirror and study the back of the head effect.

So it is with grimaces. We may have a set of them of which we either are not aware at all, or on which we put our own interpretation as cute, fetching, something flattering to ourselves. To our audience they're just plain grimaces without which our faces would be easier to look at.

To get back to the figure picture we make and think we make: we'll spend a great deal of money on a dress or suit, say. We're all set up with it. We see ourselves as quite some knockout because we spent a lot of money on the ensemble. Our audience may see us as a woman whose frightful posture couldn't make a striking costume of anything, no matter what its cost. They may see us, as we would have to admit on a witness stand, as a person who sunk al. in the top layer of costuming, but gave nary a thought to the foundation garment. "No dress is better than its foundation" is the truest thing ever said. It makes no difference how clever the cut and style. If it isn't built on a good foundation it simply does not go over successfully. This gets us right back to the full length sectional mirror which should be standard equipment in every woman's home. You can't dress from a waist length mirror. The world sees us in a three dimensional mirror aspect.

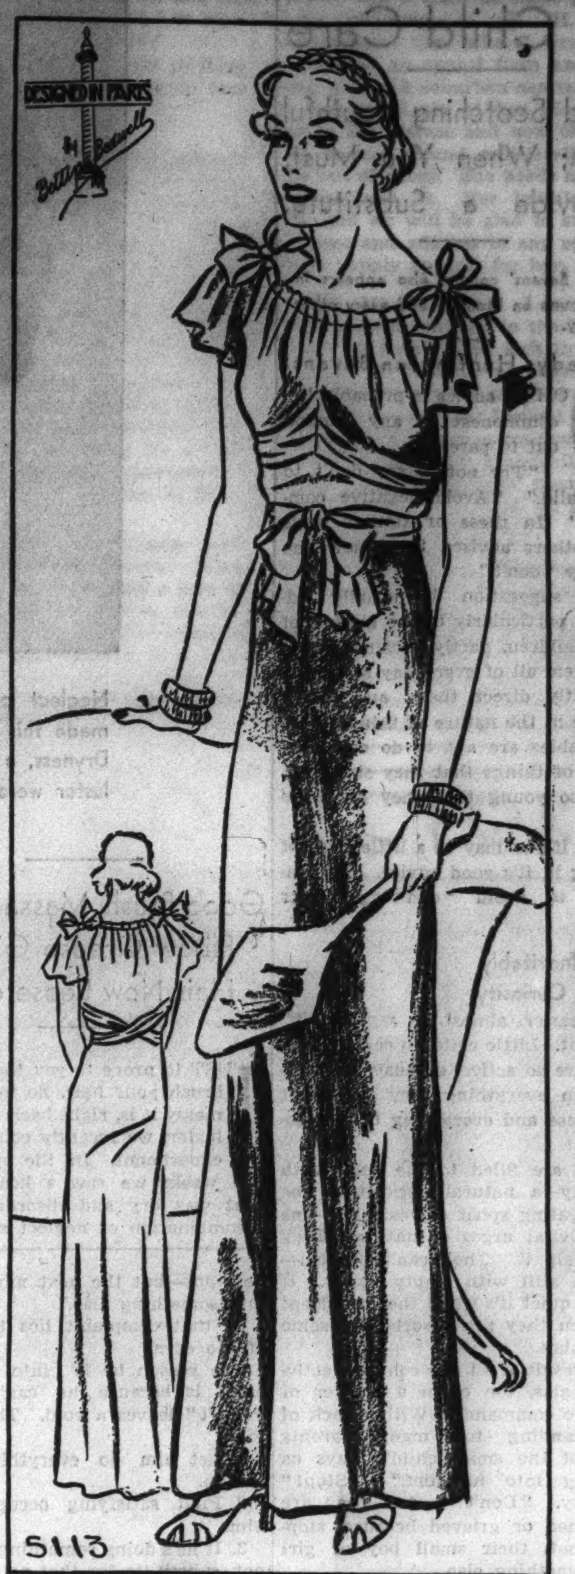
Dainty Paris Pattern Nightgown Ideal Solution to Gift Problem



No. 5113—The Paris pattern for this nightgown is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—This pattern, No. 5113, is for a French nightgown which I have designed, thinking that it would make a charming Christmas gift which you can make at home in a few hours, and which is the most beautiful of offerings to a woman. I have had several gowns of this model made here in Paris and they are enchanting. The wide sash of the material, which is stitched onto the gown below the bust in front and then wound around the waistline and tied in front, gives a line and an effect that are individual and infinitly becoming to any figure.

The amount of time required to make this model is incredibly short and the result is a French gown of quality. The original model was made of flowered chiffon, in pastel blue with pink and white flowers, and the ribbons over which the gown is gathered at the neckline in front and back are blue satin, tied in bows on the shoulders. The suggestion of sleeves is becoming to most shoulders. The model would be equally attractive made of one color silk with ribbons in a contrasting shade or matching.

[Answer on page two.]

Here Is a Family Budget with a Sense of Humor

Psychological Approach to Household Finance Is Gentle on the Temper.

Every day there is presented, in the feature columns of the Chicago Tribune, a stimulating article by Miss Blake, who lends friendly counsel on a wide variety of common problems.

By Doris Blake.

"A BUDGET plan with a sense of humor" is the recommendation advanced by Jerome Beatty through the Household Finance corporation of Chicago in a neat volume entitled "Tips for Lazy Husbands!"

Successful family budgets, says Mr. Beatty, "must be more psychological than mathematical. That is, they require a sense of humor and the women to run them. There are budgets and budgets," Beatty comments, "but it took me more than two years to discover that there is a way to handle the family income so that it goes farther. Like golf, one of the first things to learn is to relax and make the budget work for you, instead of you working for the budget.

New Budget Plan Observes Psychology of Average Man.

"The way to start is to ignore nearly all the precepts set down by the master minds of budgetry. Most of their advice, while scientifically correct, just makes matters worse. If followed meticulously by the average husband it may keep him out of the poor house, it is true. But unless he quits in time and throws into the furnace most of their complicated accounting systems he'll end up in the divorce court or in the bughouse."

Mr. Beatty's complaint is that the master minds have overlooked the fact that budgets are kept by ordinary human beings who dislike detailed bookkeeping and would much rather look at a long line of figures in a Follies chorus than a column of figures in a budget book. They forget that husbands and wives, no matter how much they love each other, often quarrel over things that, to outsiders, seem quite petty, and that a budget so intricate and immutable that it is nothing but pages of "thou shalt nots" is a breeder of friction in the home.

Clever New Plan Teaches How to SPEND Money Correctly.

After a study of existing budgets, interviewing hundreds of husbands and wives, and tacking on his own experience, Mr. Beatty declares that the mighty magic miracle working prescription for harassed husbands begins at the other end. It teaches families how to spend instead of how to save, and it works. It is devised to put an end to the husband's worry about where the money is going and allows him to concentrate upon the process of getting it.

Rule No. 1, according to Beatty, is let the women do the work!

"The wise husband turns all his money over to his wife, after retaining his properly budgeted allowance for personal spending, dusts off his hands, forgets about it, and concentrates on getting some more. This is a fifty-fifty arrangement. He earns it. She disburses it. He should help her, remembering, however, that helping is not synonymous with fault finding. This is a coöperative plan."

Handling Such a Budget Gives Flighty Wives New Stability.

Even the flightiest wife, Mr. Beatty optimistically declares, the habitual spendthrift becomes a careful and sober budgeteer when given the entire responsibility of handling family funds. She improves as time goes on and, when given proper coöperation and praise, the operation has a definite tonic effect on her.

Although the wife may be handling the money, she must realize that it is a coöperative arrangement. In no way does this budget plan elevate the wife to the title of ruler of the home. It just gives her a fifty-fifty share of the business.

Rule No. 2: Take it for granted that husband and wife will make many mistakes and agree not to talk about them. An "oil" fund is suggested to pay for oil for troubled waters. Out of this fund comes, with no rebuke, the money for honest errors that cost money, as the goldfish bought in a moment's enthusiasm by the husband, or the $5 the wife paid to the boy who was working his way through college and took magazine subscriptions that never came, for the lamp that was broken, and so on.

"Reward Fund" Substitutes for Drabness of Ordinary "Savings."

Rule No. 3: Books are to be kept, but not down to the smallest item. Ten cents for peanuts, 30 cents for laundry soap can go by the boards. Go to the movies, too, even if the books don't balance.

Mr. Beatty offers other rules for a more pleasant approach to the budgeting process. Disliking the word "savings" he substitutes a "reward" fund, into which at least 15 per cent of the income should go. As you become more efficient in regulating your expenditures the percentage may be raised. Into this reward fund each month go funds to buy such things as college educations for the children, enough money on which to retire at 65, vacation money, or money for the new car.

Have a fund for everything you reasonably can expect to acquire, Mr. Beatty urges. You won't get them all, but hoping is fun, and you'll be surprised to see how many you do get when each week or month you put away a little money, if only 25 cents, to spend for these luxuries.

Features Offer a Quick Way to Read Character

Expert Stresses Need for a Practical Means of Analyzing Fellow Men.

Articles by Mr. Westerberg on Physiognomy are to be found daily in the Chicago Tribune.

By Hugo Westerberg.

A STUDENT of psychology asks the relationship between physiognomy and the orthodox science that is being taught in college course. He tells me that these courses contain nothing of character reading from physical signs, but on the contrary refer to such methods as pseudo-science. These methods have been exposed and their fallacies revealed by investigators time and time again, he says.

GRETA GARBO.

Before answering the question I wish to state that I agree fully with the opinion academic psychologists have of the systems they have investigated. The best criticism I have seen of the matter is made in a book by Knight Dunlap, professor of experimental psychology in Johns Hopkins university, who condemns character analysis. However, he follows it up by saying:

"Nevertheless, the incompetence of existing systems does not dispose of the question whether there might not be a valid system evolved. In spite of the futile efforts of various would-be flyers, the airplane was invented."

This should give encouragement to all who are interested in the study of human nature from facial features. We need for practical use in daily life a way of understanding the fundamental desires, intellectual and emotional tendencies of our fellow men. We must have character reading at sight as a method of immediately detecting individual differences in this respect.

Physiognomy is not intended to take the place of usual psychological methods, but to cover a situation where these are inapplicable by the ordinary man. Mental tests, aptitude tests, trade tests, personality tests are intricate processes and require time and equipment and money available only to employers.

Employers, as a rule, derive a direct profit from a scientific selection of workers, but the benefit to the workers is not so clearly seen. Their first need is to be able to get along with their fellow men. Physiognomy answers this problem and has the advantage that any person can test it in his own sphere of activities without doing harm to himself or to others. Its validity and the limitations of its usefulness can also be ascertained in a strictly sicentific manner by application of experimental procedure and principles of statistics.

Having then the new facts about individual characteristics which are disclosed by a physiognomical observation, the knowledge of mental processes which other branches of psychology have obtained will be more complete and more readily useful.

The young prisoner before the court was accused of murder. Circumstancial evidence only was presented but the jury found him guilty. He had expressed hatred against the victim, his stepfather, and on several occasions had said to his friends that he was "going to kill him." He now confessed the killing but claimed self-defense.

The stepfather had been notoriously cruel to his family and this, in the minds of the jurors, established a motive which in connection with the threats was, to them, proof of guilt. The reasoning was incomplete because it did not take into consideration individual differences. A weak person relieves his antagonistic feelings in words while the strong character needs physical action to be able to regain his balance.

The light eyebrows and slender jaws of the prisoner should have suggested a more circumspect way of evening up the score. He had no chance, however. Members of the jury who had these features themselves would have disliked him personally; those of them who were opposite in features would have thought violence a natural way to revenge an ill treatment.

The well balanced facial features of Greta Garbo give her the harmonious look that only her inscrutable, half-closed eyes contradict. Behind them lie awake the emotional forces that at will may project individual expressions of highly organized human traits.

The full red parts of the lips give an easy outlet for feelings intensified by an imaginative mind as denoted by her light eyebrows and refined by her lucidly sane habits of thought shown by a high and straight forehead. The lower part of the nose is just broad enough to signify an interest in human values, and the solid structure of the jaw a strength to form them to suit her purpose.

Electric Range Is Equipped with Smokeless Broiler

BROILING becomes a practically smokeless process with the efficient setup which one of the new electric ranges flaunts. The broiler itself is made of a rack and a deep broiler pan [excellent for broiling meat over a layer of vegetables]. The latter pan is so constructed that the fat, which drips down from the meat and flavors the vegetables, then escapes through a funnellike arrangement into a separate pan underneath. The unit means not only the pleasure of a smokeless kitchen, but, because several foods may be thus heated while the meat is broiling, it's to be recommended as an economy measure.

A Friend in Need . . . . By Sally Joy Brown

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you! If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

QUICK sympathy so often is exhibited by readers in their response to requests printed in this column that I know that most people are far from indifferent to suffering of any kind, that any apparent apathy is simply a result of lack of contact. Poverty seeks its own level, and only those who have actual knowledge of life in the poorer districts fully realize how much want and suffering exist.

Mr. H. S. is a needy, elderly man. He is hard of hearing and now has a bronchial condition which makes it necessary that he be warmly outfitted for winter. Heavy underwear, an overcoat size 36, and a pair of shoes size 7½ will keep him comfortable and prevent serious illness.

From Mrs. E. B. on the west side: "I am a widow with four children, the youngest 4 weeks old, born 7 months after the death of my husband. I am now on relief, but find it difficult to obtain clothing. I intend to try to get some work, but I haven't a heavy coat and my health will not permit my going out in my light spring coat. I would be grateful for a coat, size 16 or 18, and the youngsters wear size 8 and 3 in boys' clothing and size 5 in girls'."

Have you some discarded clothing which will help this mother to care for her youngsters?

"Dear Miss Brown: My husband, after being out of work for four years, finally has obtained work, but earns less than $15 per week. We appreciate it, and would rather do anything than be on direct relief, but are behind in our rent. We cook on a kerosene stove and have one kerosene lamp. We are expecting a new addition to our family next month and, with a hospital bill ahead of us, we're unable to buy anything for the new baby. Our small daughter now is 3 years old. Anything for a new baby will be sincerely appreciated.

"MRS. M. H."

From a local tuberculosis sanitarium: "Dear Miss Brown: Have any of your column friends a pair of shoes, size 8 C, and a dress, size 20, which may have been white elephants to date? I am a patient in a sanitarium, much in need of these articles, but unable to purchase them. Within a few weeks I expect to be released and to seek work, but cannot do so unless I have suitable clothing. I assure you I shall be most grateful for your help. H. C."

At the same time Miss C. wrote in we received an appeal from another young girl in a suburban sanitarium. She has spent six of her 22 years fighting the disease and now is able to be up and around, and is allowed to go out of doors. She needs a winter coat, size 38. Her initials are H. S., and we will be glad to supply her name and address to any reader able to supply apparel for her.

"Dear Miss Brown: I am an elderly woman confined to the house and can do nothing but knit to pass the time. I thought, perhaps, you could procure for me some castoff home knit dresses that I might ravel out and reknit into caps, mittens, etc. You see, I have five grandchildren, and it is hard to keep them all warmly clad. MRS. W. M."

Mrs. M. lives in Indiana.

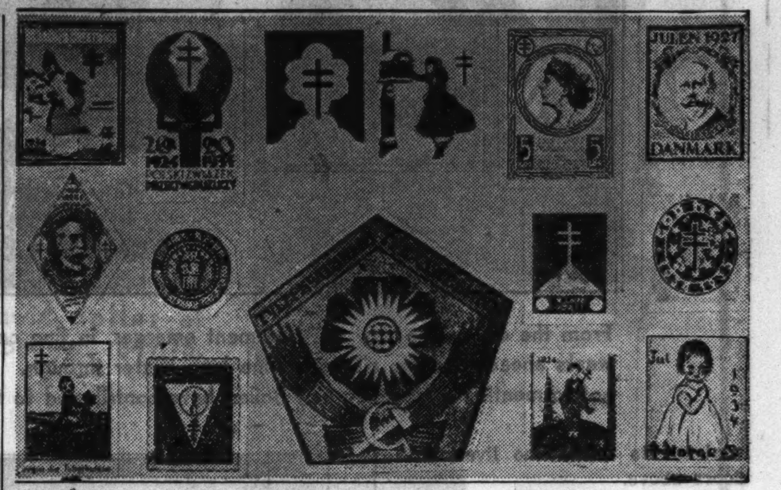
E. R. writes from a sanitarium in Wisconsin, requesting dictionaries for herself and a fellow patient. They both are studying while attempting to regain strength and are unable to obtain these valuable aids. If you have an extra dictionary, both patients are willing to pay postage.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

A new booklet of the series on United States stamps is now ready for distribution. It is No. 15 and is entitled "Airmail Stamps, 1918-1927." This booklet describes the stamps issued during the period mentioned, giving data on plate numbers, number of stamps issued, with the reasons for each succeeding value. It is priced at 5c by mail or 3c at the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. If questions are asked, please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

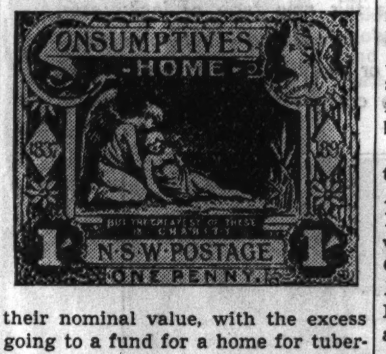


In the group of seals shown herewith are the following, starting at the upper left hand corner and reading from left to right along the three rows: Corea, Poland, United States (2), Rumania, Denmark, Brazil, Japan (2), Sweden, Switzerland, Japan, Russia, Japan and Norway. On the Danish seal is shown the portrait of Einar Holboell.

AS the Christmas season approaches each year, the Stamp Collector feels that it is a privilege to be allowed to mention the little labels which the National Tuberculosis association issues to finance its work. Many stamp collectors have a sideline collection of seals, and since these are now listed in the specialized catalog of United States stamps, a greater interest will be in evidence, for collectors are not different from other people and follow printed lists to a great measure in determining what is collectible and what is not.

Almost 40 years have passed since stamps were first used to raise money for anti-tuberculosis purposes. In 1897 New South Wales issued stamps in connection with the 60th anniversary of the accession of Queen Victoria to the throne of Great Britain.

This was the so-called Diamond Jubilee year, and the stamps of this colony were made to serve a double purpose by selling them at 12 times their nominal value, with the excess going to a fund for a home for tuberculosis patients. The two values of this set have the postal value given in pence and the selling price in shillings, as will be seen in the illustration.



Seven years later, in 1904, Einar Holboell, of the Danish postoffice, conceived the idea of raising funds for anti-tuberculosis work by the sale of the charity labels which we call Christmas seals. Since its first inception the idea has met with success wherever tried and in the thirty years has spread throughout the civilized nations of the globe. More than forty countries have issued Christmas seals which were sold wholly or partially for this work.

Many of them are similar to the United States seals and are sold through national societies. Others are semi-postal and are handled exclusively by postoffices. These latter have a dual purpose, a part of the cost going to the postoffice for carrying the mail to which the stamp is affixed with the remainder set aside for the charitable purpose.

Denmark and its neighbor, Sweden, have annualy sold seals since 1904, Norway joined in 1906, Netherlands issued semi-postal stamps that year, and the United States had a restricted sale of seals in 1907. In this same year the Danish West Indies, now the Virgin Islands of the United States, started sales which have continued to the present time, although, of course, the United States seal was placed on sale there when the islands were purchased. Seals have been sold regularly in Canada since 1908, and interruptedly in Finland and Italy beginning in the same year. Switzerland brought out her first semi-postal stamp in 1913, and except for the following year, has added a new and beautiful issue each year.

Other countries which have since taken up the idea include Argentina, Australia and Austria; Belgium and Brazil, Chile, Cuba and Czechoslovakia, Danzig and Estonia; France, Germany and Great Britain, Iceland, Ireland, Japan and Korea, Latvia, Poland, Portugal and South Africa, and Surinam and Syria.

Various societies handle the sales in the different countries, Japan being unique in supporting three distinct groups. It has been said that there is no complete collection of seals, but it is never too late to start, especially when it will assist so worthy a cause.

Cachet Notices.

New Basement Gadgets Work Automatically

Incinerator and Firedoor No Longer Need Supervision of Householder.

To cut your fuel bill a bit, send for a booklet by Louise Bargelt, "Keeping Warm—for Less Mpney." It is 3 cents at Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower; 5 cents by mail.

By Louise Bargelt.

IT isn't the sole aim of basement modernization to make cellars beautiful, airy, healthy places in which to live. Quite as important an aim of basement renovation is to give the nether region equipment maximum efficiency, that it can contribute maximum comfort and convenience to those who live on the floors above.

The year 1935, which is shortly to pass on, has given us much in the way of new equipment and improved equipment. It also has offered us both new and improved equipment at lower prices than have prevailed in previous years.

As an example, the incinerator in the basement wall, shown here, is a built-in type which is as simple to install in an existing home as in a new one. It operates on a new principle, that of an automatically controled draft, and even though a house has but one chimney this incinerator may be built at its base. Again it can be operated from out of doors, leaving the basement free from ash. Because of its greatly simplified design it costs only half as much as many of the well known chimney fed incinerators and can adapt itself thereby to the moderate sized budget.

Flap Dampers Controled by Air in Chimney.

The large firedoor shown in the photograph has air ports above and below it. These air ports are hung with ordinary flap dampers, automatically controled by the air in the chimney. When the burning reaches its peak the dampers close and prevent fly ash from going up the chimney. As the fire diminishes and more air is needed for complete combustion the dampers open. Hence no personal attention is required to tend the drafts.

In place of grates, solid brick is used, and there is a little fireproof glass window through which one can look and see how the fire is burning.

When ashes, cans, and bottles must be removed a shovel easily can be inserted through the large firedoor, which is placed at a convenient height. The receiving door of this incinerator is in the kitchen. It is built of enamel with chromium fittings, its beveled edge fitting flush against the wall. In this design it can fit into any kitchen without detracting from the beauty of decorations and equipment.

Air Conditioning Units Increase in Efficiency.

Another development of 1935 is the increased efficiency and power of the air conditioning units in cleaning and circulating, heating and cooling, humidifying and dehumidifying the air of a house. Besides these complete air conditioners, other units have appeared which perform one or more of the tasks of air conditioning. And these units often can be installed as supplementary equipment to function with the existing heater in the basement.

One of the basement pictures today shows a new type of conditioner unit, placed close to the rafters of the basement. It is designed so that it can be hooked in at any point on the supply line of a radiator heating system. It falls definitly into the moderate cost class. Its price is under a hundred dollars, and, although it is scarcely any larger than a suitcase, it can filter, circulate, and humidify the air in the average six room house.

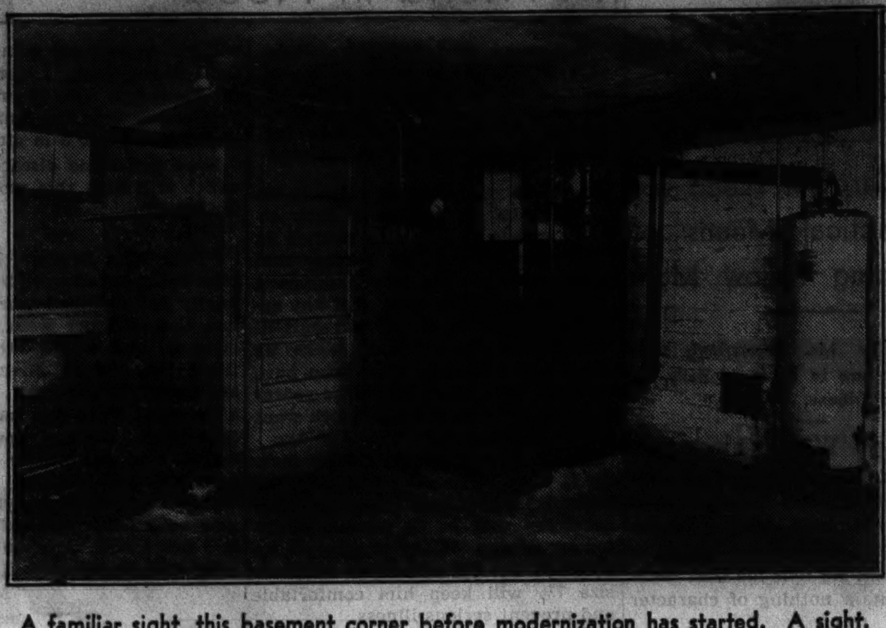
Humidity of Home May Determine Residents' Health.

This is decidedly the time of year when we should give attention to the humidity in our homes—or the lack of it, if we find that our indoor air is too dry. Humidifying equipment need not be elaborate, but it should be adequate to supply a sufficient volume of air. If we don't have this humidity we often suffer from various ailments—colds, coughs, and various nose and throat troubles. Furniture can suffer, too, and woodwork, floors, and even plants. We see the results of too dry air in warped table tops, peeling woods, cracking woodwork, and chair legs.

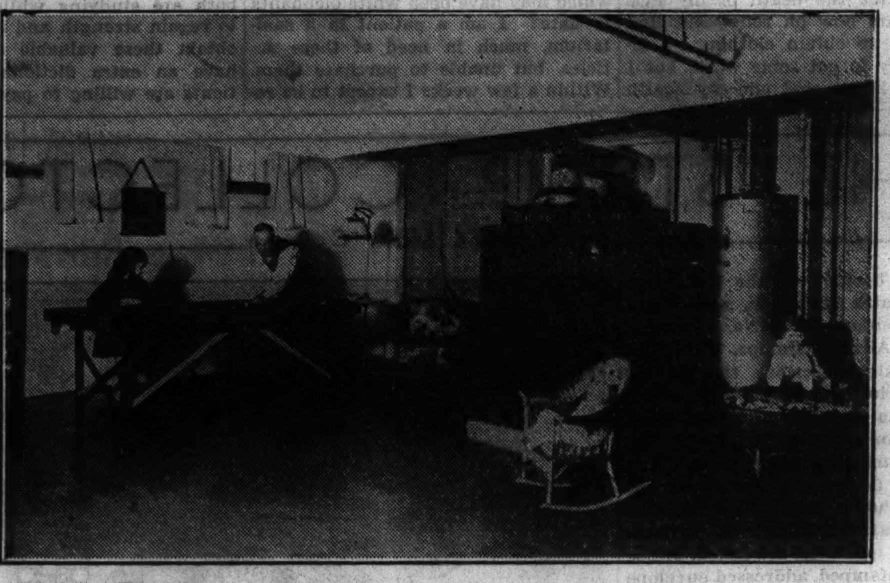
The market teems with fine air conditioning equipment. It also teems with humidifying equipment for winter use alone.

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Wednesday at 2:15 p. m.

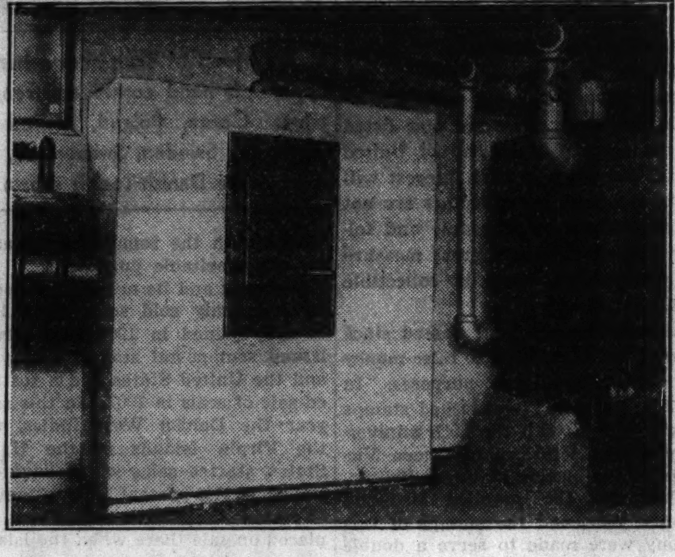
WASTE SPACE LIQUIDATED



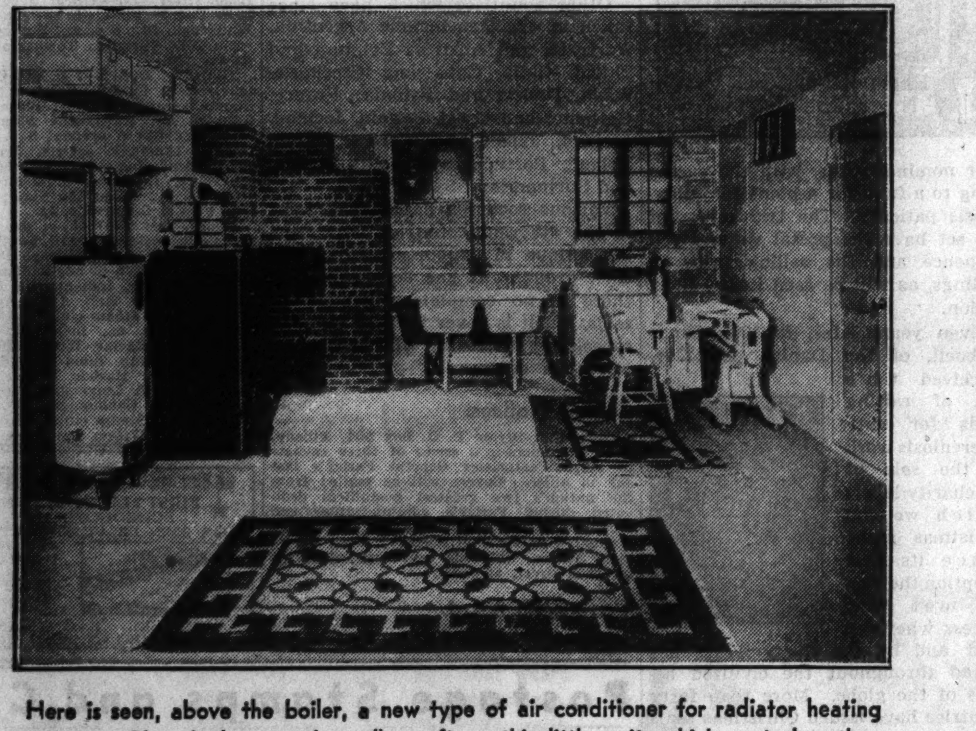
A familiar sight, this basement corner before modernization has started. A sight, however, which is growing less and less frequent as we all grow cellar conscious and eager to make every cubic inch of the house count. Basements are looking up!



From the old to the new this basement emerges, in fine condition for the holiday weeks ahead, and for all weeks, the long winter through. Wall board and paint, not to mention a gleaming new boiler, have contributed to the cellar's renovization.



The comfort of a good built-in incinerator is common knowledge. But less well known is this new type of incinerator, which operates on principle of automatically controled draft and can be installed in new or old homes with equal ease. Simplified design has cut the cost of this model materially.



Here is seen, above the boiler, a new type of air conditioner for radiator heating systems. Placed close to the cellar rafters, this little unit, which costs less than one hundred dollars, will work hard for you all winter, filtering, humidifying, and circulating your indoor air.

Decoration Queries

Query: "I am puzzled about china. Will you tell me the difference between earthenware and porcelain or china? Isn't it true that some of the most expensive Wedgwood is earthenware?—L. K."

Answer: Experts can tell the difference between earthenware and porcelain by their sense of touch. But hold an earthenware plate to the light. You can't see through it. Porcelain, however, is translucent. Because it is a much finer, harder substance you can break an earthenware plate with it. The best china will not readily chip nor break. Earthenware, on the other hand, is bound to chip and to age with time. So, for a good investment, buy porcelain.

Yes, some of the loveliest Wedgwood is earthenware.

Liberal Use of Paint Will Freshen House

A Few Simple Rules Guide the Amateur in Its Judicious Application.

THE vogue for colors, soft colors, and bright colors, continues gayly its forward march, and pre-holiday attentions to the home usually include some paint-up work. Corners lose their drabness and sundry articles of furniture and trim, as well as walls and floors, take on a midwinter freshness and charm.

● It is sometimes a problem to paint light colors over dark ones. If a wood has a dark stain, a first coat or two of shellac or aluminum paint will keep the stain from bleeding through. Another method of insuring complete coverage to the old dark surface is to apply a first coat slightly colored.

● There may be old fashioned wooden chairs around the house, in kitchen or attic. These often can be carefully cleaned and painted and given a stenciled back, to provide adornment in some den or recreation room.

● If the clothes closets are being renovated a bit, don't forget the clothes hangers. The plainest wooden hangers can be brightened by painting them to harmonize with the scheme of the closet. One smart idea is to lacker all the hangers in glossy black.

● If the bricks around the fireplace have become smudged and have lost their attractiveness, or if they are out of tune with the room's decorations, casein or cold water paint can be employed to change their face. Old time fireplaces often had their brickwork painted white.

● In any room where the walls are subject to heavy wear and a washable surface is desired these walls do not necessarily have to be given a high gloss. They can be covered with a "flat wall paint." This means that their finish is lusterless and flat and can be easily washed.

● To make radiators and steam pipes less conspicuous in a room, paint them the same color as the walls or as the wood trim. If you have bare looking pipes near the ceiling, paint them the same hue as the cornice.

● To cover up curtain rods, call on a good handy man or carpenter and have him make some cornices out of wall board. Six inches is an average width, though this dimension depends somewhat on the size of the window. The lower edge can be straight and the ends cut from one inch thick pine. These ends will hold out the cornice board far enough to allow the curtain to move freely on the rod. The cornice is usually painted the same shade as the woodwork of a room, though this is a matter for personal taste.

● A rusty looking mail box doesn't add to the beauty of an entrance. A good coat of paint will freshen it up and protect it from the attacks of harsh winter weather. If there is any rust anywhere on the metal, be sure to remove all trace of this corrosion with sandpaper before starting to paint. This is vital in repainting any metal. Not only is it true that paint won't adhere well to a rusty surface, but if the rust is not removed it will continue its destructive work under the new coat of paint!

● The use of sealers in connection with a painting job has insured many a decorator's success. These sealers are a coating prepared to fill the pores of unduly absorbent surfaces in preparation for painting. Not all surfaces need them. An expert who sells paints can advise whether or not a sealer is necessary in the particular piece of work contemplated. This preparation prevents absorption of oil from paint and often reduces the number of coats necessary. It also insures a more uniform and stronger film.

Dinette Sets Utilize Narrow Space Neatly

Long, Plain Tables Replaced by Graceful Suites in a Wide Range of Designs.

"Making the Most of the Dinette," a booklet by Edith Weigle, tells how to furnish this small room so as to make it seem more spacious and attractive. Price 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Edith Weigle.

A FEW years ago it was a difficult matter to find furniture for the dinette or the small dining room. Often the only table that seemed halfway suitable was the long, narrow refectory type, and even that was sometimes too large, filling up the room and giving it a crowded appearance.

Nowadays, however, all you have to do is to go into any good furniture or department store and make your choice from numbers of different groupings designed especially for use in the dinette. They are scaled down to fit a narrow area, they are well styled and attractive to look at, and they come in almost any woods you can mention—mahogany, walnut, maple, birch, and in painted finishes.

Choose Card Table Set If Dinette Is to Be Temporary.

If you expect to have a regular size dining room some day you might select one of the ultrasmart permanent card table sets of small, square table with or without a lether top and four accompanying chairs, nicely upholstered. It can serve in the dinette now, as dining table, and later as a breakfast group in the regular dining room, or as a card table ensemble in your living room.

Or you'll find this same size table in an extension model, to seat six people when opened. Or you may choose one of those charming little drop leaf styles. We can heartily recommend them, for they will be useful as long as you live and wherever that may be. No matter what size the house, a drop leaf table can be used over and over again. The gate-legged table has been out of the style picture for some years. The butterfly and drop leaf types have taken its place.

Straight Draperies Increase Apparent Size of Room.

In choosing chairs for the dinette remember that the less clumsy and bulky they are the better for this purpose. We would avoid buying host chairs [armchairs] until they are to be used in a regular size room. Ideal for the dinette are the graceful and sturdy Duncan Phyfe or Chinese Chippendale or Sheraton chairs. Maple ones, too, may now be had in fairly delicate style, although this wood inevitably makes the form heavier.

In window treatment, the simpler draperies are the best. Long, straight lines add height and apparent space to a room, so do not tie back your draperies. Let them hang in full folds to within an inch of the floor. And, instead of curtains, why not try one of those good looking, inexpensive wooden slat shades that look so much like Venetian blinds, but that are priced a good deal lower? They come in white or colors.

Boards for Hot Dishes Accompany Maple Table.

The picture today is a good example of the simple window treatment for the dinette, and here these new shades are used.

The furniture is maple, the little table placed in front of the window. On it are two interesting services for hot dishes consisting of two smooth, pretty boards in which are depressions of the exact size for holding individual casseroles. Thus you can bring hot onion soup, or baked beans, or any similar things, direct from the stove to the table without any danger of harming the finish of the latter.

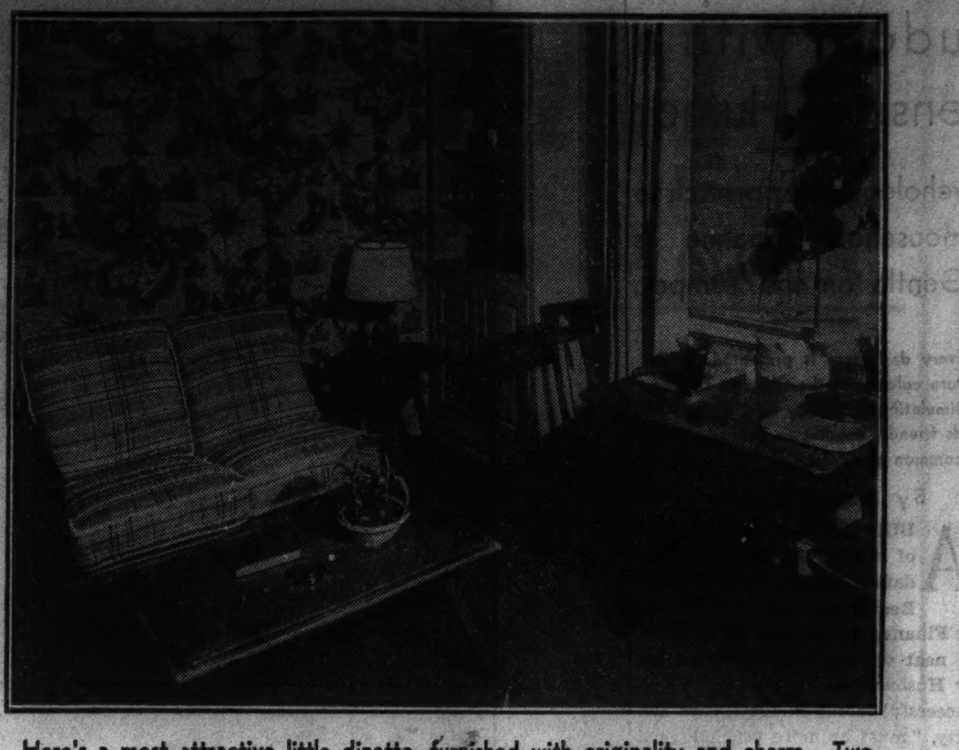
Couch an Interesting Addition to Ensemble.

This little room, photographed in the budget house on the furniture floor of a Chicago store, is also equipped with a smart two-seated couch, gayly upholstered in a bright yellow novelty cotton fabric. The wall behind it is papered in a fascinating map pattern in soft tones of gray, green, and orange. This paper also covers the opposite wall, not seen in the picture. But the other two sides of this room are done in solid color, plain gray.

A linoleum floor displays a clever star compass motif inlaid in the center of the room. Built-in shelves and cabinets flank the wide window.

All the articles seen in the illustration may be bought in this Chicago store.

MAPS FOR MURALS



Here's a most attractive little dinette, furnished with originality and charm. Two of the walls are papered in a map design; the other two are plain, light gray. The furniture is maple, scaled to use in a small room such as this. Photographed in the budget house on the furniture floor of a Chicago department store.

Porcelains of World Fame in Lamp Bases

Wedgwood, Spode, and Lenox Freely Used in Lighting Accessories.

"Furnishing Your Home on a Modest Budget," a new booklet by Claire Winslow, tells how to have attractive rooms without running up large bills. It is full of helpful suggestions. Price 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Claire Winslow.

IT'S the first day of the Christmas month. Why not get a good start on your shopping? A handsome lamp makes a gift that will be appreciated for long weeks to come. The stores at this season are filled with beautiful models and prices are of such wide range that all budgets are included.

Some of the most distinctive lamps have bases of porcelain bearing the stamp of famous factories in this country and Europe. It is possible, for instance, to choose from that exquisite, creamy white ware of Wedgwood with the delicate, hand embossed designs, or from the pastel tones of Lenox, or the artistic blended colors of Spode.

Shades are, for the most part, textured. Handsome rough silks and moires and pongeelike fabrics are smart. Eggshell tones and pale beige predominate. Some shades in parchment are hand painted in patterns that repeat those found in the base of the lamp. Thus, a charming Dresden floral motif in rose tones and green is seen in the vase which forms the base of one model, and again in the highly decorative shade.

One of the photographs today shows an extremely handsome vase of Lowestoft decoration, held in an antique gold frame and forming the base of an unusual lamp. The vase is square and is ten inches high. The shade of eggshell taffeta stretched tightly over the wire frame is trimmed with a picot edged ribbon to harmonize. Under the crystal ball finial are two lights.

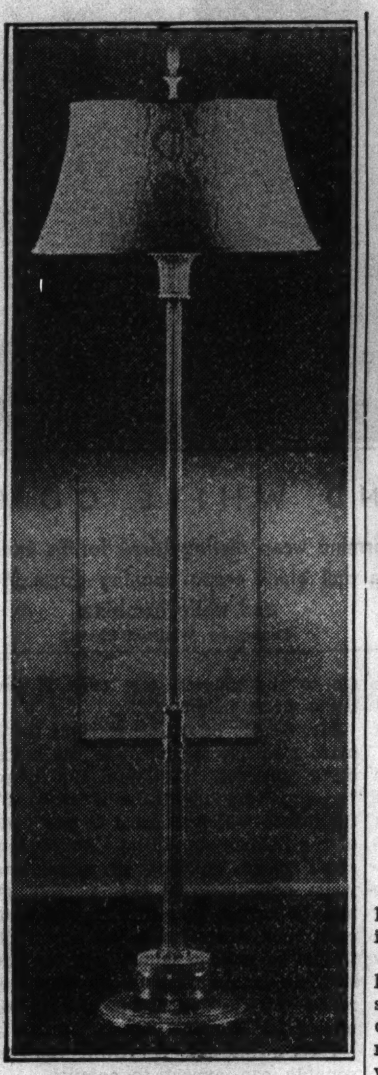
Another lamp made by the same Chicago firm is quite modern in effect. Above a reeded metal column are three crystal plumes that curve outward gracefully and that catch the glow of the two electric bulbs. At the base of this column is a piece of round, clear crystal, harmonizing with the plumes. A round finial of this same glass tops a handsome shade, eggshell in tint and made decorative by ever so many little applied bands of ivory scalloped edge ribbon. The height of this lamp is twenty-one inches to the tip of the finial.

A floor lamp that follows the rules laid down by the "better light, better sight" campaign also makes a splendid Christmas gift. One we have in mind, sold at the same Chicago store where the table models pictured are available, is equipped with a ten inch glass reflector holding either the 50 to 150 or the 100 to 300 watt bulbs and the volume of light can be increased or decreased by turning a button. This unit is hidden by the good looking nineteen inch shade of rich, sand tinted brocade.

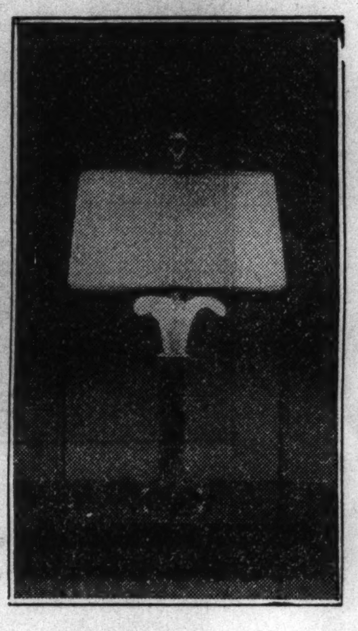
Each of the three lamps described today is in the lamp department of a Chicago store as this article is written.

This handsome table lamp has an unusually lovely Lowestoft vase as its base. It would make a splendid Christmas gift for a discriminating person. Manufactured and sold in Chicago.

CHARMING GIFTS



This beautiful floor lamp is constructed scientifically for better vision. It throws the light either up or down.



In the modern spirit, this lamp has a reeded metal base topped by three crystal plumes which catch the light and seem to glow. The shade is decorated with vertical bands of scalloped ribbon, hand applied. This lamp is made and sold in Chicago.

Harsh Scouring Powders Often Ruin Lavatories and Tubs

TOO much caution cannot be expended on our plumbing fixtures, if we would keep them in a fresh and beautiful state for a long period of time.

Sinks, lavatories, and tubs all have gleaming satiny surfaces, but these surfaces were not designed and manufactured for harsh, abrasive scouring powders. A little dirt left from vegetables in the sink can scratch it, if it should be accidentally rubbed in, and sand and grit in the bathtub can produce the same effect. No matter how hard a material is, if something which is harder is crushed against it, dire results ensue.

A small bristle brush and some mild soap suds are the best cleaning treatment we can give our plumbing fixtures. The water can be as hot as we like, but the soap should not be harsh. If we feel that we must use a cleaning compound, it is imperative to select a mild one. And if we want to dissolve grease, kerosene can always be called in. A cloth dampened with kerosene will speed up any number of cleaning tasks. Follow it with plenty of steaming hot water to rout the odors.

Soap and water are usually all that is necessary to clean our modern chromium plated faucets and valves. If we want to polish up our nickel fixtures we can select a good, well recommended metal polish. But here again, we want a mild polish, not a harsh one, or we will find that we are removing the plating along with the tarnish.

A good quality cleaner should be selected for drains and closet bowls. Don't buy a compound just because it is inexpensive. Cheap products sometimes contain materials which are not easy on the enamel.

ONLY THE FOOLISH DISDAIN THRIFT

Thrift is a comfortable, homey, solid virtue. It has no appeal for those swayed by the tinsel glitter of extravagance.

In the long run thrift amasses more satisfaction than extravagance.

If you do not disdain the wisdom of thrifty buying you will find it to your advantage to shop Tribune want ads.

Do You Suffer from

PSORIASIS

then learn about

SIROIL

the Guaranteed Relief

This relief has accomplished wonders for men, women and children who have been chronic sufferers from psoriasis. Siroil applied externally to the affected area causes the scales to disappear, the red blotches to fade out and the skin to resume its normal texture. For many years the medical profession has been baffled by psoriasis. Therefore when Siroil was first introduced physicians were naturally skeptical, but they were fair-minded enough to give it a trial and they have seen what it accomplishes. Consequently many doctors recommend Siroil today to their psoriasis patients.

SOLD ON A MONEY BACK GUARANTEE BASIS

Siroil backs with a guarantee the claim that if you do not note marked improvement within two weeks—and you are the sole judge—your money will be refunded. Could anything be fairer than this?

The Colleen Moore Doll House

is said to be the most beautiful miniature castle in the world. In seeing the Doll House those interested in philanthropic work will not only have the pleasure of helping needy children, but they will also, for a very modest sum, have the opportunity of viewing this $435,000 work of art. The admission fee is 20c for adults and 10c for children under ten years of age, who may see the Doll House as often as they wish while they are in the Doll House enclosure. It may be seen at any time between 8:30 A. M. and 6:30 P. M., although regular store hours are from 9:00 A. M. to 6 P. M. Not more than thirty minutes will be required, provided all the enclosures are not in use—in which case thirty to forty-five minutes . . . surely a limited time in which to wait for an opportunity to view the most beautiful work of its kind, and at the same time benefit crippled and destitute children.

Aviation Resurrects Pacific Islands

By WAYNE THOMIS

INSULAR possessions of the United States in the Pacific ocean are designated in red letters in the map above. Scattered sandy atolls, barren rocks, or volcano peaks, these tiny dots of land seem unimportant, remote from the United States and the affairs of its people.

The artist, with a different conception, has linked these islands, most of which hitherto have been held worthless, and more than half forgotten, into a scheme of aerial trafic routes. At once their importance to the future of American commerce in Asia and the antipodes becomes apparent. It also is evident that they are especially valuable as military outposts if defense of our Pacific coast line becomes necessary.

The map itself, a sinusoidal equal-area projection, provides a clear conception of the vastnesses of Pacific Oceania. Although somewhat distorted in that latitudinal designations have been made straight lines parallel to the equator, the map portrays as accurately as is possible on a flat surface the geographical factors which enter into the renewed American struggle for far-eastern markets.

Measured in time the 8,000 miles to China is a 28-day journey by steamships. The 5,000 miles to Japan cost 17 days by steamship. To Brisbane, Australia, 6,500 miles from United States Pacific ports, the voyage ranges from 22 to 25 days. New Zealand, 500 miles farther, cannot be reached in fewer than 28 days. No wonder the major ocean trafic on the Pacific has been by pleasure cruisers or tourist ships.

While heavy commodity cargoes must always travel by steamship, and thus probably at the speeds already mentioned, opening of the ocean airways increases cruising speeds to 150 miles an hour for passenger, mail, and valuable express cargoes.

Appraisal of Katharine Cornell's "Romeo and Juliet"

Treatment of Play as Whole Best in Years

Triumph for Star as an Actress and Producer of Classic Tragedy.

By Charles Collins.

KATHARINE CORNELL'S production of "Romeo and Juliet," now beginning the second and final week of its engagement at the Grand Opera house, establishes a maximum in my experience as a Shakespearean playgoer on the following points:

1. Suggestion of adolescence on the part of Juliet, according to the terms of the story—a psychological as well as physical youthfulness, completely in the spirit of the tragedy. This quality of graceful, emotional immaturity also carries over into the rôle of Romeo.

2. Full and correct development of the humorous touches of character according to Shakespeare's plan, especially in the rôles of Mercutio and the Nurse.

3. Steady and rapid movement of the action in general, from scene to scene, closely approximating the technique of the Elizabethan stage in the treatment of an episodic structure.

4. Arrangement of the numerous scenes into two well balanced and contrasting acts.

5. Stirring melodrama of the sword-fighting scenes, in which the excitement is intense and the fencing apparently in bloodthirsty earnest.

Best Performance in Thirty Years.

The performance dips below the level of other notable productions in my memory in certain aspects, as for example:

1. Poetic value of the elocution in general.

2. Expression of high, voluptuous passion between Juliet and Romeo in the love passages.

3. General Italianate atmosphere of the production in the hot-blooded mood of the Renaissance.

My five "bests" greatly outweigh my three "not-so-goods" in determining my final opinion. In fact, I suspect that I have tossed the latter into the discussion merely to curb my own exuberance of statement. I feel that this is the best "Romeo and Juliet" of my thirty-odd years as an adult theatergoer—best in casting, acting, stage direction, and scholarship. It is a signal triumph for Miss Cornell, not only as an actress in a difficult rôle but also as a producer of classic drama, in which this is her first venture.

Juliets and Romeos of the Past.

For the benefit of the unhappy high school students whose teachers have a maddening habit of asking for lists of famous players who have acted the great Shakespearean rôles I will present some statistics on "Romeo and Juliet" in the American theater. This, I hope, will prevent the harassed youngsters and their worried parents from telephoning me on the subject.

In recent years: Eva Le Gallienne [can't remember her Romeo]; Jane Cowl and Rollo Peters; Ethel Barrymore and McKay Morris; Walter Hampden and Mary Moore.

The last generation: Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern; Maude Adams and William Faversham; Eleanor Robson and Kyrle Bellew; Cecilia Loftis and Faversham.

In the 1880s and 1890s: Viola Allen and Alexander Salvini; Mrs. James Brown Potter and Kyrle Bellew; Mina Gale and Lawrence Barrett; Odette Tyler and R. D. Maclean; Fanny Gillette and Robert Mantell; Mme. Modjeska and Maurice Barrymore; Margaret Mather and Frederick Paulding [later Otis Skinner].

When Women Played Male Roles.

In the 1860s and 1870s: Mary Anderson, with various Romeos, including William Terris and Forbes Robertson; Mme. Modjeska and W. F. Burroughs [later Frank Clements]; Edwin Booth and Mary McVicker; Mrs. D. P. Bowers and Charlotte Cushman [a female Romeo]; Sarah Jewett and George Rignold.

The first American performance was given on Jan. 28, 1754, in New York—Mr. Rigney as Romeo, Mrs. Lewis Hallam as Juliet. In 1762 Lewis Hallam played Romeo to his mother's Juliet.

It is interesting to note that many women have played the rôle of Romeo. The most famous was Charlotte Cushman, who in 1847 gave performances in London with her sister Susan as Juliet. Other female Romeos of the American stage were Mrs. Barry, 1827; Mrs. Shaw, 1840; Mrs. Wallack, 1842; Clara Ellis, 1848; Mrs. John Drew Sr., 1847; Fanny Wallack, 1851, and Mme. Ponisi, 1857.

3 GUESSES NOT NEEDED

If you want three guesses you can have 'em! But, lives there a fan who doesn't recognize instanter a picture of Ginger Rogers when it appears? Miss Rogers is making life interesting for George Brent in "In Person"—the Palace's new screen attraction.

Record Breaker

"THREE MEN ON A HORSE" will remain at the Harris theater until Saturday night, Dec. 14. Alex Yokel has granted his company a week's vacation before it opens at the American theater, St. Louis. The Harris theater announces the opening of "Personal Appearance," another successful Broadway comedy, on Dec. 21.

Chicago Gets B'way Hits as Holiday Bills

"PERSONAL APPEARANCE," a comedy hit of the past year in New York, will open a Chicago engagement in the Harris theater on Saturday evening, Dec. 21. The leading rôle will be played by Gladys George.

The story of the play deals with a slightly middle aged motion picture star who, while making a personal appearance tour around the country, becomes enamored with a handsome young man, much to the chagrin of her press agent. The latter, proving his worth as an exploiter of ideas, "frames" the little lady and breaks up her romance. Manager Brock Pemberton will present the New York cast intact for the Chicago engagement.

"Anything Goes" will come to the Grand Opera house on Sunday evening, Dec. 22, with William Gaxton and Victor Moore in the leading rôles. The songs by Cole Porter contributed to the immediate success of this show when it opened more than a year ago on Broadway.

The major song hits are "You're the Top," "Anything Goes," "I Get a Kick Out of You," and "Blow, Gabriel, Blow." They have been sung and played over the radio, by dance orchestras and cabaret singers for the last year. "Anything Goes" will be the first Cole Porter show to be seen in Chicago since "The Gay Divorcée." He is represented at present on Broadway by "Jubilee."

Porter's collaborators on "Anything Goes" were Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay, who adapted the book from a story by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse.

Madriguera in Terrace Room; Cabaret Shows

Veloz and Yolanda in Last Month of Run at Empire Room; Will End Jan. 9.

ENRIC MADRIGUERA and his NBC band continue in the redecorated Terrace room of the Hotel Morrison. The floor show contains Rosalean and Seville, dance duo; Martha Raye, singer, formerly with Jimmy Durante at the Casino de Paree in New York; the King's Jesters, formerly with Paul Whiteman, in a new series of songs; Gwynne, a magician, and Lyda Sue, acrobatic dancer. Rudy Bale is master of ceremonies. Miss Sue, recently added to the program in place of Toyo Sabe, was previously at the Cocoanut Grove, Los Angeles; the Bal Tabarin, Hollywood, and at the New Yorker hotel, New York.

● The new Holiday Revue, now in the Empire room of the Palmer house, is the last supporting cast to surround Veloz and Yolanda during their record breaking engagement in Chicago. They will leave the Empire room after their performance of Thursday evening, Jan. 9. They will not return to Chicago until some time late in 1938—two years hence. The auxiliary entertainers are headed by Paul Gerrits, who is making his American bow. He does tricks on roller skates. Gali-Gali, Asiatic magician, returns with new tricks. Forrest Yarnell, singer from Broadway, and Johnny Tio, a trained parrot, complete the bill. The Abbott dancers will wear new costumes in new numbers.

● Rosemary Dering, ballerina, leads the floor show in the Marine dining room of the Edgewater beach hotel. An addition to the show last night was the dance team of Harry A. White and Alice Manning. Miss Dering and the Byrons will continue until Dec. 14, when Sonya and Romero, comedy and novelty dancers, and the Skatomaniacs will start a two weeks' engagement. Herbie Kay and his orchestra are booked until New Year's eve.

● Joe Sanders, who appears with his orchestra at the Blackhawk, spends his entire time away from his duties writing songs. His latest contributions to the portfolio of American dance music include "I'll Never Forget I Love You," "I Found a Rose in the Snow," "Halfway to Dawn," "Do You Miss Me?" "Somebody from Home," and "Whatcha Doin'?" He also serves as master of ceremonies. Barbara Parks leads a program which also features John Paul Jones, dramatic baritone, and Cedric and Arlinda, dance team from Toronto.

● The dance team of Ondrea and Michel, the prima donna, Mara Senta, and the McGraw Twins, musical comedy dancers, are prominent in the new floor show in the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel. Leonard Keller and his band continue. Lora Ondrea and Elliot Michel feature a number entitled, "Deep Purple." The McGraw Twins, Abbott trained, are pretty brunettes.

● Comedy is the spirit of the current Chez Paree floor revue. Allen Cross and Henry Dunn, formerly featured on the Rudy Vallee Variety Hours, are largely responsible for this state of affairs. Leon Belasco leads the Chez Paree orchestra. His latest innovation is a Greek tango called "Phtorbia" which he sings in Greek. He also sings in seven other languages. Harris, Claire, and Shannon dance ballroom numbers.

● The floor show in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel, where Horace Heidt's band continues, now offers Desty, Delso, and Jaun, the dance trio of the original French Casino program. They give acrobatic waltzes and tangoes of their own origination.

● The eighth annual Aragon attachés ball will be held at the Aragon next Thursday. Jan Garber and Anson Weeks and their orchestras will provide the dance music. The proceeds will go to the employés' fund. Among the performers will be feature acts of radio and the theater.

ACTRESS IN CAST OF "DODSWORTH"

City Opera Rings Down Curtain with Brilliance Saturday

No Prosy End to Season for This Group

Distinguished Artists Are Billed for Whole of Its Concluding Week.

By Edward Barry.

CHILD prodigies are popularly supposed to peter out early. Chicago's current music season displayed such brilliance in its second month that the gloomier of the town's citizens might have been justified in fearing the worst from the future. The sad fact is that some of these fears are well founded.

RICHARD HAGEMAN.

Do not think that we are going to have to survive on summer fare during the weeks to come. There are plenty of great names in prospect. No single month, however, will duplicate November's feat of crowding into the city in overlapping batches such a list as Rachmaninov, Kreisler, Stueckgold, Jepson, Thomas, Kocova, Lehmann, Raisa, Liszt, and all the rest.

The end of the opera season next Saturday night will be the signal for a lull that will last through the holidays. Luckily, the Chicago City Opera company has decided to expire for the year in a blaze of brilliance rather than to pass out of our sight in a quiet, unobtrusive way. Here are some notes on the schedule of this last gay week.

Operas for Students Draw Both Adults and Children.

There will be a performance on Sunday for the first time tonight. "Carmen" is the second and final opera of the season sponsored by the board of education, and is intended primarily for school children and their parents and teachers. If the other young people's opera a week ago Friday is any guide, there will be a great number of adults present.

Coe Glade repeats her successful Carmen of the third night of the season, but the other principals are new. Glade will tease Raynor to madness instead of Tokatyan, and Jean Fardulli will demonstrate the value of an iron physique in the "Toreador" song. He was once a wrestler, you know. Ruth Miller is the forgotten girl friend.

"La Fiamma" Has American Premiere Tomorrow.

Respighi's "La Fiamma" will have its American première tomorrow night, with Richard Hageman conducting. Rosa Raisa and Joseph Bentonelli, the soprano and tenor leads, have both had the advantage of the acquaintance of the composer, and both have coached their rôles with him. Respighi, you know, is ranked first among living Italian musicians. He is known in these parts principally for his instrumental music such as "The Pines of Rome," although another opera, "The Sunken Bell," has been performed at Ravinia. A few years ago Respighi came to Chicago. Some readers will daubtless remember that Leon Sametini and he played the violin and piano sonata. [In the Congress Gold room, I think.]

"La Fiamma" has been sung in Italy and in South America, but never in this country.

Ezio Pinza Now to Sing Gounod's Devil.

Two of the handsomest of the opera folk will work together Tuesday night. Jean Tennyson sings Marguerite to Joseph Bentonelli's Faust. This is brilliance enough for any performance, but the Chicago City Opera company's praiseworthy habit of overdoing things has led to reëngagement of Ezio Pinza. He sang Boito's devil the first night; now he sings Gounod's. Between the two characterizations of the evil one the company squeezed him into a human rôle, that of Don Giovanni, in the second performance of the season.

The first and last "Mignon" of the season is scheduled for Wednesday evening with Coe Glade in the name part. Armand Tokatyan, who seems to have run a little ahead of Bentonelli in the matter of choice tenor rôles these last five weeks, wil lsupport Glade for the first time since the first "Carmen."

Radiant Helen Jepson returns to the city to repeat at the Saturday matinée the Thaïs that drew lusty continental bravos a few weeks ago. The rôle of the saint who goes to the bad will be handled by Jean Fardulli instead of John Charles Thomas, but Martin again plays Nicias.

At eight o'clock Saturday evening, five weeks to the hour from the time the season started, the curtain will rise on the company's final presentation. "La Fiamma" has been selected to wind up the year's sessions, and cast and conductor will be the same as on Monday. Tears will be in order when the curtain swishes closed after the last call, for that is all that Chicago will see of resident opera until Nov. 2, 1936.

Ballet Russe Leaves with Promise of Early Return.

Come to think of it, tears are in order long before that. This very night the Ballet Russe packs its trunks after eight wildly successful days at the Auditorium and starts off again on its eternal journeying up and down the world. There are two important performances today. The only "Union Pacific" of this Chicago visit is scheduled for the matinée; the only "Beau Danube" and "Cotillon" for the evening.

The parting will not be too bitter, because the ballet is definitly coming back this season. Judging by the scenes of enthusiasm and ecstasy these last eight days, there would be real danger of the city throwing itself as one man into the lake if its beloved ballet left without promise of a comparatively speedy return.

Ignaz Friedman Plays Recital Today.

There is no lack of big names during the remainder of the season, but they will certainly be spread a little thinner than they have been. Following are a few of the things that will console the town in its grief over the early end of opera and ballet:

Ignaz Friedman, one of those pianists whom every one knows and respects but few have actually heard, plays an all-Chopin program at the Studebaker today. Several of the Pole's nicest achievements are included. The F Sharp Major Impromptu is one, the G Minor Ballade another.

John Charles Thomas sings his only Chicago recital of the season next Saturday at the Auditorium. This is the eighth in the series of ambitious downtown concerts sponsored by Northwestern university.

Two more important news items for December both have to do with pianists and both with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Josef Lhevinne, who has been knocking them out of their seats for thirty-five or forty years now, comes to Orchestra hall a week from Tuesday to play the majestic B flat Minor Concerto of Tschaikowsky. It should be an exciting afternoon. Thursday night and Friday afternoon the F Minor Concerto of Chopin is scheduled.

Myra Hess Will Be Here Christmas Week.

The best woman pianist in the world [or maybe the second or third best, to avoid starting any controversy] is soloist with the Symphony in Christmas week. Myra Hess is familiar enough to Chicago to make a couple of sellouts probable.

I forget now whether this article is supposed to prove that the season is petering out or that it is not petering out. It is proving both theses for those interested enough to put themselves on one side or the other of the argument. The spacing between name artists indicates a gradual letdown; the brilliance of these same names, the opposite.

After the first of the year Igor Strawinsky's star begins to wax. His orbit crosses ours the twenty-eighth day of January. Other phenomena due that month are José Iturbi, Josef Hofmann, and Hamilton Harty.

I dare not go into February and March now for fear of having nothing to write about later. As an added safety measure this little piece covers only events of the greatest importance. Others are handled from week to week in the column labeled music notes.

Mr. Hopper's Son.

The late De Wolf Hopper once acted Romeo to the Juliet of Marshall Wilder in a burlesque of the tragedy. His son, William, made his stage debut with Katharine Cornell last year in "Romeo and Juliet."

New Plays in Gotham Meet Gray Fates

"Abide with Me," "For Valor," "Mother" Are Tepidly Received.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Aside from "Jumbo," the new Hippodrome tenant, which got a Saturday night start the week before, the drama was filled with sadness, and the cares that infest the unhappy producers of failures were rampant this week.

We had a sad drama written by a society lady of prominence, Clare Boothe Brokaw, called "Abide with Me," which was covertly declared to expose the marital adventures of one close to the author.

We had a Gorki novel, "Mother," made into a sort of dramatic chant in which the gentle and doubting maternal parent of a soviet radical came to embrace the revolutionary cause in the pre-revolution days in Russia.

"Satellite" Lasts Just One Night.

We had a comedy called "For Valor," in which Frank Craven, lately lost to the cinema, essayed to return to the theater and found himself swamped with a play written by Martha Hedman, erstwhile popular leading woman, and Henry Arthur House, the man she married when she left the stage.

And we had a little something called "Satellite" in which an honest Iowa florist was taken for a series of rides by a gold-digging Broadway chorus girl and then tossed away to her sister, who took him back to the country, a poorer, but a better, hick. This one lasted but a single night. . . .

As for "Jumbo," that mastodontic affair is so far living up to expectations. Variety's statisticians estimate that the first week's receipts at the Hippodrome were $55,000 and that the cost of running the show is no more than $40,000, leaving a neat profit for William [called Billy] Rose and his partner, John Hay Whitney, to apply to the cost of staging the enterprise, usually quoted at a quarter million. Even at that rate it will take "Jumbo" some time to wade out of the red. There are, I have heard, other partners. Bernard Baruch and Herbert Bayard Swope have both been mentioned as having a part of the investment. That would probably mean a part of the "Jock" Whitney half.

"Jumbo" at Once Thrilling and Disappointing.

As entertainment "Jumbo" is curiously thrilling and disappointing at the same time. Thrilling because of its bigness, and especially because of its gorgeous setting. The whole interior of the old Hippodrome has been rebuilt by Albert Johnston as an indoor arena, with seats terraced back from what used to be the fore part of the orchestra circle to the rear of the first balcony. The seat covers are a circus red with white stars, and the ceilings and walls are sky blue.

Where the stage used to be, or, more exactly, where the tank and the orchestra pit used to be, there is now a huge circus ring, probably sixty feet across. In this ring the show is performed. It is a mixture of circus acts and musical comedy interludes. When there is singing or talking going on microphones are lowered from the ceiling and these carry the voices to all corners of the auditorium. The chief entrances are from the old stage at back, but actors are likely to appear in any aile at any time. . . .

Story Weakest Part of Spectacle.

The boast of the billing is that there are four hundred animals in the show. You may safely quarter that, but even a troop of twenty or thirty horses, mounted by acrobatic dancers who have learned to stand on equine shoulders on flat saddles, is a considerable sight. The menagerie proper is housed in the basement, and there is an assortment of wild beasts—tigers and lions, leopards and llamas, deers and donkeys—caged and uncaged—for the youngsters to see.

The story on which the circus acts are strung, and which is the cause of the disappointment, was thought up one idle day by Charles McArthur and Ben Hecht. It is concerned with the rivalry of two small-time circus men, Considine and Mulligan. They dissolve their partnership and start rival shows, which makes the going rough for their children, the daughter of Considine being much in love with the son of Mulligan.

Jimmy Durante, playing a tuba-toned press agent, is the chief comedy element outside the clowns, and Jimmy is the strength of the story. He shouts his songs and his advice, his jokes and his twisted superlatives, and loyally permits Big Rosie, who is playing the Jumbo of the title, to walk over him.

Paul Whiteman, the band man, rides in at the head of the parade, looking a bit uncomfortable on a beautiful white horse. Thereafter Paul conducts the orchestra, also a little uncomfortably. I doubt if the No. 1 orchestra leader likes circuses. The romance is played and sung by Donald Novis and Gloria Grafton, and there are such actors of standing as Arthur Sinclair and A. P. Kaye scattered through the cast. . . .

"Abide with Me" Might Be Hailed if Author Were Foreigner.

"Abide with Me," Mrs. Brokaw's play [the widow of the late George T. Brokaw, she was married last week to Henry Robinson Luce, whose first wife was Lila Hotz of Chicago], is a rather doleful tragedy, but it is so stuffed with significant character studies that I honestly believe if it had been written by a foreigner it would have been taken seriously and indorsed with some fervor. Because Mrs. Brokaw is a home-town society girl [independently wealthy, she has insisted on a literary career, having written a satirical volume of short stories called "Stuffed Shirts," and served as an editorial executive on Vanity Fair] the inclination is either to belittle or to resent her play.

The story is of an unhappy marriage in which the husband, Arthur Marsden, an alcoholic sadist, is as embittered a young man as was the hero of Ibsen's "Ghosts," and for similar cause. His own parentage was suspected by his father, who was also an alcoholic and beastly in his cups.

Climax Reminiscent of "Ghosts."

The wife, Nan Marsden, a girl of family who took to manicuring when the family fortunes were low, suffers the humiliations and the cruelties of her husband out of love and respect for his old mother, though in time she turns for support and sympathy to the family doctor.

At this stage her husband begs her to take her lover and give him [Arthur] a son that he may have an illegitimate child to torture as he had been tortured by his father. When affairs reach an impasse the husband's old nurse is inspired to shoot him dead to save the family from several worse fates. Another mercy killing, you might call it.

A turgid, unpleasant drama in story and social implications, but sanely and often strongly written. And particularly well acted by Earle Larimore as the slightly mad husband, Barbara Robbins as the suffering wife, James Rennie as the sympathetic doctor, Cecilia Loftus as the mother, and Maria Oupenskaya as the old nurse.

Staging of Gorki's "Mother" a Dramatic Novelty.

The propagandists in Fourteenth street, operating as the Theater Union, Inc., have not presented their case effectively in "Mother," made from the Gorki novel by the German Bert Brecht and translated from the German by Paul Peters.

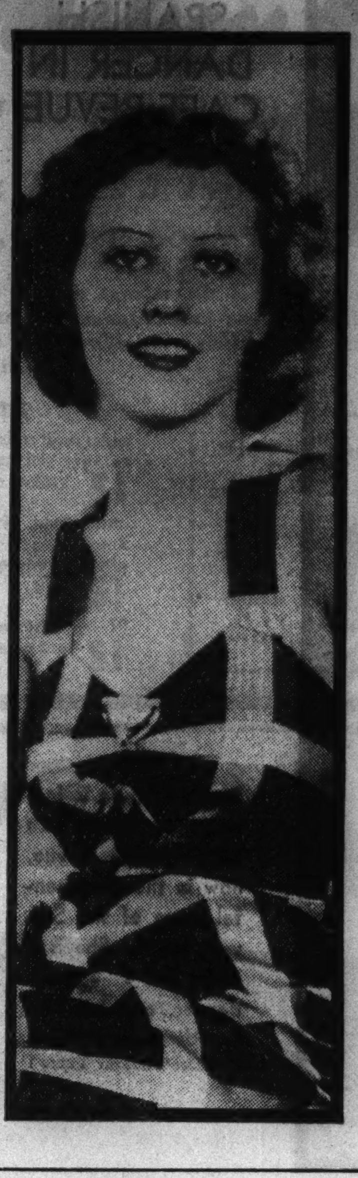
The play is a dramatic novelty in that it is presented as a sort of animated soviet primer. The stage is bare, the skeleton sets being changed in the dark. There is a screen overhead in which titles explaining each scene are flashed as in the old silent movie days, and frequently the actors step out of character to address the audience.

The thread of the story is of a simple woman's conversion to the cause of the workers. Her son is hounded by the police. She follows him and his companions, whom she distrusts as trouble makers, and becomes involved in a strike. When a flagbearer is shot down the mother takes up the red flag and carries on. In the end, though her son, railroaded to Siberia and afterward shot as he attempts to escape into Finland, is dead and the cause far from won, she is still the standard bearer and happy in the cause.

Cycle of Dramas.

The latest word about Eugene O'Neill's dramatic cycle is that it will comprise eight, instead of seven, plays, and that they will cover 125 years in the history of a family. The Theater Guild hopes to have one or more of the eight ready for production next season.

PRIZE BEAUTY AT STATE-LAKE



Henrietta Leaver, the "Miss America" of 1935, according to a beauty contest in Atlantic City, is the chief personality on the current vaudeville program at the State-Lake theater.

The First American Recording of a Great Work

BRUCKNER'S SEVENTH
by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra
Conducted by Eugene Ormandy

FROM the violas and tubas there comes a solemn and majestic theme that seems both to brood over an impending event, and to mourn as though it has already come to pass. Presently the violins add another lament, and gradually the resources of the orchestra join in a rising chorus of grief and pain—and triumph. Thus Bruckner, in the third movement of his Seventh Symphony, written in 1882, clearly foresaw the approaching passing of his great master, Richard Wagner.

Bruckner's work in many ways stems from the composer he so greatly revered. Perhaps he was too close to Wagner's time to be fully appreciated as a disciple who had not merely carried a torch, but with it illumined new paths. Relatively neglected he has been, and unjustly so, as you will realize when you hear this masterly recording.

In presenting this unusually interesting symphony, Victor carries forward its progressive policy of covering every important field of music. Thereby, as in this instance, it makes available many compositions whose beauty can seldom be heard except from Victor Records. Hear this Higher Fidelity recording of a great work at your Victor dealer's. In an album, complete with explanatory notes, 8 records, $15.00

GOOD Morning!

With Thanksgiving over and Christmas just around the corner—are you still taking any time off for your movies?

You should, you know. Nothing like a good show to relax tight nerves and make busy days happy ones as well. November had a lot of excellent movies and December promises some winners. Re some of the former's output:

"MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY"—adapted from the book by Charles Nardhoff and James Norman Hall—is a thrilling adventure picture with its story adhering closely to fact. It's bitter and bloody adventure, but if you can take it you'll find the picture a stirring thing that you wouldn't have missed for worlds. Charles Laughton gives one of the most memorable performances of the year as Capt. Bligh, and Clark Gable as Fletcher Christian and Franchot Tone as Byam contribute ace portrayals.

There'll Be Two Opinions About Shakespeare Opus.

"MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM"—adapted from the Reinhardt stage production of the Shakespeare comedy—is a "rarely lovely thing photographically." It's a great spectacle if not so great in other ways. [And there'll be two opinions about THAT.]

"THANKS A MILLION"—"a rara avis of a musical such as was 'Of Thee I Sing' . . . agog with bright dialog and alive with catchy music . . . comedy, both subtle and slapstick, splendid acting and direction throughout, and possesses the great asset of topical timeliness. . ."

Films Catch Flavor of Dumas' Masterpiece.

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS." "Delightful screen fare [from Alexandre Dumas' fascinating historical romance] . . . swashbuckling, colorful, speedy affair crowded with vigorous incident and political intrigue . . . has the satisfying flavor of authenticity as to costumes and sets . . ."

"RENDEZVOUS" — Swell mystery-spy melodrama.

"TO BEAT THE BAND"—Comedy as is comedy. "Just naturally tickled my funny bone . . . dialog is droll and pat . . . ridiculous situations put over with a sort of simple good faith that's irresistible . . . ace acting . . . up to the minute direction . . ."

There! Didn't take you long to read that, did it?

BitsaBOUTem.

GEORGE BRENT, who has been much in demand since he made his debut in pictures several years ago, will have no less than three leading ladies in his forthcoming picture, "Snowed Under." The feminine trio consist of PATRICIA ELLIS, GENEVIEVE TOBIN, and GLENDA FARRELL. . . . LEO CARRILLO, who has played Italian character rôles so effectively in virtually every film in which he has appeared, has a hard time convincing people that he is of Spanish descent. Mr. Carrillo, who plays an Italian gourmand in "If You Could Only Cook," is really descended from the early Californian dons.

Several weeks ago SARA HADEN almost refused a rôle to appear opposite SHIRLEY TEMPLE in "Captain January" because she has to hate the child in no uncertain manner and she thought she would be unable to act the part. After much contemplation she accepted and was so good at being mean to Shirley that she has been given a long term contract with 20th Century-Fox. . . . The title of BORIS KARLOFF'S next picture will be "Walking Dead." Sounds plenty scary, doesn't it? MARGUERITE CHURCHILL, who has recently returned to the movies after an absence of several years, will play the feminine rôle opposite Mr. Karloff.

CAROLE LOMBARD'S next screen vehicle will be "Fashion Spy," based on an original story by John Francis Larkin. Travis Banton, fashion designer for Paramount, will design new creations for Miss Lombard to wear in this film. . . . "Dangerous," BETTE DAVIS' newest picture, has been completed and is soon to be released. . . . Ever since ISABEL JEWELL went to Hollywood to play in "Blessed Event" she has had a yen to appear before the footlights. When Miss Jewell recently signed a new contract with the Hal Roach organization she saw to it that there was a clause in the contract which permits her to appear on the stage four months during each year. . . . The screen adaptation of the story "The Good Earth" by Pearl Buck is soon to go into production with LUISE RAINER, Viennese star, playing the leading feminine rôle.

See you tomorrow!

Stars in Revue at the Palace

THE Palace theater offers on its stage a revue called "Red Hot Rhythm." The show contains Everett Marshall, baritone of a recent "Scandals" and also of the Metropolitan opera; Benny Rubin, dialect comedian, and Grace Hayes, once a musical comedy player. Others are Walter Wahl, seen here last in "Life Begins at 8:40," with his fellow-comic Emmet Oldfield; Gardner and Kane, dancers, and the Bebe Barri ballet girls.

The State-Lake theater vaudeville show features Henrietta Leaver, "Miss America" of 1935. Other performers include: George Beatty, Maud Hilton and company, Ted and Mary Taft, dance team; the Three Queens, Walter Nilsson, cyclist; Verne Buck, and the State-Lake ballet.

The "Blue Venus Revue," with ten variety acts, 44 girls, and a feminine orchestra, supplies entertainment on the Oriental theater stage this week. Frank Libuse, pantomimic comedian, is an extra feature.

The Chicago theater's stage features a return engagement of Phil Spitalny and his all-girl "Hour of Charm" organization, consisting of an orchestra, a glee club, and 31 female performers. The leading members are Evelyn Kaye, "Pat" Harrington, Gypsy Cooper, and the Hudson Wonders.

Happiness...
IS JUST AT THE CORNER

Wherever there's a Balaban & Katz theater there's happiness. And wherever you live there's a Balaban & Katz theater practically "at the corner."

A million people find happiness in our theaters every week. Are you getting your share? This week offers the best pictures we've had in many a day . . . and each a masterpiece in itself.

AND SPEAKING OF HAPPINESS—

we've just issued a Balaban & Katz HAPPINESS BOOK . . . an ideal Christmas present for anyone. A book of coupons good at any Balaban & Katz theater . . . $1.00—$2.50—$5.00. Buy them at the box office. The supply is limited.

Star Speaks for College Versus Films

Ann Loring Advises Youth Not to Give Up Study for Hollywood Career.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Ann Loring [Anita Kurtin], Brooklyn girl, whose first picture rôle in "Robin Hood of Eldorado" with Warner Baxter caused much favorable comment, says that no girl should give up a college career to go into films. "I have a good many reasons for saying this and I think all of them are good. Of course I can tell only what the case has been with myself, but I think a great deal of my experience will apply to others as well," says Ann.

"I think there is a lot more to life than the brief career that most people in pictures have. There are the years beyond that have to be provided for, mentally as well as financially. For a full, many sided personality such as a person should strive for, a college education is imperative. Otherwise all the little things in Hollywood become clothed with too much importance. There is no center of balance without a developed mind.

Many Hollywood Celebrities Can't Make General Conversation.

"Without wanting to criticize any one, I can frankly state that the chief defect of Hollywood personalities, if one can generalize, is a lopsided development that throws the personality out of balance. One can be a successful picture star and a great failure as a person. Many of our actors and actresses could not meet the test of an ordinarily intelligent parlor conversation. That's why Hollywood parties are so full of shop talk. There's nothing else that's vital to most of them.

"How an education affects the career itself is still another matter. So many people think it imperative for a girl to start on a dramatic career at 16 or 17, while she is still 'impressionable,' as they put it. A college girl has her period of impressionability prolonged past the average girl's because her mind is active.

"Since an actress is called on to portray emotion, at any age she may be, she can't simply reflect her own experience, she must imagine them. Proper mental development will help emotional development. A girl well versed in the classics of world literature, ancient and modern, knows a great deal more about life to put into her acting and make it sincere than a young girl given a few acting lessons and kept so busy playing extra and bits and worrying about this and that triviality that she has no time nor interest in learning about the problems that have been common to people through all time and in every place.

As Easy for Girl to Be Virtuous in Studios as Anywhere Else.

"A girl can't learn about life around a studio, all wise cracking aside. She just learns about one superheated, speeded up side of it, and if she isn't fortified with an education she's likely to believe that that is the only true conception of life. She'll have a lot of false values. How can she put sincerity into her acting?

"A great deal of the scandal that gives motion pictures a bad name with the public would be automatically eliminated if there were a rule naming college educations as a prerequisite to a film career. All the fluttery, pretty little nothings who will do anything to get a break, who accept invitations to parties that they know are questionable, who allow familiarities of various sorts are really to blame for any promiscuity that may exist here. I know that the girl who has standards and will not compromise is respected and not molested in any way. I don't think Hollywood is different in that respect from any office building or factory in the world. If a girl has intelligence, talent, or training, she'll fare much better than the girl who can offer only youth and a pretty face."

Ann Herself Got Start as Contest Winner.

This young lady who has sized up the Hollywood scene with such accuracy and balance is, strangely enough, a contest winner. After being graduated from Hunter college, Miss Loring entered a contest before the cameras and microphones of M-G-M's "traveling studio," a unit always on the alert to locate new talent. After six months' training with Oliver Hinsdell, studio coach, she had received a contract at M-G-M. Her studio test was so unusually good that she received an important rôle in "Robin Hood of Eldorado." She celebrated that assignment by following her theories that life should go on regardless of careers and got married to Louis Schor, a young attorney and inventor, on last July 10.

The couple live in one of those charming studio apartments perched high on the edge of a mountain above the edge of Hollywood in Whitley Heights, where so many other young people have brought their dreams, theories, ambitions, and enthusiasms. Around a turn in the road is the little house where Valentino lived during his early career and success. Above on the hillside, behind handsome wrought iron gates, is the home where Ronald Colman lived while achieving fame and a goodly bit of this world's goods. All through these magic hills live those who, like Ann Loring, are looking with bright faces to the future. Fame invariably carries them from Whitley Heights to Beverly and the more spacious adobes of the film celebrities who have achieved their goals.

Ruth Chatterton Buys Plane for Mexican Trip.

Ruth Chatterton is proud owner of a new red Stinson "Reliant" plane, speed 140 miles per hour, in which she hopes to set off on a trip to Mexico shortly. If picture plans interfere, just a little jaunt to New York will be her objective.

Harry Richman and Rochelle Hudson are having a lot of laughs over at Columbia doing a real mouth-filling melodrama scene as part of a showboat sequence for "Rolling Along." "Curses," "Unhand that woman, you dastard," "I have you in my power," and such feeling lines are being tossed about to the great delight of the crew and everybody concerned.

Civilization Is Based on Iron

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

WE DO not know the exact date of the beginning of the iron age, but it probably occurred when some bronze age genius happened to build a big fire against an exposed bank of the red colored earth we now call iron ore. After the flames had died out we may suppose that this neolithic Edison poked around in the cold ashes and found a few pellets of iron and was shrewd enough to deduce the connection between these and the ore and the fire.

During the five thousand years more or less that have followed this discovery iron has become the backbone of our material civilization. The reason is not difficult to find. It is a good all-purpose metal. It is not the most resistant, nor the lightest, nor the hardest, nor the most readily worked, nor the easiest to refine, nor the most plentiful; its value lies in the fact that it possesses to a moderate degree all of these desirable attributes. Moreover, iron and its alloys are capable of being modified in such ways as to show an astonishing range of metallic properties. For example, it may be prepared in such an active form that it bursts into flame on contact with air, or it may be made resistant enough to withstand the action of boiling acids.

Iron is found in nature in the form of several different ores; the most common of which is hematite, a mixture of iron oxide with sandy impurities. The ore occurs in extensive deposits in various parts of the world, the most economically important ones being around Lake Superior, in Lorraine, and in northern England. The world's available supply of ore is so extensive that some of the richest deposits, which happen to be a little too far away from coal mines or steel buyers, are not being exploited at the present time.

The ore can be converted into iron profitably only when there is also readily available a supply of coal and limestone. The smelting is carried out in huge blast furnaces. A mixture of ore, coke, and limestone is fed into the furnace at the top and a mighty blast of preheated air blown in at the bottom. The coke burns to form carbon monoxide, and the heat resulting from this combustion supplies the necessary temperature for the desired reaction. The carbon monoxide then reduces the iron oxide to iron at white heat and is itself converted to carbon dioxide in the process. The purpose of the limestone is to combine with the refractory sand present in the ore to form a relatively low-melting rock, known as slag. The result of all this is that there collects at the bottom of the furnace a pool of molten iron with a layer of molten slag floating on its surface. These two products, one valuable and the other worthless, are drained off separately.

The iron thus formed, known as pig iron, or, when molded into articles, as cast iron, is far from pure. The reason for this is that molten iron is one of the few liquids that will dissolve carbon. Consequently cast iron contains about 4 per cent carbon, as well as smaller amounts of other impurities.

This carbon content is by no means entirely a detriment. For one thing, most dissolved substances lower the melting point of the thing they are dissolved in, and this amount of carbon lowers the melting point of the iron from 2,800 degrees F. to about 2,000 degrees, thereby permitting the smelting of the metal at a lower temperature. And since cast iron is the lowest melting form of the metal, it is used exclusively for making inexpensive castings.

Unfortunately, this amount of carbon renders the iron quite brittle, so that cast iron must be used for objects that will not be subjected to any great mechanical shock.

The purest commercial form of iron is wrought iron. It is prepared by melting cast iron with a calculated amount of iron oxide and certain slag-forming materials, while the molten mass is continually stirred. The iron oxide reacts with the carbon to form iron and carbon monoxide, while the slag removes other impurities. As the carbon is removed the melting point rises and the metal becomes a pasty mass. It is then pressed between rollers, which squeeze out a large part of the slag. The resulting wrought iron is almost free from carbon and is rather soft but quite tough. The toughness is due in part to the presence of tiny flakes of slag.

Steel is iron with a carbon content between that of wrought iron and that of cast iron. When properly made it combines the good properties of both, the degree depending upon its carbon content. The low-carbon steels approach wrought iron in toughness and are used for plates, wire, and rails. The high-carbon steels are very hard and are used for cutting implements.

There are several different ways of making steel. The oldest, which still gives the best product, but at a high cost, is the crucible process. Here wrought iron is packed in carbon and heated to bright red heat for a considerable time, during which the iron absorbs some of the carbon. The resulting product is then melted in crucibles to obtain homogeneity. The disadvantage of the method lies in the fact that it must be carried out on small batches.

It was the Bessemer process, invented in 1856, that first supplied the world with cheap steel and made possible such glories of the iron age as railroads and battleships. By this method molten pig iron is placed in a huge egg-shaped vessel known as a converter and a blast of hot air is blown through it. The oxygen of the air burns up most of the carbon as well as the nonferrous metallic impurities. The carbon monoxide formed is blown off, while the oxides of the other impurities combine with the refractory lining of the converter to form a slag. The heat evolved by these oxidations is sufficient to keep the steel molten. Under these conditions, however, the liquid steel dissolves oxygen, which is given off when the metal solidifies, forming holes in the solid casting. To avoid this trouble a small amount of the element manganese is added to combine with the oxygen.

The Bessemer process, although the original source of cheap steel, has since been replaced to a considerable extent by the open hearth method. This consists essentially of melting calculated amounts of pig iron, scrap wrought iron, iron oxide, and slag-forming minerals by means of the very high temperature produced by burning intensely preheated gas.

Electric power is used to a small but increasing extent to supply the heat required in steel making. Its usefulness is hindered by the same handicap that electricity usually faces in competing with coal, that of higher cost per heat unit. It has the advantages of a higher available temperature, more accurate control, and the absence of the deleterious products resulting from the combustion of coal.

The properties of steel depend not only upon the carbon content but also upon the heat treatment to which it has previously been subjected. The physical and chemical changes taking place during hardening, tempering, or annealing are exceedingly complex, but they may be illustrated by the following brief description of the principal factors involved:

When pure liquid iron is cooled it freezes abruptly at about 2,800 degrees. A typical steel containing 1 per cent of carbon solidifies over a range of temperature in the neighborhood of 2,500 degrees to form a solid solution of this composition. Such a solution is stable only above 1,300 degrees. Below this temperature it changes to an interlocking crystaline mixture of iron and iron carbide. Likewise, the latter mixture may be converted back into the solid solution by heating to above this temperature.

It might appear, then, that we could not have the iron-carbon solution at ordinary temperatures, but this is not the case. It takes a little time for these forms to change into each other, and the lower the temperature the greater is the time needed. At ordinary tmperatures the time is great. Therefore if we cool the molten steel slowly it eventually becomes an iron-iron carbide mixture. But if we quench the white-hot metal in water or oil it is cooled too fast to make this change, and we get the solid solution.

The iron-carbon solution is quite hard but rather brittle. The iron-iron carbide mixture is tough but a little soft. Accordingly steel intended for knives or armor plate is quickly cooled by quenching. To give it the desired balance of hardness and toughness it is usually tempered by heating under carefully controled conditions so that a partial change from the solution to the mixture can take place.

These facts explain the loss of temper when cutting tools are overheated in grinding. The temperature produced by the friction is sufficient to permit the change from hard steel to soft to proceed.

Scarcely less industrially important than carbon steel are the alloy steels, in which certain other metals are added to iron and carbon. The metals alloyed with iron include nickel, chromium, manganese, cobalt, molybdenum, vanadium, titanium, and tungsten. These are rather expensive and hard to fabricate, but they are indispensable in certain specialized uses.

Nickel makes steel very hard without detracting from its toughness. For this reason nickel steels are extensively used in making gun barrels and armor plate. Steels containing 30 to 40 per cent of nickel have a very small temperature expansion and are therefore used in making measuring tapes for surveyors' use.

Chromium has much the same effect as nickel. In addition, both of these metals give steel a high resistance to corrosion. The stainless steels which are rapidly becoming more important both in technology and in architecture contain relatively large proportions of both nickel and chromium.

The presence of the proper amount of manganese makes a steel so tough that it cannot be cut or bored. As a result it finds ideal application in the making of burglarproof safes and has driven bank robbers to the use of nitroglycerin and the practice of daylight robberies.

The so-called high-speed steels are alloyed with tungsten or molybdenum, usually the former. These elements give the metal the property of holding its temper even when heated to incandescence. Consequently tools made of tungsten steel are used in cutting very hard materials, because they cannot be dulled by the intense heat generated.

Alloy steels, now in such general use, were first employed in naval construction. Nickel steel is largely used in making armor plate and gun barrels. One of Uncle Sam's big fighting ships.

Basset Hound Growing in Favor

SPORTSMEN who like hounds for hunting and for pets around the home should not fail to keep their eyes on the basset hound in this country. This heavy, slow, good-tempered breed is slowly but surely sliding into the spotlight. It wouldn't surprise us to see the basset a very much discussed breed within the next five years. And the basset could take this call into the spotlight, in view of its qualities.

It has a good disposition, likes children, has a wonderful nose, is easy to handle, will hunt most anything, and does not need a lot of pampering. Down east they have liked the basset for a long time. We got acquainted with the breed on a visit made in the east some years ago. Our host had a dandy pack of bassets, developed mostly from imported stock. We spent considerable time in the kennel with the dogs for the purpose of studying their dispositions. Although this short-legged, long-eared hound from the old country is a rather odd looking dog, there is nothing odd about his disposition and his intelligence. He has been bred as a hunter for many years, and this selective breeding tells.

The basset is a "low" dog. He stands from 11 to 15 inches at the shoulder. He is a heavy-boned dog. Weight may run from 35 or 40 pounds up to 50. When you get a look at the head of this old type of hound you'll never forget it, because of size, the nose, and the expression on the face of the dog. The ears of the basset are very long and the whole of the head is covered with rather loose skin. Add heavy flews to this combination and you get a hound that somewhat resembles the bloodhound in facial appearance. In fact, when we looked at the first basset that we ever saw, in the east (a heavy-set male dog), we immediately thought of the bloodhound. The expression of this dog when sitting down relaxed was much like that of the bloodhound—rather sad and full of dignity.

Although our trip to the basset hound kennel didn't permit of a hunt with the hounds, it's no secret to those who know hounds that the breed has a great nose. Of course, the basset is slow compared to the beagle. His short, crooked legs do not permit of any speed. They will tell you in Europe that they want the basset with that kind of legs so he will have to hunt slowly and thus can be followed easily on foot. On the continent they use these dogs to beat coverts as well as for trailing. In this country the bassets are being used for just about everything.

Carl Nottke of Battle Creek, Mich., a basset fancier, writes us that if we haven't hunted pheasants behind a basset we really haven't seen the ideal pheasant dog. Well, we haven't hunted pheasants with a basset, but, taking the typical dog fancier's viewpoint regarding the other breeds, and knowing something about this hound's qualities, we will hazard this prophecy: The basset certainly will never get too far ahead of the gun, a situation that means few shots for the hunter, with birds flushing out of range. But we wonder just how he could negotiate the almost impenetrable cover occupied by ringnecks that we have seen this fall. Cover such as we refer to is brutal. For a short-legged dog it certainly would be more than tough going. But of this much we are certain: Put a basset in any cover and his marvelous nose wouldn't miss any birds or any rabbits. This breed also has a lot of strength and can keep going a long time, which is another good point that has won it many friends.

The basset is supposed to have been imported from France into England, but patriotic hound fanciers in England are quick to point out that a hound similar to the basset must have existed in their country in Shakespeare's time. Shakespeare speaks of this hound as the "Spartan kind." The theory is that Shakespeare referred to a crooked-legged dwarf hound found in southern England. This breed would be called a basset in France. It is significant that later writers, however, do not speak of crooked-legged hounds like the basset type. So possibly Mr. Shakespeare took poetic license in writing about these dogs, very much like Sir Walter Scott, who commented on the speed of the St. Hubert hounds. As hound fanciers know, the St. Hubert is a slow, careful breed—in fact, just about as slow as any breed of hound that dog fanciers have ever known.

But, irrespective of the origin of the basset, American dog fanciers can bank on these facts about the breed: He is very smart, exceptionally faithful, and will trail most anything from a rabbit to a raccoon. Some fanciers allude to the basset as the "one-man hound," meaning the majority of bassets cannot be borrowed for a hunt, because they won't have much to do with a stranger, much less work in the field for him. This is another point for the hound fancier to keep in mind. Possessing keen scenting powers and a good disposition, the basset, we are inclined to believe, is bound to win more friends in this country, where the merry beagle, another hound with a winning disposition, is extremely popular.

QUESTION BOX

When my wire-haired terrier was a pup I taped his ears, hoping to get them to hang as they should. He is now twenty months old, and they still stand up. What can I do?—Mrs. J. T., Chicago.

It is probable that you can have the dog's ears taped or weighted to make them droop as they should. Most veterinarians are acquainted with the proper methods of reshaping dogs' ears.

DOG NOTES

Some dog fanciers are wondering why it was that 197 greyhounds were registered with the American Kennel club during September of this year, as compared with none registered in September, 1934. The reason for the big registration is that the body governing greyhound racing made it necessary for racing dogs to be registered before they would be allowed to compete in races.

Greyhound racing is legal in Arkansas, Oregon, Massachusetts, and Florida.

Do dogs need fresh meat in their diet in order to be healthy? A great majority of dog owners always have thought so, but one authority recently has made the statement that dogs do not need fresh meat. He says he has proved this fact by experimenting with his own dogs, which have been raised to healthy maturity without fresh meat. The man who made the experiments is Leon F. Whitney of the American Kennel Gazette.

This dog owner does not state that dogs do not like fresh meat. Neither does he state that it is wrong to feed fresh meat. He merely believes as a result of his experiments that dogs can be healthy and strong without fresh meat, thus cutting the cost of dog food.

This point is important now, especially, because of the high cost of meat. Mr. Whitney, who is no stranger to thousands of dog owners who have read his dissertations on feeding dogs, takes a fling at some of the veterinarians and their stand on how to feed dogs, especially with reference to the advice that dog owners should feed nothing but raw lean meat to their pets.

In advising dog owners how to beat the high cost of fresh meat as a dog food, Mr. Whitney suggests a number of different food items which will adequately nourish the dog, provide the animal with the proper amount of protein, minerals, bulk, and vitamins, and develop a strong, healthy animal. He suggests foods containing dehydrated beef, reliable prepared foods put up by American manufacturers and containing high protein content, some fish, raw bones, milk products, some cereals, and some vegetables.

Mr. Whitney maintains that a dog must have plenty of proteins in his diet to be properly nourished. He also is an apostle of the idea of giving a dog a small amount of fat in the diet.

The coon hound field trial held in Indiana several weeks ago again focused attention on one of America's most popular breeds of dogs. This Indiana field trial had nearly a hundred entries.

One hears very little about coon hounds in large cities and at dog shows, but get back in the country and you will hear plenty about these musical-voiced hounds. Coon hunting is one of the favorite sports of thousands of farmers, and we can readily understand why this is true. If you never have walked through the woods after dark, with coon dogs baying on a hot trail, and flashlights and lanterns penetrating the darkness, you have missed one of the most colorful and interesting experiences in the world of sport.

The coon hound is not recognized as a breed by the American Kennel club, although it is a real American breed used for a colorful type of hunting. At least it's a picturesque type of hunting to us, and we enjoy an evening in the woods with the coon hounds furnishing music as they trail a coon or possum.

ALFRED TENNYSON, once England's poet laureate, was born in Somersby, Lincolnshire, Aug. 6, 1809. He went to school from the age of 6 to 11 and when 12 wrote an "epic of 6,000 lines." He entered Cambridge in 1828 and produced a volume of poems in 1830. In 1832 there appeared "The Lady of Shalott," "A Dream of Fair Women," and "The Miller's Daughter." Later in life came "Idylls of the King" and "In Memoriam." Other works of Tennyson included "Crossing the Bar," which the poet requested be placed at the end of all editions of his poems, and "Enoch Arden." He wrote a number of plays which proved failures. In 1884 he was made a peer. He died Oct. 6, 1892.

CROSSING THE BAR

Sunset and evening star,
  And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
  When I put out to sea,

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
  Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
  Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
  And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
  When I embark;

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
  The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
  When I have crost the bar.

Mystery of 1,000 Clews! The Baffling Death of Elias H. Purcell

Murder or Suicide?—A Question Still Unanswered

By WILLIAM SHINNICK

CHAPTER I.

The Mystery of a Thousand Clews

"HE'S dead. He's been killed."

There was awed horror in the tone of the speaker as he made this brief announcement to the two women who stood beside him on the back porch of the home of Elias H. Purcell at 661 Roscoe street, Chicago, the morning of Sept. 22, 1919.

The women screamed. Then curiosity got the better of them and they, too, peered into the kitchen of the flat. They beheld the body of Purcell, indubitably dead and bound to a kitchen chair.

This was the beginning of the investigation of that strange case that has come to be known in the annals of Chicago criminology as "The Mystery of a Thousand Clews."

The title was apt. The kitchen door itself held the first of the clews. It was closed. But the key hung on the outside, and the discoverer of the body—he was Henry Van Vaerender, janitor of the building—had no trouble getting in. What could that loose key, ready for any hand, signify?

The rigid body (death had occurred hours before) itself furnished a series of puzzles. Purcell's left and right wrists were bound to the left and right sides of the chair, but the tying had not been done in a normal, careful way. The left wrist was held by a mere twist of the rope, which was then carried across the abdomen to the right hand and wrist. These in turn were bound to their side of the chair with a slipknot.

Over the forehead of Purcell and extending down over the face to the upper lip was a towel spotted with dark stains. This towel was loosely tied behind the head, which was tilted backward over the chair, exposing the throat.

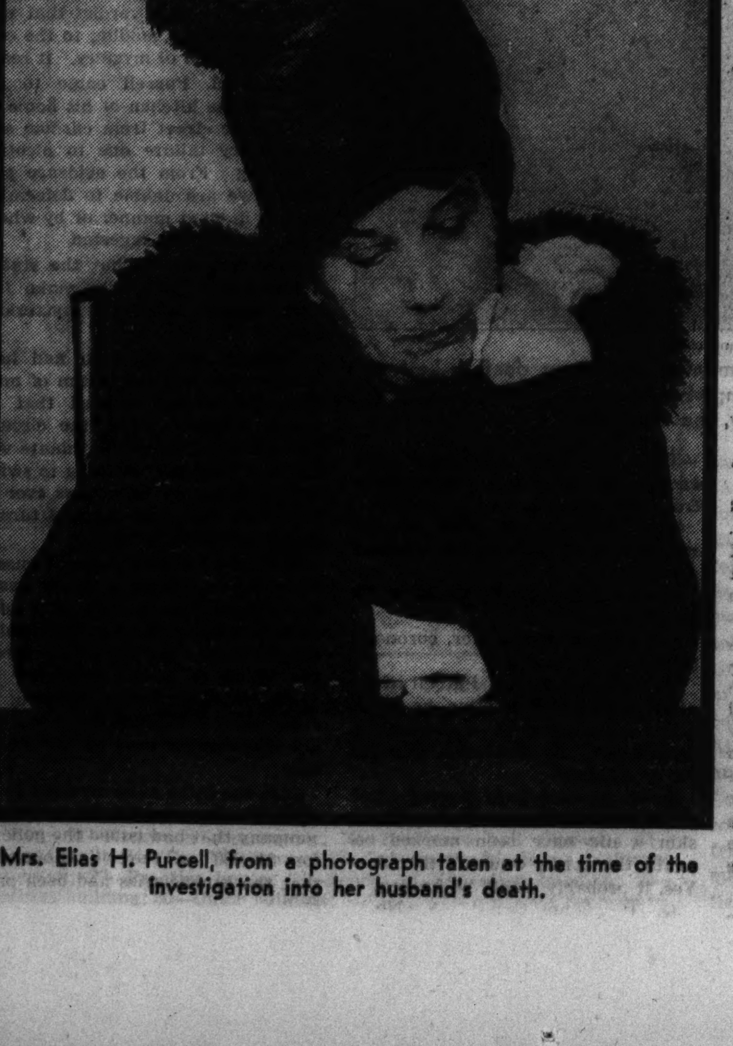
When the cloth had been removed it could be seen that the eyes of the dead man were wide, staring, as if he had looked upon something frightful just before his cord of life had been snapped. There was—and again this seemed most remarkable—no mark of violence, none whatever, anywhere on the body. From this fact arose a theory that Purcell might have died of fright, and even a coroner's physician agreed this was possible.

There was in all this circumstantial evidence nothing to preclude a guess that Purcell was dead when he was bound in the chair; equally there was nothing to indicate that he had not died in it.

Scattered everywhere in the apartment were more clews. A shattered glass lay on the floor of the kitchen, almost under the sink; and the chair was a bare two feet from that sink.

Every room in the house had been ransacked, and thoroughly. Furniture had been shoved about. Beds were in a state of disorder. Drawers had been pulled out of dressers and clothes had been tossed from closets. Bed linen, laid upon the floors, had been piled high with this loot. Several bundles had been pinned up neatly—so neatly that imaginative investigators were impelled to believe a woman had done the pinning.

In view of this wholesale vandalism it was remarkable (the fact was firmly established later) that nothing was missing from the flat.



Mrs. Elias H. Purcell, from a photograph taken at the time of the investigation into her husband's death.

Clews fully as startling came to light in the dining room. There a table had been set for three, and there were finger prints on the dishes—finger prints that did not belong to Purcell nor to any members of his family. By some necromancy the imaginative investigators decided these prints were made by a woman. And perhaps they were.

Breakfast appeared to have been served. If it had, it was indeed a strange meal. Only one egg had been cooked for three persons and distributed in separate cups. A single slice of toast had been split roughly into three parts (they fitted together) and placed on three plates. In each of three cups there was a little coffee and on each of three knives a little dab of butter.

Policeman Carlos Zabel cut the rope. Then he and the other investigators began methodically to ponder all these mysteries. Sherlock Holmes doubtless would have made much of these things—would have seen somewhere in the maze the link to the true solution. But the investigators were just workaday detectives and they used standard police methods.

They questioned Van Vaerender and the two women who made the original discovery. The women were Mrs. Van Vaerender and a Mrs. Wegener, a tenant in the building, who had accompanied the janitor at his request to the porch. He wanted them along, he said, as witnesses; he felt even before he went that there was "something funny" about Purcell's failure to appear the day before, which was Sunday.

On this theme Van Vaerender elaborated a little. Purcell was landlord of the building and a man of regular and commonplace habits. His curtains had all been down through Sunday, but the light in the kitchen had been on Sunday evening. Besides, Purcell had failed to take his usual pre-breakfast walk, on which he customarily met and talked with the janitor, the Monday morning of the grewsome discovery.

The women, so far as their knowledge went, supported Van Vaerender's statements.

Frankly the police admitted they were puzzled—even, for the moment, baffled. They felt sure that Purcell had been murdered; that the breakfast was "camouflage," a word then enjoying a post-war vogue. The serving of that unconsumed meal was intended to deceive. To deceive whom, and why?

There was no immediate answer.

CHAPTER II.

Death's Victim a Poet

NOT the least mysterious of the factors involved was the personality of Purcell. Sixty-one years old, he was a poet, a song writer, a musician. In addition he was a business man of more than average ability and had in the past made a reasonable success in real estate dealings.

Before the turn of the century he had traveled about the country with the Schubert Concert company, of which he was director and pianist. The other members of his troupe were his wife, Mrs. Lavinia (Lovie) Purcell, soloist; their son, Thomas V. Purcell, a boy banjoist and violinist, and an elocutionist.

In 1899 the three performing Purcells, with the couple's young daughter, Virginia, settled in Hibbing, Minn. Hibbing was just entering a boom period with the start of the exploitation of the Mesaba iron range, and Purcell turned this to good account.

He had some capital, which he invested in Hibbing real estate. The ventures were successful and by war times Purcell was a leading citizen of the community, with his wealth reckoned at not less than $75,000. He continued to amuse himself with music and the tracing of his family tree back to that Henry Purcell who was organist of Westminster abbey in 1680.

Virginia Purcell grew to womanhood and at the end of the World war was married to John Sheehy, a Hibbing boy who had served in the army as a lieutenant. Young Tom's musical gifts stood him in good stead and in 1919 he was the leader of Henry Santrey's touring jazz orchestra.

Late in 1918 Purcell sold certain of his Hibbing holdings, for which he received $40,000 in cash and Liberty bonds. He and his devoted wife then came to Chicago. For a time they resided in a house in Aldine square. This place was sold when they purchased the Roscoe street flat building and moved into it. Purcell retained some of his Hibbing property and divided his attention between the management of these widely separated holdings and speculation in the stock market.

The police investigated the whereabouts of the immediate relatives at the time of his death. Mrs. Purcell was, and had been for some days, visiting friends in Sterling, Ill. Mrs. Sheehy and her husband were in Hibbing. Tom Purcell was in South Haven, Mich., and Michigan City, Ind., on Saturday and Sunday. He left Michigan City for Chicago an hour after the body was discovered, but halted in the loop. His first news of the tragedy reached him in an afternoon paper he read in the loop.

Artist's reconstruction of the mysterious death of Purcell. Note the presence in the death room of a number of the "thousand clews."

To save space and to prevent any unwaranted speculations let it be stated here that the police proved beyond any shadow of a doubt that no member of the family was in the house between the time Purcell was last seen alive by neighbors and the moment when Van Vaerender first viewed the body.

But one or more persons, if the statements of several disinterested witnesses could be believed, were in that flat of Purcell's early Sunday morning.

Let William Hornung, a milkman who supplied families in the building, tell his story.

"Between 3:30 and 4 a. m. Sunday," he said, "I jumped over a fence at the rear end of the Purcell building lot, landing on a walk leading to the back porches. Just as I did that I saw a shadow cross the curtain of a rear bedroom in Purcell's place. As I went up the stairs to the porch I heard a noise. It sounded like a groan, but maybe it was a snore."

And then, said Hornung, the window curtain in the bedroom was pulled aside. His story continued:

"I was on the steps. The head and the right shoulder of a man appeared. He wore an officer's army cap, and—I'm not quite sure about this—I think I also saw the bars on the shoulder."

Coroner Peter Hoffman of Cook county pondered this information, which took on added significance when an officer's cap was found in the apartment, one that had belonged to Lieutenant Sheehy. A test was arranged. Milkman Hornung, in the presence of detectives, reënacted his witnessing. The coroner was convinced there was nothing impossible, nothing even improbable, in the story.

Miss Mary Van Heule, residing at 657 Roscoe street, in a building separated from Purcell's only by a passageway, recalled that she had heard steps either in the back yard or the passage. She guessed that the time was between 1:30 and 2 a. m. Sunday.

Another witness, Miss Elizabeth La Verney, also of 657 Roscoe street, asserted that she had heard the voice of a woman in the Purcell flat early Sunday.

"I think I heard a piano and a violin being played" she added.

Mrs. Martha Ulrich, residing in a basement flat of the Purcell building, reported that she had heard voices and seen a light from one of the Purcell bedroom windows—also early Sunday, when her baby waked her.

CHAPTER III.

Rare Poison Employed

IT WAS remarkable, with so many clews, that the suspicion of murder had settled on no one individual. It was equally strange that no one knew for ten full days what had caused the death of Purcell.

That point at least was settled by science. The vital organs of Purcell had been turned over to the coroner's chemist, Dr. William D. McNally, for analysis. He ran twenty tests before he discovered what had killed the poet-speculator.

It was nicotine, one of the rarest and most deadly poisons known to man. Purcell had not died of fright. There was enough nicotine in the body, said Dr. McNally, to kill half a dozen men—and such a dose would cause death within five minutes after it had been taken.

Instead of clarifying, this information further complicated the case. There were on record only a few instances in which nicotine had been used as the instrument of murder or suicide. It was hard to get hold of; reasonably, only a chemist or a man versed in poisons would have thought of using it.

Yet here it was in plenty. Dr. McNally found the stains of it on the towel bound around the head, and on the white shirt front of its victim. How had it been administered? Had it been given in a glass, in the glass that was found shattered on the kitchen floor? Had it been poured on the towel and a bit of it thrust into the mouth of Purcell as he sat bound? That was possible; a few drops were sufficient to cause death.

There grew up almost immediately an obstacle to the belief that the nicotine went into Purcell's stomach while he was bound. Although it kills more swiftly than a bullet, death is usually preceded by tremendous convulsions. Why, then, if Purcell was bound tightly to the chair when the convulsions began, were his wrists not chafed and scarred by their straining against the rope? This line of thought suggested naturally that perhaps he already was dead of the poison when he was tied.

Perhaps. But now an old point, through the same suggestion, became important. How tightly had Purcell been bound? That twisted rope, that slipknot, were they tight enough to permit the movement of the hands even for a few inches?

The policemen who were first on the scene had announced on Sept. 22 that the binding was tight. Pondering it over at a distance of more than a week, they decided that the binding of the right hand, at least, was not very effective. Rather solemnly they declared that hand could have been moved about seven inches.

Some of the investigators said that in view of this it was entirely possible that Purcell had committed suicide. He could have bound himself, they asserted, used the play in the loose hand to carry the poison to his mouth, and then could have shattered the glass that contained it. The lack of tension in the rope would have prevented the wrist chafing.

This theory brought a storm of criticism. The police, said some of the critics, were unable to find any evidence of suicide and had devoted their efforts to proving that suicide was possible, when they should have been looking for the murderer.

Mrs. Purcell was in the forefront of the critics. So were her son and daughter. There was no reason at all, they declared, why Purcell should have killed himself. And what were the police going to do with the statements of Hornung, of Miss Van Heule, of Miss La Verney, of Mrs. Ulrich? Why didn't the police find out the identity of the man wearing the officer's cap?

It was recalled by the widow—rather late, some seventeen days after Purcell died—that he had written to her in Sterling to tell her about a phone call from a mysterious woman. This woman, he related, had a foreign accent and had asked to speak to Mrs. Purcell; she had refused to disclose her identity to him. How could the police laugh off the reports about the woman's voice in the flat?

And Mrs. Purcell remembered also that her husband had made at least one enemy. During the war he had reported to the authorities in Hibbing the pro-German talk of William Danner, a barber from the fatherland. He had ejected Danner from a house he owned, and the German had been interned for the rest of the war. The police might look into the case of Danner, who was now, according to Mrs. Purcell, living in St. Paul, Minn. Was he vengeful enough to wish harm to the song writer-speculator?

The police took the tip. They went to St. Paul and investigated Danner who was much surprised. He was no longer pro-German, but pro-American. And he proved to the utter satisfaction of all concerned that he was in St. Paul when the death spasms of nicotine swept over the frame of Elias H. Purcell.

There seemed to be no one anywhere in the wide world who had desired the death of Purcell.

CHAPTER IV.

Murder or Suicide?

BECAUSE they could find no motive for murder, the pro-suicide theorists remained firm in their stand. They had found what they considered plausible reasons both for suicide and—assuming there had been a suicide—for Purcell to make self-destruction look like murder.

First, they said, he had lost a large part of his once considerable fortune in the stock market. Second, he had taken out large insurance policies within the last year, and these new policies had clauses invalidating them if the policyholder killed himself during the first twelve months they were in force. His total insurance was about $15,000.

To accept the suicide theory one had to believe that Purcell had ransacked his own home, had cooked the camouflage breakfast and set the table, had purchased or stolen the nicotine, tied himself to the chair, and taken his potion. Some investigators frankly declared it was impossible to do all these things unaided. The others declared it was not only possible but the only logical conclusion.

This latter group pointed triumphantly to a torn sheet of paper found in the effects of the dead man, containing the fragmentary carbon copy of a will. It read:

> It is my hope that I die alone or among strangers, so that I will not bring distress upon those I love.
>
> My impartial and affectionate solicitude for their individual well being . . . and will cheerfully abide by this testament, although informally expressed . . . I hereby subscribe to this my last will and testament . . . because man is born of pain . . . It is my will that my just debts be paid out of my estate . . . the estate intact . . . benefit of all concerned.
> From my estate during her life, but with the provision that the net income above her living expenses and the . . . her and our children, Thomas V. and Virginia Purcell, or their heirs . . . but if my wife should marry again . . . believe my investments are sound.

The value of this typewritten evidence was reduced when it was disclosed that the so-called will was written more than a year before Purcell's death and that he had sent a copy of it to one of his brothers. (This will never was probated, as it had not been properly witnessed and thus had no standing under the law.)

But it remained certain that Purcell had suffered heavy losses in speculation during his year in Chicago. The best summary of his involved financial condition was that given by his son Thomas in testimony at the coroner's inquest. After telling of the sale of the Hibbing property for $40,000 the son was questioned:

Q.—Do you know what he did with that money? A.—I can give you a pretty good outline of it. Five thousand dollars he put into the property at 661 Roscoe street; he bought $3,000 worth of Liberty bonds, invested $6,000 or $7,000 in stock of a Minneapolis milling company, bought an automobile for about $2,000, and repaid a loan of about $4,000.

Q.—To whom? A.—To me.

Young Purcell detailed the financial arrangements prevailing over a

Pacific Islands Resurrected by Aviation

These speeds will virtually cut in half the total time consumed in the ordering and delivering of merchandise between producer and consumer.

Of the air routes indicated on the map only the central line, extending from San Francisco to Canton, with stops at Honolulu, Midway Islands, Wake Island, Guam, and Manila, is in operation today. The first giant flying boat carrying mail began the initial trip over this route on Nov. 22, just nine days ago. At present the schedule will call for one trip a week each way, the entire journey to be completed in a seven-day period.

It is known that Pan American Airways directors and technical experts consider the San Francisco-Canton airway merely the main girder in a structure of Pacific lines which ultimately will enable them to call the Pacific "their sea." The next step in expansion will call for the flying of the 4,000-mile extension of the San Francisco-Hawaii route to Brisbane, according to reliable reports.

Later, when a series of problems peculiar to the northern route alone have been solved, Pan American is to open the Seattle-Tokio route. When this is finally done there probably will be branch airways which will connect some of the Russian cities at the eastern terminus of the Trans-Siberian railroad with this main northern artery. By that time those same Russian cities will be the eastern termini of Russian commercial air lines already beginning to operate in this territory.

Flight operations engineers now are working out details for the branch lines between Guam and Tokio, via Yokohama, which is the port of entry on the Japanese coast; between Manila and Yokohama, and between Canton and Yokohama. It is expected, nevertheless, that many years will pass before the international complications which have snarled plans for these lines will be ironed out and actual flights begun.

Development of ocean flying in the Pacific hung upon the fact that the scattered island possessions of the United States were so located that they could be utilized for bases on the transoceanic airway. Pure luck determined their positions, all the islands being claimed, annexed, or obtained by treaty during a period from thirty to eighty years ago, long before government officials dreamed of an ocean air line.

The Hawaiian group was annexed by the United States in 1898 after machinations of American business men, planters, and seamen who had settled there. Prior to annexation it was a republic for a short period, and prior to that time the islands had retained their own sovereignty under a series of chieftains.

The Midway Islands were also obtained about 1898, when they were selected and settled by American citizens as a cable station. The cable, which connected the islands with Manila, was laid to maintain communications with American military units in the Philippines during the Spanish-American war. The cable station still is on the island, its colony of twenty men being the only settlers prior to establishment there last July of Pan American Airways' refueling depot.

English seamen discovered Wake Islands in 1796, but the islands never were settled, although Charles Wilkes, leader of an American exploring expedition, visited them again in 1841. Wilkes considered them too unimportant to chart. They were formally claimed by congress in 1899 when sailors pointed out they were directly on the steamer routes between Hawaii and Manila.

Guam, which is entirely under navy administration, was obtained from Spain by treaty after the war of 1898 In addition to being the site of one of Pan American Airways' depots it also is a navy refueling and refitting station.

All the other American islands in the south Pacific, save those of the Samoan group, were first claimed for this country in 1857 when they were visited by freight ships after guano. They never were settled, however, until, last year, the federal bureau of air commerce suggested they were ideal as bases for an American air line from Hawaii to Australia, New Zealand, and New Guinea.

Then, in order to forestall any claims which might be made by other governments, twelve American students from Hawaiian schools were picked and four sent to each of the rocky, desolate islets. Inquiry at the state department in Washington recently disclosed that no other government has claimed these islands, but certain English maps had shown them as English possessions. The colonization followed.

The northern Pacific islands of the Aleutian group came to the United States with the purchase of Alaska from Russia. The most distant of the chain, Near Island, is but 700 miles from the Kuril Islands, owned by Japan. Iliuliuk is the one city of the group, on Unalaska Island. It is a port of entry and has a population of 450. The navy has a large base there.

From the commercial standpoint these island possessions are of priceless value. The air development of the Pacific as against trans-Atlantic flying, which holds out the promise of immediate profits on a large scale, was begun only because they made possible an "all-American" route.

In other words, the American possessions eliminated the red tape and the splitting of profits with foreign-owned and subsidized air lines which confronted the Americans who sought to obtain landing permission at the Azores and Bermuda. Now the Atlantic line probably will await the building of 100,000-pound flying boats already on paper. These, twice as large as the largest Pan American Clipper planes used on the Pacific route, will be able to carry a profitable cargo nonstop from American shores to Europe.

The central and southern Pacific routes benefit from the ideal weather conditions prevalent in those portions of the world. Fog is almost unknown, and temperatures preclude formation of ice. Hurricanes alone will interfere with flight operations, and these are infrequent.

It will be an easy matter to establish bases on either Howland, Baker, or Jarvis Islands, exactly as the Midway and Wake Island bases were built. Distances between these islands and both Australia and Hawaii are well within the performance limit of Pan American planes.

The northern route presents a different problem. The Bering sea has been called a "weather caldron." In summer there is a constant fog layer from 1,000 to 2,000 feet thick over the whole area. In winter temperatures range down to the seventies below zero and the surface of the sea is a craggy mass of ice.

Radio landing beams may conquer the summer conditions, and perfect engines insulated against the cold may make winter passenger flying over the ocean feasible. Both these are some distance in the future and at present Pacific Alaska Airways, a Pan American subsidiary flying lines within Alaska proper, is acting as a practical laboratory for solution of Arctic flying problems.

Military significance of the islands is fully as great as the commercial value. Each of Pan American's depots, because it is equipped with shops, radio large stores of lubricants, fuel, and the like, is automatically a military base from which army and navy airplanes can operate on short notice. In effect all the islands are strong points against which an enemy seeking to invade the United States from the Pacific side would have to move.

Last summer's war games, in which the entire United States fleet took part, showed that Pearl Harbor, the large, well fortified naval station on the island of Oahu in the Hawaiians, is a key point in the defense of the western coast line of the mainland. The navy's base on Unalaska, tremendously enlarged, fortified to beat off attack by ships, and equipped with aircraft capable of making the 1,800-mile trip to the Midway Islands, is another important military stronghold.

Fleet maneuvers between Unalaska, Midway (which is considered part of the Hawaiian group), and Pearl Harbor disclosed that it will be extremely difficult for an enemy force, compelled as it would be to operate at an extreme range from a friendly port, to successfully complete any mission of invasion.

The future of the Philippines, very much in doubt, due to withdrawal of the United States from the islands, is the subject of much speculation. Military experts say Japan is certain to take over the islands, fulfilling what the Japanese have long considered their "manifest destiny" as an island empire.

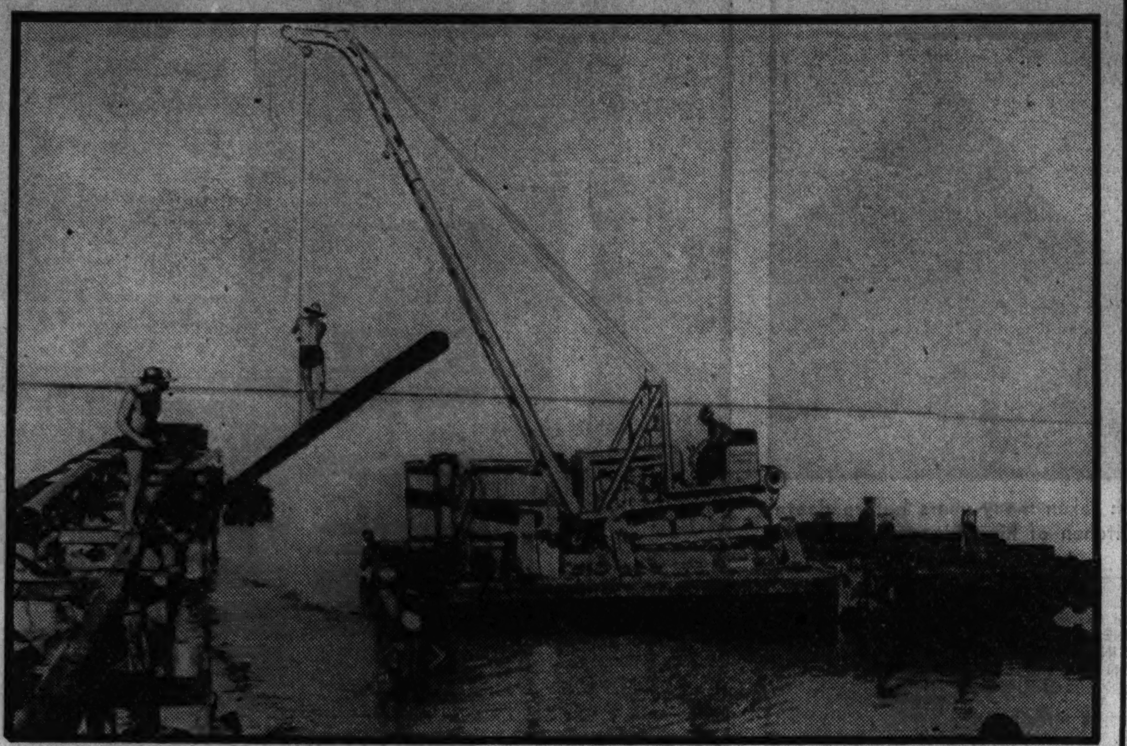
If the United States considered this act aggression and attempted to resist, according to military experts, the Japanese would find themselves fighting on extremely favorable ground. It is a naval axiom that no offensive action can be carried out against an enemy more distant than 2,000 miles from a friendly base.

With the Philippines 7,200 miles from the mainland and 5,000 miles from Hawaii, it would seem impossible to retake them in the event of their seizure by the Japanese. The only available base for a counter offensive — and a doubtful one indeed — would be the insignificant island of Guam, lying 1,500 miles to the east of the Philippines and within the portion of the Pacific mandated to Japan.

Although the United States navy department still designates Guam as a naval base, it admits that fortifications there are obsolete and unequal to withstanding a determined attack. As to the strength of the garrison upon the island — if there is a garrison there worthy of the name — there is considerable uncertainty at this time. Troops, as many as could be established on the island, would be of little value, however, without adequate guns for resisting attack. Reports have it that extensive landing fields have been established at Guam. At least it is certain that a base for commercial flying is being set up there.

Guam, if it could be held, thus might become the base for American fleet operations directed toward Japan and the Philippines. The island is virtually the same distance from Yokohama as from Manila.

Naval tacticians say that islands of the Pacific would be of greatest value as bases for immediate air operations in case of war. Ocean distances are so great that surface vessels could not come to grips for weeks, while an American air fleet, relying upon commercial depots for everything except actual munitions of war, could go into action within sixty hours of a declaration of war.



Another part of the work on the Wake Island base. Here the ten-ton tractor, rigged to operate a cable stretched over a steel boom, is lifting one of the posts for the pier.

Bridge Should Be in College Curriculum

By ELY CULBERTSON

IT ALWAYS has been a source of wonder to me that contract bridge should not be given a great deal more attention by universities and colleges. Very likely it occupies a high unofficial position among the undergraduates and faculties, but surely it deserves higher standing.

I have a rather wide acquaintance among college graduates, and we have discussed this question at some length. Almost unanimously they agree that contract would form an excellent addition to the average curriculum, and to my further suggestion for contract teams to compete in intercollegiate tournaments, or college against college in team-of-four play, there is not one dissenting voice.

Few nonacademic subjects offer the mental training that contract does. As a guide to concentration and as a developer of analytical qualities I cannot think of its equal. It is a wholesome substitute for gambling games and at the same time a safety valve for youthful gambling spirit. And, of course, the fact that in later years it is a social necessity is of no mean importance. Far-visioned educators already have recognized these truths, with the result that already contract has been added to the curriculum of several eastern high schools. I feel, however, that students of college age are more fertile soil for this particular seed: a certain degree of maturity is desirable.

As to the formation of an intercollegiate bridge league, surely the merits are obvious. Contract lends itself to team competition, with its minimizing of the luck element, better than any other mental exercise, such as chess or debating. And this with the enormous additional value of its being a popular game; probably fifty students would turn out to make the bridge team for every one in chess. And undoubtedly the fortunes of the team would be followed with the greatest interest by the student body at large.

I have no doubt whatsoever that the colleges will some day raise contract to its rightful position — my only question is, why the delay?

From my good friend Capt. Al Gruenther of West Point, the country's foremost bridge tournament director, belatedly comes a tale of the late Wilbur Whitehead.

Toward the end of a full life Mr. Whitehead found himself more and more prone to get very sleepy around 11 each night—a failing well known to his acquaintances. One particular wag found no way to capitalize this knowledge until he found himself in the same tournament with Mr. Whitehead.

At a certain stage in the Howell movement the wag figured out that the board he had just completed would go next to "Whitey." So he carefully arranged the cards by suits, misplacing the ace of diamonds at the head of a four-card heart suit to the queen.

Mr. Whitehead duly picked up the hand, and finding, as he thought, a five-card heart suit headed by the ace-queen, with good side strength, bid and rebid hearts, eventually landing in a four heart contract, doubled and redoubled. In the play of the hand the true state of affairs abruptly made itself known. Whereupon Whitey, in a fury that completely beclouded his excellent good sense, took an action that became the basis for relentless kidding for months afterward. He protested the board!

The committee, with straight faces, went into judicial session and came out with the verdict that Mr. Whitehead's only possible case lay against his optician.

A hand from the recent Vanderbilt tournament portrays defense as a fine art:

	♠ A 10 3 ♥ J 10 6 ♦ Q J 3 ♣ J 8 4 2
♠ J 6 ♥ A K Q 4 3 ♦ K 5 ♣ Q 10 5 3	N. W. E. S.	♠ Q 9 7 5 2 ♥ 8 ♦ A 8 7 6 ♣ A 9 6
	♠ K 8 4 ♥ 9 7 5 2 ♦ 10 9 4 2 ♣ K 7

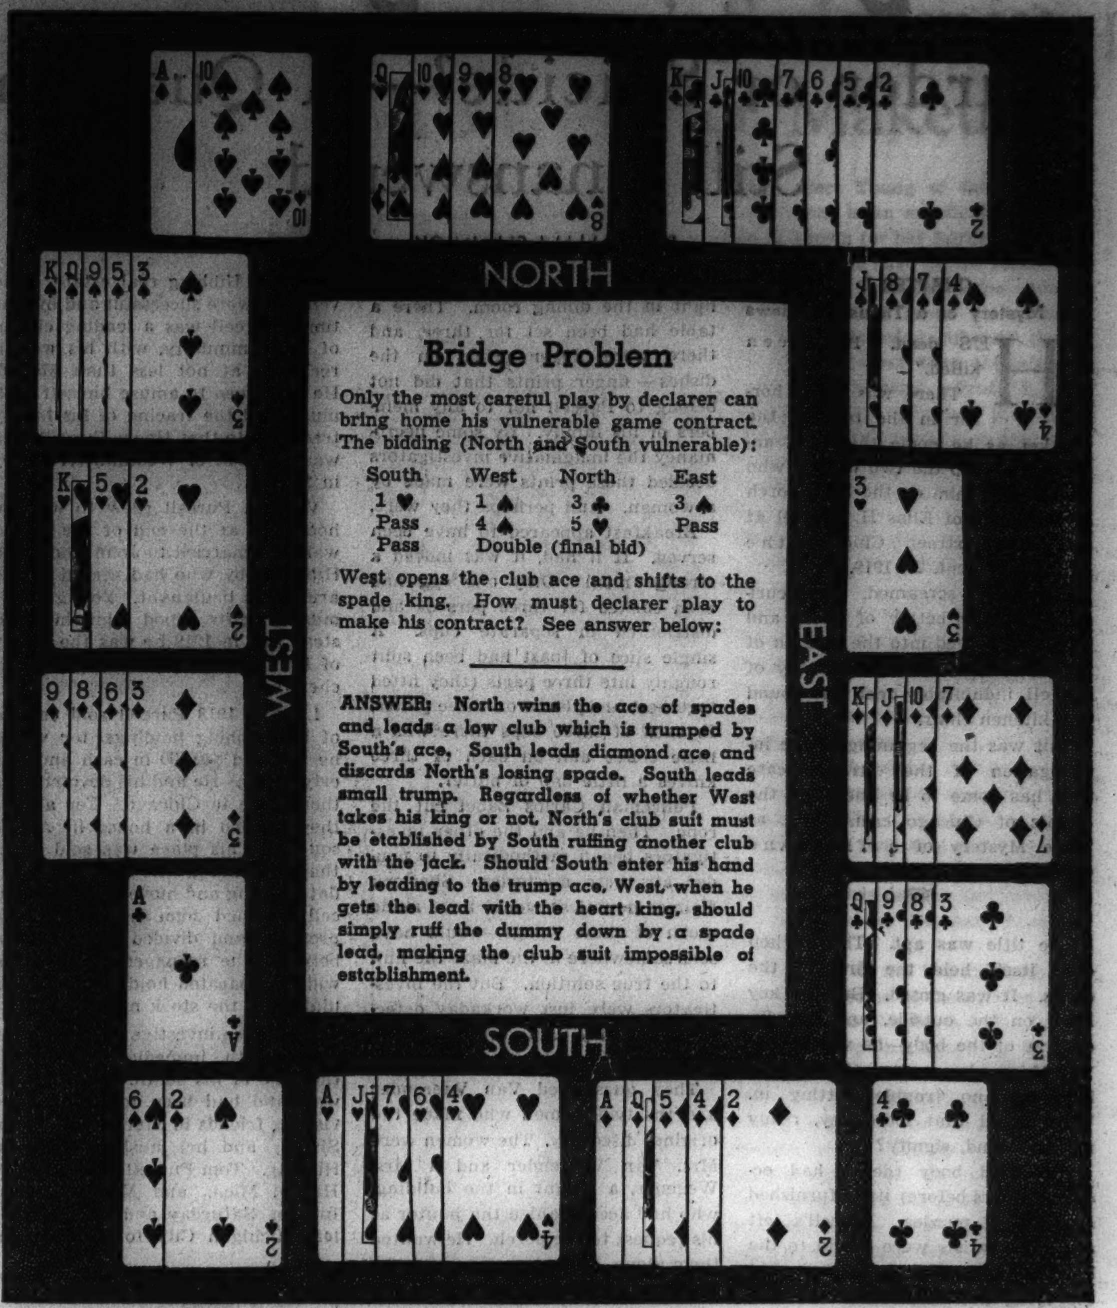
The bidding (neither side vulnerable):

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 N. T. (final bid)

North opened the deuce of clubs, dummy played low, and South won with the king. Knowing from the deuce lead that declarer as well as North held four clubs originally, which with the ace and 9 in the dummy appeared to make the club suit impregnable, South made the beautiful lead of the diamond deuce. In actual fact this lead alone makes the contract unmakable, effectively blocking declarer from setting up his fifth heart unless he resigns himself to only two club tricks. In other words, he could not take the club finesse to the ace-9 and then return twice to his own hand. Realizing this sad state of affairs, West went up with the diamond king; North took the second step in a fine defense by playing the diamond jack to unblock the suit for his partner. Now West led the low spade, intending, if North ducked, to finesse the 9. But North was wide awake and hopped up with the ace, next leading the diamond queen. Declarer's goose was cooked. Neither the spade nor the heart suit could be established without South regaining the lead, for a total of one club, two diamond, and two spade tricks. Note that had South failed to lead a diamond at the second play, or had North failed to unblock the diamond suit, or had North then failed to win the first spade lead, the contract of three no trump could not have been defeated.

(Copyright: 1935: By Ely Culbertson.)

Each Monday in The Daily Tribune Mr. Culbertson writes a bridge article especially for beginners. Articles for more advanced players on other days.



Bridge Problem

Only the most careful play by declarer can bring home his vulnerable game contract. The bidding (North and South vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	1 ♠	3 ♣	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	5 ♥	Pass
Pass	Double (final bid)

West opens the club ace and shifts to the spade king. How must declarer play to make his contract? See answer below:

ANSWER: North wins the ace of spades and leads a low club which is trumped by South's ace. South leads diamond ace and discards North's losing spade. South leads small trump. Regardless of whether West takes his king or not, North's club suit must be established by South ruffing another club with the jack. Should South enter his hand by leading to the trump ace, West, when he gets the lead with the heart king, should simply ruff the dummy down by a spade lead, making the club suit impossible of establishment.

Today's Questions

Question: Dealer bids one club, second hand passes, third hand holds ♠ Q x x x x x ♥ K x ♦ x x x ♣ x x. Is one no trump the correct response?

Answer: No. The correct response is one spade. A one-over-one response may be made with a five-card suit headed by one-half honor trick or with any biddable or rebiddable suit if the hand contains one honor trick or more.

Mystery of a Thousand Clews!

period of years between himself and his father. He was then asked if this covered all he knew of Purcell's losses.

A.—Provided that $21,000, as reported, had been lost in stock and grain speculation here in Chicago, which brings the total up to $42,000. That would explain the mystery of my father's money.

Q.—If he were a suicide, what do you think the motive would be? A.—I can figure no motive for a suicide. There is none.

Q.—If your father was murdered, what would the motive be, in your opinion? A.—He might have been murdered by people who came under the impression that he had money, or just ordinary flat looters who were figuring on robbing him—or it might have been done for some reason the family would know nothing about.

Other evidence gathered by the coroner tended to show that the speculative losses of Purcell in Chicago were about $21,000 and that the investment in the Minneapolis milling stock was a loss. Also that Purcell was hard pressed for ready cash as a result of these unfortunate ventures

Mrs. Purcell, testifying, insisted there was no reason to believe her husband's finances would have led him to kill himself.

Q.—Did you know he had lost a lot of money? A.—I have been told he did.

Q.—Did he have considerable real estate in Hibbing? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he dispose of some up there? A.—Yes, for $40,000.

Q.—Has he any Hibbing property in his estate now? A.—He has an eight-flat building in Hibbing.

Q.—What do you think he was worth when he died? A.—We figure about $35,000—our home on Roscoe street and the building in Hibbing.

Q.—Then his losses for the year were the difference between $75,000 and $35,000? A.—That may be correct.

Q.—Have you any idea that he committed suicide? A.—His finances would not have caused him to do this. If he had lost all his property and was in debt there might be something to it, but he had $35,000 to his [illegible] in real estate.

Q.—Then you believe it was a murder? A.—Yes.

This testimony of the widow and son had elements of the convincing. It was not logical, seemingly, that a man of the equable temperament of Purcell (it was shown he was no character weakling) would kill himself because he had only $35,000 left.

The advocates of the suicide theory, however would not accept defeat. Four witnesses were called and gave evidence tending to show that it was possible for the man to have committed suicide. Dr. McNally was one.

Q.—Doctor did I understand you to say there were traces of nicotine in the liver and other organs of the body? A.—Yes

Q.—[illegible] that indicate? A.—That the body functioned long enough to carry this poison there from the stomach.

Q.—Then Purcell lived several minutes after taking the poison? A.—Yes

Q.—Long enough to tie himself? A.—Yes.

Dr. William Burmeister, coroner's physician, was called.

Q.—Doctor if Mr Purcell lived after taking the nicotine he probably was shaken by a convulsion, wasn't he? A.—Probably, but not for a certainty

Q.—If he had been shaken after placing his wrists in the ropes the skin would have been marked beneath the cords, wouldn't it? A.—Yes, it probably would be broken.

Q.—It was not [illegible]? A.—No.

Policeman Carlos Zabel, with a piece of rope, demonstrated to the coroner's jury how Purcell had been tied and gave the expert opinion that the right hand could have been moved after the binding.

CHAPTER V.

Still a Mystery

THUS were the issues drawn in the "Mystery of a Thousand Clews." There was so much to confirm both suicide and murder and so many improbabilities to disprove both that it seemed impossible to choose.

So far as the coroner's jury was concerned it actually was impossible. Those six "good and lawful men" retired and debated for more than an hour When they emerged they brought in a verdict that was a masterpiece in holding to the center of the road of mystery. It read:

"Elias H. Purcell came to his death in the kitchen of his home at 661 Roscoe street from cardiac and respiratory failure due to nicotine poisoning. From the evidence presented we are unable to determine how or in what manner or by whom said nicotine was ingested.

"We recommend that the state's attorney and the police make further inquiry into this mysterious case."

Three of the six men had held that Purcell was the victim of murder. Three had insisted that he was a suicide. Under the circumstances only that indeterminate verdict was possible. Nothing to swing the pendulum of belief was ever in the years that have elapsed turned up by the investigators.

If Purcell actually slew himself, his effort to deceive in death was a splendid success, worthy of a keen mind and the vast imagination of a songster-poet. If he was murdered, the killer or killers displayed remarkable astuteness in covering up every clew of identity while scattering meaningless ones by the handfuls.

Just one thing more remains to be told. On Jan. 22, 1920, the insurance company that had issued the policies for $15,000 to Purcell announced that the beneficiaries had been paid in full.

Indiana Co-ed Friendly, Informal, and Full of Life

Has Dancing Feet and Knows Her Slang

Elsewhere in this issue of The Chicago Sunday Tribune appears a full page of portraits of four Indiana university co-eds.

By MARGARET SCULLY

THE campus at Indiana university is natural, informal, friendly. It is rambling and hilly, heavily wooded with trees that are indescribably beautiful in the autumn, and through it, winding about among the dignified buildings, flows the famous though miniature Jordan river, which often runs dry. The campus is famous for its rustic board walks connecting many of the buildings, and loud howls of protest go up from students and alumni alike whenever there is talk of replacing one with a handsomer, more durable walk of Indiana limestone.

There are many pleasant traditions at Indiana. These are part and parcel of campus life. There is the elaborate burying of John Purdue at the field house the night before the Purdue-Indiana football game. There is the warfare between the same schools over the Old Oaken Bucket, and the adding of the "P" or the "I" to the handle by the victors when the game is over. There is the freshman cap burning each spring, when first-year boys gleefully pile their little green "pots" on a roaring bonfire and take what revenge they can upon the members of Skull and Crescent, the sophomore men's organization, the sole purpose of which is "to enforce the wearing of green caps by freshmen."

There is the traditional enmity between the lawyers and the medical students. Their football game, held on the morning of homecoming, is complete with all the trimmings. Each faction has a band. The medicos wear white coats, and the baton of their drum major bears a striking resemblance to a thigh bone. The lawyers usually lead a duck around by a string in their parade and pinch the poor thing at proper intervals to make it quack.

And there is the Wellhouse, campus landmark, built in the shape of the Beta pin, where courting Betas part with their fraternity emblems and end all their campus serenades.

And there is gradually coming to be a tradition at Indiana that it rains in Bloomington every Tuesday. Certain it is that it rains frequently and if the new arrival comes without a slicker it is probably the first thing that she buys in the town.

Your typical Indiana co-ed is not, strictly speaking, beautiful, but she has a sparkle and a vivacity that serve as excellent substitutes. She is as informal and friendly as her campus. She is fun-loving, not too serious-minded, and mischief delights her soul. She spends some time frivously, bemoans orally the fact that pipe courses are becoming a thing of the past, and pretends that having campus politics eliminated has spoiled half her fun.

She wears quite a bit of makeup, and there still are lots of surprised eyebrows on campus foreheads. Her favorite way of doing her hair, if it is short, is to hold back unruly locks with a small comb. This comes in handy whenever she gets near a mirror. Although she is getting used to the idea of sweaters and skirts and low-heeled shoes, there still are lots of high heels and silk dresses in Indiana classrooms.

On a typical weekday your typical co-ed dashes to an eight-clock English lecture in the chemistry building, flies to a French class in Kirkwood hall, and thumbs her notebook as she heads for a geology quiz in Science hall. These three buildings are the center of scholastic life for the girl in the school of liberal arts and sciences. These three, plus the library—where she does all her studying—particularly in the evening, when, if she's late, she won't be able to find a seat!

After classes she and all her cronies make a bee-line for the Union building, acknowledged center of campus social activities. The Commons there is the afternoon hangout at Indiana. Between the hours of 3 and 5 a campus band provides music, and every chair in the huge room is occupied. Groups of chattering students gossip, play bridge, and hail their friends until there is standing room only.

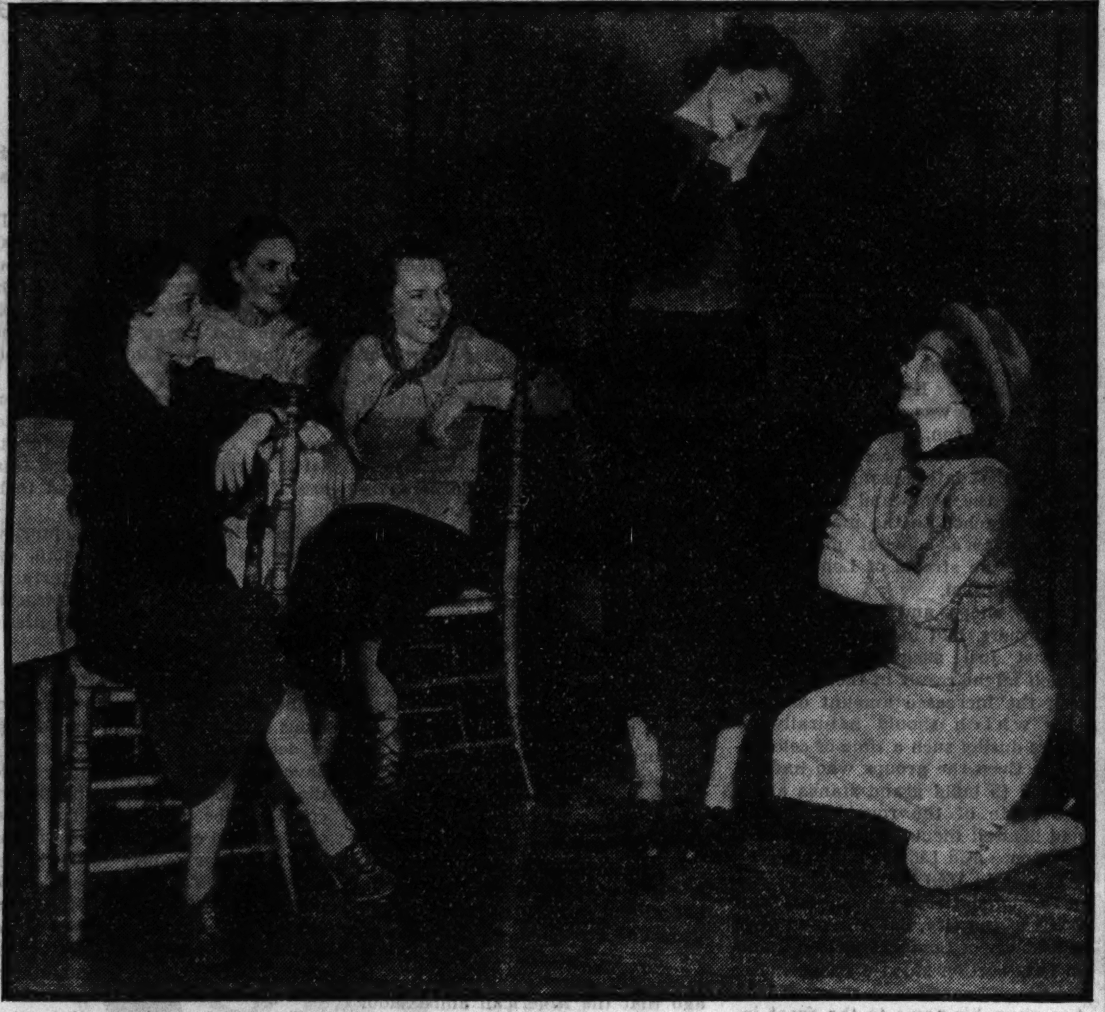
Dinner is served at 5:30 in most houses on the campus. The explanation given is that students hardly can wait to get to the library in the evening. The cynic, however, finds more than one explanation for this studiousness. In the first place, space in the library itself is rather limited, and the fact that it is full to the last chair does not necessarily mean that the entire student population is at its books. In the second place, facilities for studying in the girl's own room are generally inadequate. In some rooms desks have been dispensed with to make room for dressing tables (far more necessary in the life of any feminine student), and in any event, in spite of study hours, the houses are not the quietest places in which to concentrate. And, finally, the last hour of the evening before the 10:30 deadline usually is reserved for a bit of relaxation and refreshment, and the exodus from the library is marked around 9:30 at night. At that hour students adjourn to the Book Nook or the Gables for a soft drink! It therefore follows that if you want to join the merry throng at 9:30 it's much simpler to do so if you already are at the library.

A Sunday evening at Indiana, as at other schools, finds the fireplace of residence or sorority house a favorite spot with engaged couples.



Sorority "stunt night." Left to right, Jean Bedwell, Sally Jewett, and Phyllis Palmer, upperclassmen, are being entertained by Sarah Jane Millikan and Mary Ann Kunkel, freshman pledges.

Wednesday mornings are special occasions. Classes are shortened to make room for convocation, held usually in Assembly hall. This hall is a rickety frame structure, threatened annually by celebrating students who see in it the best bonfire of history—but tradition and the affections of Indiana alumni provide protecting squads of police on all dangerous evenings, and it has survived through the years. Held theoretically for the entire student body, the "convo" is attended faithfully only by freshmen. Many upperclassmen blithely adjourn to the Commons for an hour of sociability, excusing themselves on the grounds that Assembly hall couldn't accommodate everybody.

Wednesday is the one weekday on which dates can come into the sorority houses. It is the accepted midweek date night. After 7 o'clock in the evening there is an influx of young men and the living rooms have their quota of courting couples, listening to the radio, playing bridge, or discussing favorite courses.

Your true Indiana co-ed has dancing feet. Music and dancing are her two passions. When she goes out for coffee or a soft drink in one of the local hangouts she is apt to prefer the one which provides a band. She never misses the regular Friday evening dances at the Union, and seldom sits out a dance. These Union dances, open to all students, are weekly affairs and brook no competition. Friday night is theirs. All fraternity and sorority dances are held on Saturdays, and they are "closed" parties except for a few scattered invitations issued to close friends. They may be simple informals, or they may be costume parties, depending upon the tradition of the house, and there are a few "pig dinners," "gipsy dances," and "Bowery parties" scattered through each year.

In the fall and spring the favorite jaunt is over into beautiful Brown county for picnics, or to one of the nearby abandoned quarries for a swim. The fact that Indiana has a no-car rule complicates these trips somewhat, but in one way or another they still are managed. They provide practically the only outdoor activities that meet with universal approval among the feminine population. Co-eds watch with interest all the major sports indulged in by the men, but are not much intrigued by the sports themselves.

Most co-eds agree that to be junior prom queen, president of the Association of Woman Students, hold an important post on the Arbutus (the Indiana annual), or take leading parts in the University theater plays are worthy lines of endeavor. And every year the senior ring is awarded to the senior girl who has been the most outstanding in campus activities. This is an undisputed honor.

There are about 1,800 women on the campus, of whom approximately one-third are members of sororities. The sorority houses at Indiana are new and handsome and are grouped around the university on the north, east, and south.

Freshmen arriving at Indiana in the fall are subjected to three days of sorority rushing. If they decide to join they move at once into the houses and take up their pledge duties. Between classes they study in the library. In the evening they take over the dining room tables, or tables in some other large room dedicated to freshman study, and are confronted with their notebooks and texts under the watchful eyes of upperclasswomen. Their dates are limited to the week-end. They are set a certain number of "activity points" which they must earn before they can be initiated—and convocation and going to church both provide such credits.

Indiana slang stacks up with the best when it comes to color and effectiveness. Just for a few samples:

"Come on, Jane, let's Jo."

"No, I haven't time to boress. I've got to study."

"Why study for that breeze? Let's ankle down to the flick."

"Say, by the way, what were you doing out with that goon the other night?"

"That was just the guz. I didn't go out with him after all."

"What did Panhandle do for you on your major problem?"

"Well, they were just fair."

Which, translated into plain American, reads as follows:

"Come on, Jane, let's go out for some relaxation."

"No, I haven't time to gossip. I've got to study."

"Why study for that simple course? Let's go to the movies."

"Say, by the way, what were you doing out with that horrible boy the other night?"

"That was just campus gossip. I didn't go out with him after all."

"What did Pan-Hellenic council do for you on your major problem?"

"Well, they were pretty bad."

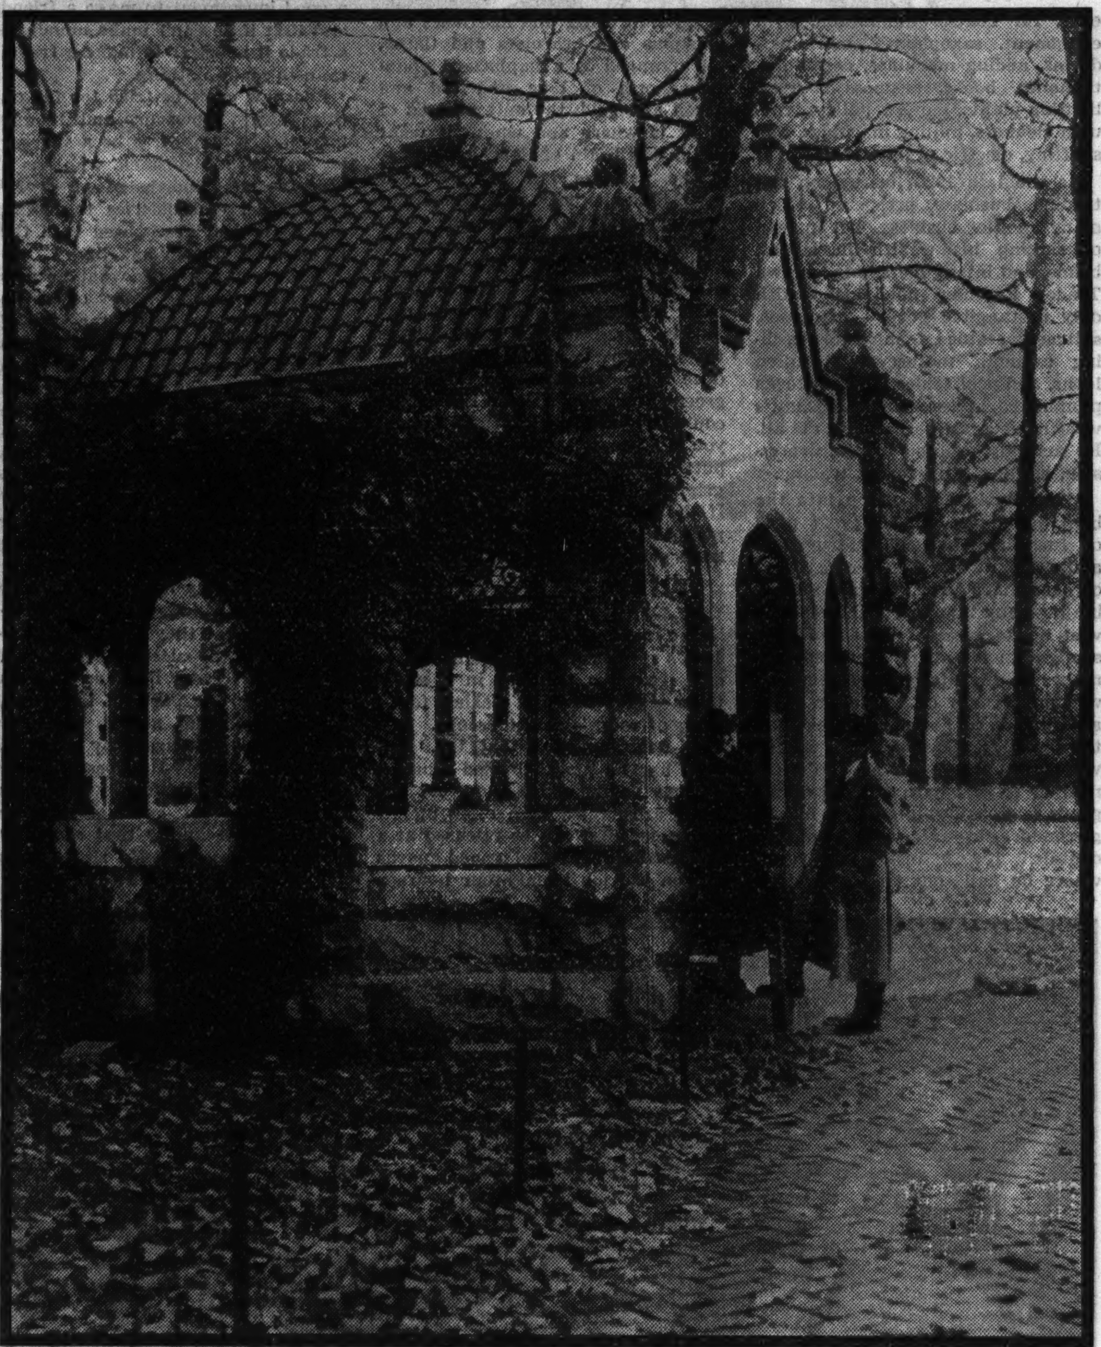
1—Library; 2—Student building; 3—Maxwell hall; 4—Carpenter shop; 5—Owen hall; 7—Assembly hall; 8—Power house; 9—Printing plant; 10—Men's gymnasium and field house; 11—South hall; 12—Memorial stadium; 13—President's house; 14—Wylie hall; 15—Kirkwood hall; 16—Science hall; 17—Mitchell annex, 18—Mitchell hall; 19—Commerce hall; 20—Biology hall; 21—Kirkwood observatory; 22—Residence hall (leased); 23—Memorial hall; 24—The Wellhouse; 25—Infirmary; 26—Howe residence for women; 27—Practice house; 28—School of Education building; 29—Chemistry building; 30—Union building; 31—Hepburn residence for women.



The Wellhouse is a familiar landmark on the Indiana university campus. Jane Stewart, Kappa Kappa Gamma freshman, and James Harris, Sigma Chi sophomore, pause for a moment of conversation.

But There's Seriousness, Too, in Her Makeup

All is not lightness and frivolity, however. There is a serious side to life at Indiana. Although as at any university there are co-eds who think the true object of college life is to have a good time while hunting for a husband, there are many students at Bloomington, who are looking forward toward careers other than that of matrimony, and they have chosen their college courses accordingly. The majority of interests fall into three main divisions—social service, teaching, and business.

About 30 per cent of the co-eds at Indiana are earning part of their college expenses, and they expect more from their four years of university life than a good time. They work in private homes doing light housework or taking care of children. They do stenographic work in university offices. They tutor less accomplished students And they earn from 25 to 40 cents an hour.

The office of the dean of women supplies girls who are interested with information concerning available work. Mrs. Fannie L. Weatherwax, secretary to the dean, is in charge of this phase of student activity and keeps careful watch over all employed women to make sure that their health is safeguarded. She is beloved by the entire feminine population, whether working or not.

Favorite teachers on the campus are numerous. Dr. W. T. Hale of the English department is perhaps as universal a favorite as any. His sarcasm, usually direct and to the point, has the entire class in an uproar. Also he is up on all the campus gossip. He is said forcibly to impress his subject on the minds of his students.

Mrs. Bert Young of the English department is an excellent lecturer and is known for her fairness. Prof. U. S. Hanna is liked by the students, and Carl G. Franzen of the education department keeps his classes lively by discussing subjects from the human rather than the purely academic viewpoint. Prof. E. L. Yeager brings everyday life into his classes in psychology, so that nobody ever goes to sleep in a lecture of his. And Dean C. E. Edmondson, who teaches hygiene, has the reputation of being quite witty.

Two hundred of the girls who do not live in sorority houses live in one of the handsomest buildings on the campus, Memorial hall. Of dignified gray stone in the medieval manner, set back from the street behind a beautifully kept lawn and semicircular drive, it is reminiscent of an English castle. Inside, its living rooms are simply and tastefully furnished. The girls' rooms, too, are simple when they first move in, but usually take on a more collegiate air as the girls unpack and arrange the knick-knacks they have brought from home.

Girls who do not live in Memorial hall live in some of the smaller dormitories—the Residence hall, Howe house, or Hepburn house—or in private homes in the town. There is generally a scramble to find enough living quarters for the entering women in the fall, for it is an admitted fact that the townspeople who have rooms for students prefer to take in men rather than women. In the first place, men expect less in the way of service, and, though they are occasionally destructive, they are not so consistently "messy" as all women are wont to be. But even more important is the fact that when one takes feminine students one assumes responsibility for seeing that they observe university rules as to hours and so forth, while the men are not any trouble at all in this regard, having no social rules to observe.

All the honors open to sorority women on the campus are open to the unorganized woman as well, but it is admitted that the lack of organized backing in one's undertakings has in the past been here, as elsewhere, a handicap on the campus. One has had to be twice as outstanding to achieve the same recognition. The new system of awarding honors on the uniform basis of merit, judged according to an unvarying system of grading, will perhaps make this handicap a thing of the past.

As for university expenses, sorority house bills average $45 a month, and the cost of living at Memorial hall is comparable with this. Living quarters elsewhere on the campus, on the basis of room alone, are as low as $2 a week.

For students who eat their meals out the Union coöperative cafeteria, in the basement of the Union building, provides excellent food and plenty of it at the rate of 11 cents a meal, or 33 cents a day. Students must eat there for not less than a week at a time, and they take turns serving the food, clearing off the tables, and doing the dishes. Between 400 and 500 students take advantage of this opportunity to economize, and the downstairs cafeteria is an active spot at meal time during the week. The cafeteria is not open on Sundays.

University fees average $77 a year, and the minimum cost for books is approximately $20.

The budget for clothing and incidentals, of course, varies with each girl, and students at Indiana do not seem to have a great deal of money to spend. But that does not appear to interfere seriously with their enjoyment of college life.

Meet Modern Trader Horn!

Jack Redshaw Will Swap Anything

By GUY MURCHIE JR.

TRADER HORN was an old man with whiskers. Few modern business executives would want to consult him on budgetary control or merchandising methods, yet his business principles recently have been validated in a spectacular success.

Trader Horn's disciple in business is forty-year-old John Spencer Redshaw, a twentieth century trader who drives a truck instead of carrying a knapsack to hold his goods. His locale is the village of Granville, Ill.

Trader Jack Redshaw is a rugged individual from his boots to the top of his tawny head. His warehouse, formerly the Granville State Bank building, contains every sort of merchandise from mummified human hands to ostriches' eggs, from ruby wrist watches to bass viols. Even such things as speed boats and bowling alleys are not too much for Jack. He has them all in his shop, and if you have a diving suit, a genuine Hannibal's autograph, or an alligator's tail he might well make you a trade.

A stranger, strolling down the rather homely little street in the town of 900 inhabitants, would indeed open his eyes if he could see what is tucked away behind the innocent striped awning of the old bank building. And he would have good reason to wonder how any man could see his way into the strange occupation chosen by Jack Redshaw.

Trader Redshaw seems to have drifted into his occupation gradually, and he still calls trading just a hobby with him. Some day, he says, he's going to turn his hobby into a business. When that time comes he ought to do well, for he already has amassed a stupendous stock of merchandise with no one to help him but his wife.

Born in Spring Valley, Ill., Jack was brought at an early age to Farmington, Ill., where he went to school and worked in his father's coal mine during his off hours. He also developed a fondness for gazing into the few shop windows in town and calculating whether that baseball bat or that rifle was really worth what it said on the price tag. Mail order catalogs naturally held great fascination for the lad, and through them he familiarized himself further with relative values.

Grinding through the long years of school at Farmington, life at times hung heavy on young Jack's hands. Needing the spice of variety, he would frequently make trades with other boys. Life was a lot more pleasant when he could swap an old bicycle, which he didn't care much about anyhow, for a nice new repeating rifle, or a jackknife for a baseball glove — and his knowledge of values enabled him to come out pretty well in nine deals out of ten.

During the World war Redshaw served in the artillery, and afterward went to live in Granville, working in the coal mine there. Presently he was made postmaster, and while serving in that capacity he launched himself on his skyrocketing career. One of the first things he went in for was fountain pens. He bought a few score bamboo fountains pens at a wholesale price and kept his pockets filled with them. As he met his friends and neighbors around town he would show them the new pens. Many of his acquaintances already had old pens, and he had little difficulty trading with them, always asking and getting some money or some other article along with the old pen to make up for its age. By the time the bamboo pens were gone Jack had earned himself a handsome profit in used fountain pens, money, and other assorted objects. The money alone more than equaled what he had paid for his bamboo pens.

He collected guns from an early age, and rarely it was that he didn't do handsomely by himself in a gun trade. And then he began to advertise—mostly in the classified ad columns. It worked, and so he kept on, advertising more and more as his business grew.

Trader John Spencer Redshaw of Granville, Ill., surrounded by various odds and ends of his stock in trade.

A typical Redshaw advertisment describes Jack as an "exporter, jobber, importer — a connoisseur and dealer in guns and diamonds." It goes on to say: "We buy anything, sell anywhere, and trade any time. We deal only in high-class merchandise. Trade confirmed only when all parties concerned are fully satisfied." Among the featured articles of merchandise listed are: "Oriental rugs, stamps, old coins, birds' eggs, fur coats, ammunition, gym equipment, saxophones, marimbas, drums, adding machines, desks, dictaphones, books, business courses, lighting plants, motors, pulleys, vacuum cleaners, milling machines, line shafting, electric organs, tools."

As the late 1920s drifted on the trading business prospered like many another business—but instead of sinking his wealth in stocks, bonds, and intangible assets, shrewd Trader Redshaw held his wealth only in tangible goods — diamonds, suitcases, statues, tennis rackets, filing cabinets, motorcycles, stuffed loons, and pool tables. When stocks plummeted, Investor Jack Redshaw's wealth decreased scarcely at all. He actually profited by the depression, because of increased trading.

When a visitor is taken into the bank building, with its great piles of furniture, musical instruments, and one or two of nearly everything on earth, it is hard for him to imagine how any human could keep this vast hodge-podge of odds and ends straight in his mind. Yet Redshaw makes no inventories and keeps no written records of where or what anything is in his shop, or even in the great 15,000-square-foot annex warehouse which he had to erect near by to take care of his overflow goods, such as bowling alleys, merry-go-rounds, airplanes, and other incidentals. Even inside his vault, where he pulls out tray after tray of dazzling rings and necklaces and stickpins and bracelets and tiaras, all arranged in a haphazard phantasmagoria of blue and red and green and gold, the only records of what is where and where is what are in the brain of Redshaw.

And Jack is familiar with far more than the mere whereabouts of his innumerable possessions. He can tell any genuine stone from its imitation at a glance and is expert at judging its value. There is something about the polarity of diamonds, for instance, that diffuses the light in such a way as to produce sparkling reds and blues and greens that no glass of like shape could produce. And Jack will show you how to tell genuine pearls by putting them in your mouth and gripping them between your teeth. If the pearls feel smooth and slippery they are false. If they feel a trifle gritty they are real.

One might think from glancing at Jack's staggering array of merchandise that this treasure in a small town would be easy picking for a gang of today's smart crooks. But Jack has thought of that, too. Not only has he placed loaded guns at various points in his shop, but the walls are circled with tubes of methane gas that can be released at a moment's notice. And armed guards are on the job twenty-four hours a day. You don't see them watching you, nor do you see a dictograph, yet there is one concealed in the room which can be left in operation whenever Jack leaves.

Warehouse Resembles Museum

In spite of all this Jack has had certain adventures with hoodlums. He has been taken for a ride. It was in January, 1931, and his captors were five in number. The ride lasted four hours, but Jack lived to tell about it afterward. He hasn't ever told all, however, as he has become very wary of any further unpleasantness with the underworld.

It seems that his kidnapers were not bent on robbery, but wanted to use Jack as a "fence" to dispose of their ill-gotten gains. Jack refused, and he had to use both brains and nerve in doing so.

The people who go to Granville to trade are of every class, creed, and nationality, and Trader Redshaw's stock well reveals it. He has golf sets which belonged to pre-depression millionaires; jewelry from the nobility of far countries; horses, hunting dogs, guns, and other equipment from sportsmen; and, among countless other things, on his desk rests a miraculous carving of "The Last Supper," ten inches long, done by none other than Anton Lang, famous as the Christus in the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

Often a hard-headed stranger will go to Jack and begin to haggle for a bargain; then, when Jack is reluctant to meet his demands, he starts to walk dejectedly away. Under such circumstances Jack always keeps after the man in hopes of completing a deal, even if it must be at a loss. He reasons that it is a good investment to make a friend and that if he can't make money in a trade it is better to make a friend than to make nothing.

Redshaw can't be tried too far on this theory, however, and if any man thinks himself to be a sharper let him beware of Jack, who has a connoisseur's knowledge of everything from embroideries to fossils, and he is well acquainted with the latest technique in haggling.

When you ask Jack what he gets out of this trading hobby of his he replies that he gets "the joy of making a good trade." But that is putting it very modestly, for when you question him more closely on his philosophy he admits that there is even more of a kick for him in making a good friend. "On the average," says Jack, "I work only about one hour a day at my hobby." The rest of the time he is waiting around talking with friends, writing letters, reading, or observing human nature. He may not call the latter functions work, but there is little doubt but that they form an important part in the success of his hobby. Some time Trader Redshaw expects to travel to far parts of the earth, and he says that he can as easily carry on his trading hobby in Africa as in Granville. He doesn't know just how he would do it without his large supply of goods to choose from, but he knows that somehow he would succeed. No situation is too much for Trader Redshaw.

Lloyd's Takes Any Risk

Even Insures Against Sea Monster's Capture

By DAVID DARRAH

London, England.

LLOYD'S, the great insurance establishment in London, will take on any sort of a risk, no matter how strange it may be. Should you wish to insure yourself against losing on a horse in the Derby, or against twins, or rain on your vacation—Lloyd's will take the bet.

Though it deals mainly with the underwriting of shipping, it has spread its operations to an unlimited field. Just recently Lloyd's had to pay out thousands of dollars because of the death of the duke of Buccleugh — and this was not for life insurance. His daughter, Lady Alice Scott, was married to the king's third son, the duke of Gloucester. The death coming so soon before the date arranged for the wedding, the pomp and public ceremony attached to the marriage, as well as the colorful processions through the streets of London, had to be canceled.

Many shops, and hotels, theaters and others, had insured themselves against just such an occurrence which might result in their not getting the increased amount of business which should naturally be theirs during such a time of celebration. Even the groups who had arranged to build grand stands along the route of the royal procession had insured themselves against cancelation. And Lloyd's had to pay.

It was in 1666 that the great fire of London destroyed more than four-fifths of the city, but a section near the Tower of London was saved, and in that section stood a coffee house kept by Edward Lloyd, the man who has given his name to the great insurance corporation known to the world as Lloyd's.

Owing to its position, it became a meeting place for sea captains, merchants, and underwriters, and as time went on more and more a center of marine underwriting.

The business prospered to such an extent that in 1691 Edward Lloyd moved nearer the Royal Exchange, where he carried on business until his death in 1712, after which it was continued by his son-in-law. As Lloyd's became to be more and more recognized as a business center, not only for the insurance of ships but also for their sale, there developed a system of shipping intelligence which led to the publication in 1734 of a daily paper known as Lloyd's List. This has continued ever since and still is printed daily by Lloyd's in its present building.

The sale of ships was often done in the early days "by inch of candle." A pin would be run through a candle one inch from the top, and the bidding would begin with the lighting of the candle. It can easily be imagined how loud the shouts must have been from the frenzied buyers when the candle had burned down almost to the pin, for when the pin was uncovered by the flame the last and highest bid got the ship without further argument or appeal.

The present new building, which cost $7,500,000 and covers nearly an acre in the heart of the shipping district of the city of London, was opened by the king and queen of England about ten years ago.

There, in the center, is what is called "the Room," where all the underwriters and brokers have their desks and carry on their business. Members are admitted to Lloyd's only after extensive investigation of their credit and resources. If the prospective member is found to be satisfactory in all ways, honest, reliable, and able to pay any and all claims that are likely to arise, he is accepted upon payment of the fairly high entrance and subscription fees.

In the center of the Room is the announcer, officially termed the caller, with the Lutine bell over his head. This bell was one of the few things which could be salvaged from the wreck of the Lutine, which sank off Holland with bullion worth $5,000,000. Used for the last seventy years at Lloyd's headquarters, it is rung twice to bring silence when an important announcement is to be made, usually about the fate of some ship long overdue.

It is one of the many treasures to be seen at Leadenhall street in the collection which includes swords of honor from the Napoleonic wars, relics from famous ships, and an entire room filled with articles connected with Lord Nelson, the British admiral of Trafalgar. There are exhibited his battle standards, manuscripts, and pictures, and, most precious of all, his collar of the Order of the Bath.

The daughter society of the corporation—Lloyd's Register of Shipping—has a reputation as world-wide as Lloyd's itself. It was felt important that underwriters should have the full particulars of the ships offered to them for insurance, and that they should have information as to their seaworthiness or otherwise. To this end surveys are made on behalf of the Register, and all this information is contained in Lloyd's Register of British and Foreign Shipping.

Policies against the possible death or removal of statesmen and rulers are quite common. In fact, so many firms and people were taking out insurance on the political and actual life of President Roosevelt a year ago that the American ambassador in London had to speak to the British government about it, and this practice was stopped.

Those who had taken out the policies were not mere gamblers, but men and companies who stood to lose a great deal of business if Roosevelt did not finish his term and a great deal of money should there be further changes made in the value of the dollar by his successors.

There also are policies held by many on Hitler and Mussolini, against their death or loss of power.

When one of the employés embezzled $3,500,000 from the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, Lloyd's had to pay $2,000,000 because it had underwritten the reliability of the bank's personnel. As a matter of fact, Lloyd's saved itself $500,000 by its promptness in paying, [illegible] if it had waited until the next day the rate of exchange would have raised the total by this amount.

This loss, while heavy, was by no means the largest which the non-marine market at Lloyd's has had to meet. Earthquakes in San Francisco, Japan, and New Zealand brought claims over $5,000,000, and the San Francisco fire $80,000,000.

Of marine losses, that of the Titanic cost the market about $10,000,000, the fire on the Europa about $5,000,000, that which gutted the Atlantique $8,500,000, while the gold sunk in the Egypt, later salvaged, was insured at Lloyd's for about $10,000,000.

One of the frauds which were partly covered by Lloyd's policies was the case of Mme. Humbert's safe. These were to cover the total loss if the contents supposed to be in her safe were not there.

Mme. Humbert was the notorious widow of a French politician, and with her daughter she entertained lavishly all the principal statesmen, bankers, and leading personalities of Parisian society.

She succeeded in borrowing enormous sums of money on the security of deeds and valuables supposed to have been in the safe, which under the conditions of her husband's will could not be opened until a period of years had expired. Some of those who lent her money insured their risks at Lloyd's. Mme. Humbert, by means of litigation, skilfully prevented the safe from being opened for many years, and almost succeeded in marrying her daughter off as a great heiress.

The fraud was exposed in time, and when the safe was eventually opened it was found to be quite empty, and a very heavy claim was paid by those underwriters who had accepted the risk.

Some of the strange risks which Lloyd's has covered include that against the possibility of St. Paul's cathedral falling into the window of a neighboring shopkeeper, the Surrey Beekeepers' association insuring all its members against third-party risks caused by the stings of bees, a boy soprano against having his voice change, and a student group plan providing cash payments in compensation for school punishments and detentions.

Bing Crosby may insure his croon against colds, as Caruso did with his voice; Jimmy Durante his "schnozzle," or Helen Mencken her highly expressive hands. Such policies among actors and musicians are not uncommon.

Paderewski's hands and Pavlova's legs have been insured at Lloyd's for large sums. Mistinguett, France's most famous and beloved music hall star, valued her legs at a million dollars, and Pearl White, former American movie queen, her dimple at more than $65,000.

One of the most humorous cases which has come up is that of the man whose nagging wife left him in a fit of bad temper. He immediately went to Lloyd's and took insurance against the risk of her return!

Insurance against twins, triplets, or daughters is an everyday occurrence. Among other policies which might strike the ordinary member of the public as a little curious, but which are quite common, are policies to cover the costs in case of failure in a lawsuit; policies held by dressmakers who have laid down expensive plants and fear that a change in feminine fashions may ruin them; druggists, in view of the danger in mixing prescriptions; beneficiaries under wills, against being disinherited by later wills; farmers, against excessive rain, hail, or drouth; tradesmen, enjoying monopolies in certain districts, against competition; playwrights, theater owners, and publishers, against failure of plays or books; and big firms taking contracts from new customers whose credentials have not yet been tested.

Even the Loch Ness monster of Scotland was the subject of a policy. The Mills Olympia circus offered a reward of $100,000 for the safe delivery of the monster. Being prudent, Mr. Mills insured himself against having to pay the reward.

Kidney Acidity Curbed Quickly This Easy Way

Doctors Praise Cystex — Brings Quick Help

Cleans Out Acids and Poisons —Purifies Blood—Brings New Energy in 48 Hours

There are 9 million tiny, delicate tubes or filters in your Kidneys which must work every minute of the night and day cleaning out Acids, Poisons, and Wastes from your blood. If your Kidneys or Bladder do not function right, your body gradually becomes poisoned, you feel old and worn-out before your time, and may suffer from any of these energy-killing symptoms: Getting Up Nights, Loss of Vigor, Leg Pains, Nervousness, Lumbago, Swollen Joints, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Dark Circles Under Eyes, Headaches, Frequent Colds, Burning, Smarting, Itching, and Acidity.

But you need not suffer another day from poorly functioning Kidneys or Bladder without the benefits of a Doctor's special prescription called Cystex (pronounced Siss-tex).

Dr. T. J. Rastelli, famous Doctor, Surgeon, and Scientist of London, says: "Cystex is one of the finest remedies I have ever known in my medical practice. Any doctor will recommend it for its definite benefits in the treatment of many functional Kidney and Bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless."

Dr. T. J. Rastelli

Cystex is not an experiment—it is quick and sure in action and has been tested and proved in millions of cases throughout the world. Because it combats and corrects many functional Kidney disorders, Cystex has gained a world-wide reputation as a successful treatment. Dr. T. A. Ellis, graduate of Toronto University, recently wrote: "Cystex's influence in aiding the treatment of sluggish Kidney and Bladder functions cannot be over-estimated. I have here a formula which I have used in my own practice for many years with excellent results. Cystex hastens the passage of over-acid irritants, thereby overcoming a frequent cause of burning, itching, getting up nights and frequent urination."

Dr. T. A. Ellis

Because it is a special prescription for poorly functioning Kidneys, Cystex works fast to tone and soothe sore membranes, and brings a new feeling of energy and vitality in 48 hours.

Dr. C. Z. Rendelle, well-known Physician and Medical Examiner of San Francisco, recently wrote: "Since the Kidneys purify the blood, the poisons collect in these organs and must be promptly flushed from the system; otherwise they re-enter the blood stream and create a toxic condition. I can truthfully commend the use of Cystex."

Dr. C. Z. Rendelle

Because of its world-wide success in even the most stubborn cases, the Doctor's prescription called Cystex is offered to sufferers from poorly functioning Kidneys and Bladder under the fair-play guarantee to fix you up to your complete satisfaction or your money back on return of empty package. Get Cystex from any druggist and try it under the money-back guarantee. See for yourself how much younger, stronger, and healthier you will feel by using this special prescription. Cystex must fix you up and do the work to your entire satisfaction in 8 days, or cost you nothing under the money-back guarantee. Beware of substitutes and remember that the Kidneys are endangered by drastic, irritating drugs or neglect. Cystex is the only specially-prepared Doctor's prescription guaranteed for Kidney dysfunctions. Tell your druggist you must have Cystex (pronounced Siss-tex). Look for it in the black and red striped package.

THE DIARY OF A MAIDEN

Secret Bride of John Paul Jones

IN THE COURT OF

CATHERINE THE GREAT

Translated from the Russian by Ivan Narodny

Adapted by Margarita Orlov and Louise Bargelt

THE STORY TO DATE

Herewith is presented the tenth instalment of the intimate diary of Princess Anna Kourakina, maid of honor at the court of Catherine the Great of Russia and secret bride of the American naval hero, John Paul Jones. In the preceding chapters Princess Anna has told of her amazing and often appalling experiences at the court of Catherine, as licentious and as magnificent a court as ever the sun shone on. The princess is sent to Paris to obtain the services of John Paul Jones for Catherine, who wishes him to command one of her fleets against the Turks in the Black sea. Anna and John Paul fall deeply in love, and here begins one of the greatest romances of history. Anna convinces John Paul that their love must be kept secret until after his Black sea expedition. She has a haunting fear that the empress wishes John Paul as a lover as well as a fighter and that if she knows of their love it will be disastrous for them both. On Anna's return to Russia she visits her parents, who insist that Father Sergius, an old priest and dear friend of the family, return to St. Petersburg with her. John Paul arrives shortly, and he and Anna are secretly married. He is feted and dined, and it is only too apparent to Anna that the empress wants him—as companion, friend, fighter, and lover! In the midst of gathering clouds which foreshadow grief to come, Anna and Paul spend days and hours of great happiness.

Italics appearing in the text of diary are the editors' explanatory notes.

INSTALMENT X.

May 17, 1788.

THIS is our last morning together. John Paul leaves at daybreak tomorrow to join the Black sea fleet.

I must rejoice with him, that this honor which he has wanted so passionately, the command of her imperial majesty's fleet, is really to be his. I must smile when I bid him farewell. Smile and seem happy! I try to remember that he can't stay away forever, and that the months ahead will pass quickly for us both.

The empress is to provide him with one of her best traveling carriages and relays of horses will await him at the various stations along his route.

"I shall make ninety miles a day," he remarks casually.

"Why such speed!"

"The empress desires it. There is no time to lose, with affairs in the shocking state which all letters report. Little news gets through, and what does is bad."

We discuss the wisdom of writing to each other and reluctantly decide against it. Count de Segur, who understands something of the situation between us, declares that we must attempt nothing in the way of mail. No letters must pass between us. There are too many spies. He promises to dig up any precious bits of information for me that he can, about my beloved, and what is happening to him, and pass them on.

Later.

I attend the last banquet for my proud and beaming rear admiral, John Paul Jones.

I do not sit with the empress and John Paul, but at a smaller table, near them. Prince Naryshkin is placed beside me, and chatters volubly, but I scarcely hear what he is saying.

I am watching the empress and my beloved, who has the place of honor at her right. My commodore must be heaping on her the extravagant compliments her vanity craves, for she laughs a great deal. She gloats over praise and it stimulates her like strong wine.

She knows how to talk, our empress. She has the logic of a man, with the spirited animation of a Parisian. Her conversation ranges over every known subject. Her body may be ponderous and move with difficulty from one room to another, but her brain darts swiftly across the whole world of people and events.

At the end of the banquet all the guests join in singing Russia's triumphal hymn. Tears spring to her majesty's eyes. She is full of sentiment and her emotions are easily stirred.

Surely I have been allowing my imagination to run away with me. She cannot be the inhuman creature I have of late been picturing her.

The guests drift into the huge reception halls, where flags are gaily flying. This is a great event, in honor of a great man—my John Paul!

My heart pounds for a word alone with him, but I fear it will be unwise. I can see him, surrounded by a group of admiring courtiers, from the obscure corner where I am standing, half hidden in the shadows. His deep, piercing eyes are moving restlessly in every direction. He is seeking me out and suddenly I realize that he has seen me!

The empress is not in sight and I feel that he is searching in his mind for an excuse to come over to me. But at this moment the Master Court Chamberlain goes up to him and draws him aside for a few whispered words.

John Paul's expression changes to one of stark dismay. I wonder if he has received bad news—orders, perhaps, which will delay still longer his trip to the Black sea.

This would be heart-break for him and I watch him anxiously. He makes no reply to the Chamberlain's message, but turns his back on him abruptly, staring hard at me. Then he mutters something over his shoulder to the messenger, and without even looking at him strides over to my corner.

His face is transformed, dark with anger and despair, and his eyes blaze wrathfully.

"My God, Anna, I am summoned to meet her imperial majesty in her private suite at midnight! What shall I do? I'm not going, of course. But what shall I say?"

I stand rigid. So I have not been fighting phantoms after all. My fears have not been fantastic. The blow which I have been expecting has fallen.

"What shall I do?" he repeats frantically.

"You—must go, dear," I answer quietly. It is strange how strength does come to one when it is needed, comes and sustains, even though all one's world is rocking and swaying.

"You tell me this? He looks as if I had dealt him a mortal blow.

"Your whole future depends on it!" I can not let him see my anguish. If I am not firm there is no telling what may happen. He is quite beside himself. "When you reach the empress say whatever you think is best. Do what seems wisest. But go, dear—you must!"

May 18, 1788.

I pass from the ordeal of last night to the ordeal of today.

John Paul rode away at daybreak. Life goes on without regard for what we wish or suffer. We just go along with it.

About 2 o'clock this morning I hear a soft knock at my door. Every one is asleep excepting myself. I hasten downstairs.

"Who is there?"

"John Paul."

I open the door and the next moment I am enfolded in a pair of strong arms.

"I have disobeyed all orders, but I had to see you again."

He draws me into my study where the logs, still warm on the hearth, cast a dim light over the room. Still holding me close, as if he would never let me go, he draws me to him on the couch.

"I couldn't go away without telling you what happened. I knew you couldn't stand it."

"What—did happen?" I breathe.

"The empress' manner was simple and extremely cordial. She met me, as it were, with open arms. She extended her hand and I bowed low and kissed it.

"She was seated on a divan and she motioned for me to take a seat beside her. I obeyed. As I recall, I was stricken speechless. I had planned carefully just what I should say, but the words refused to come. I thought of Count de Segur's story of the time when he first met the empress and all his thoughtfully rehearsed phrases deserted him.

"She began immediately to praise me. 'You are a great hero, chevalier. I have known many men in my life, but none with the great distinction of dauntless heroism which you bring to us.'"

"I made a modest protest at this, but hoped devoutly she would keep on discussing my military valor. I was on surer ground there."

"I took her hand and held it firmly in my own."

"'Your imperial majesty, you flatter me! Far, far above my humble deserts. How often have I written you—that to me you are the most wonderful woman in the world. I bow before you, the mightiest empress who ever sat upon a throne. But now, at this moment, I am overwhelmed. I only know that you are doing me too great an honor, a favor beyond all imagining and far exceeding what I merit.'"

"I wish, Anna, I could describe to you the way she looked at me. Questioning, puzzled, enormously interested, but I gave her no time to answer."

"'I am aware, your imperial majesty, that in granting me this boon you are seeking my pleasure, rather than your own. You feel a compulsion to indulge a guest who has traveled so far, and at great risk to serve you.'"

"I hesitate. She is silent, calm, and I find myself wishing that a sudden shaft of light would illuminate the inner recesses of her mind. What emotions am I arousing in her?

"'You have entertained me with lavish hand, you have chosen me from a world of brave men who would go any lengths to serve you, you have made me rear admiral and given me charge of your fleet. But this, the last honor which you would heap on my humble self, I cannot ever accept!'

"I slip to my knees, I cover her hands with kisses.

"'I am only a commoner, you are an empress. The blood of generations of rulers flows in your veins. In mine there is only the blood of toilers who have lived close to the soil and wrestled with the muddy earth.'"

"'I could make you a prince,' she declares impulsively. But there is a frown between her eyes, as if there is something about what I am saying which she does not quite understand.

"'Your imperial majesty, I could not accept such a title.' I am beginning to be a little desperate! Supposing she does not grasp, or refuses to grasp, the drift of my words. 'Much as it would delight and honor me, my country would object. The colonies will not even permit me to use, in America, the title of 'chevalier' which King Louis so graciously bestowed upon me.'"

"Her eyes darken and her voice grows a trifle cold. My protestations are displeasing her.

"'You are serving me,' she cries imperiously. 'If I choose to make you a prince, then you are a 'prince' for all the world to recognize!'

"I play my last card now. 'But that would not change my heritage, your imperial majesty. I should still remain a commoner. And you would one day regret this act of generosity, the greatest act, perhaps, your truly great heart has ever contemplated.'

"I rose, as if waiting to be dismissed."

"What did she say then?" I interrupt. I am breathless. "Does my poor, dear John Paul dream for a moment that his words are deceiving the empress?"

"She dismissed me."

"Yes?"

"She lost no time about it. She was quite through with me, I think. Her eyes had lost their friendliness, but she was regal and impassive. If she knew that she was a woman scorned, she gave no sign. As I was going out she laughed softly:

"'The Princess Anna said once that you were no diplomat. I am convinced now that she was wrong. You are a master diplomat, and a puritan. You and Anna are two puritans—a pretty pair!'"

My heart sinks as I hear those words. I remember when she threw them at me, not so many months ago.

She will never forgive my John Paul for this thing which he has done to her. Never, never!

I can hardly keep back my tears. "O, it is I who have brought this misfortune on you," I cry. "If it had not been for me! I should have made you bow to her demands, for they were demands, and you have flouted them. You have tossed them back in her face!"

"Now you are being a foolish, silly little girl." He springs to his feet, and going over to a table by the window, pours me a glass of wine.

"Rest assured, Anna, I did what I wished." He laughs shortly. "The empress is quite impossible. Of the two evils I'd almost prefer a sound knouting in the public park. She can do what she likes with me now. Do you think she will cancel my Black sea appointment?"

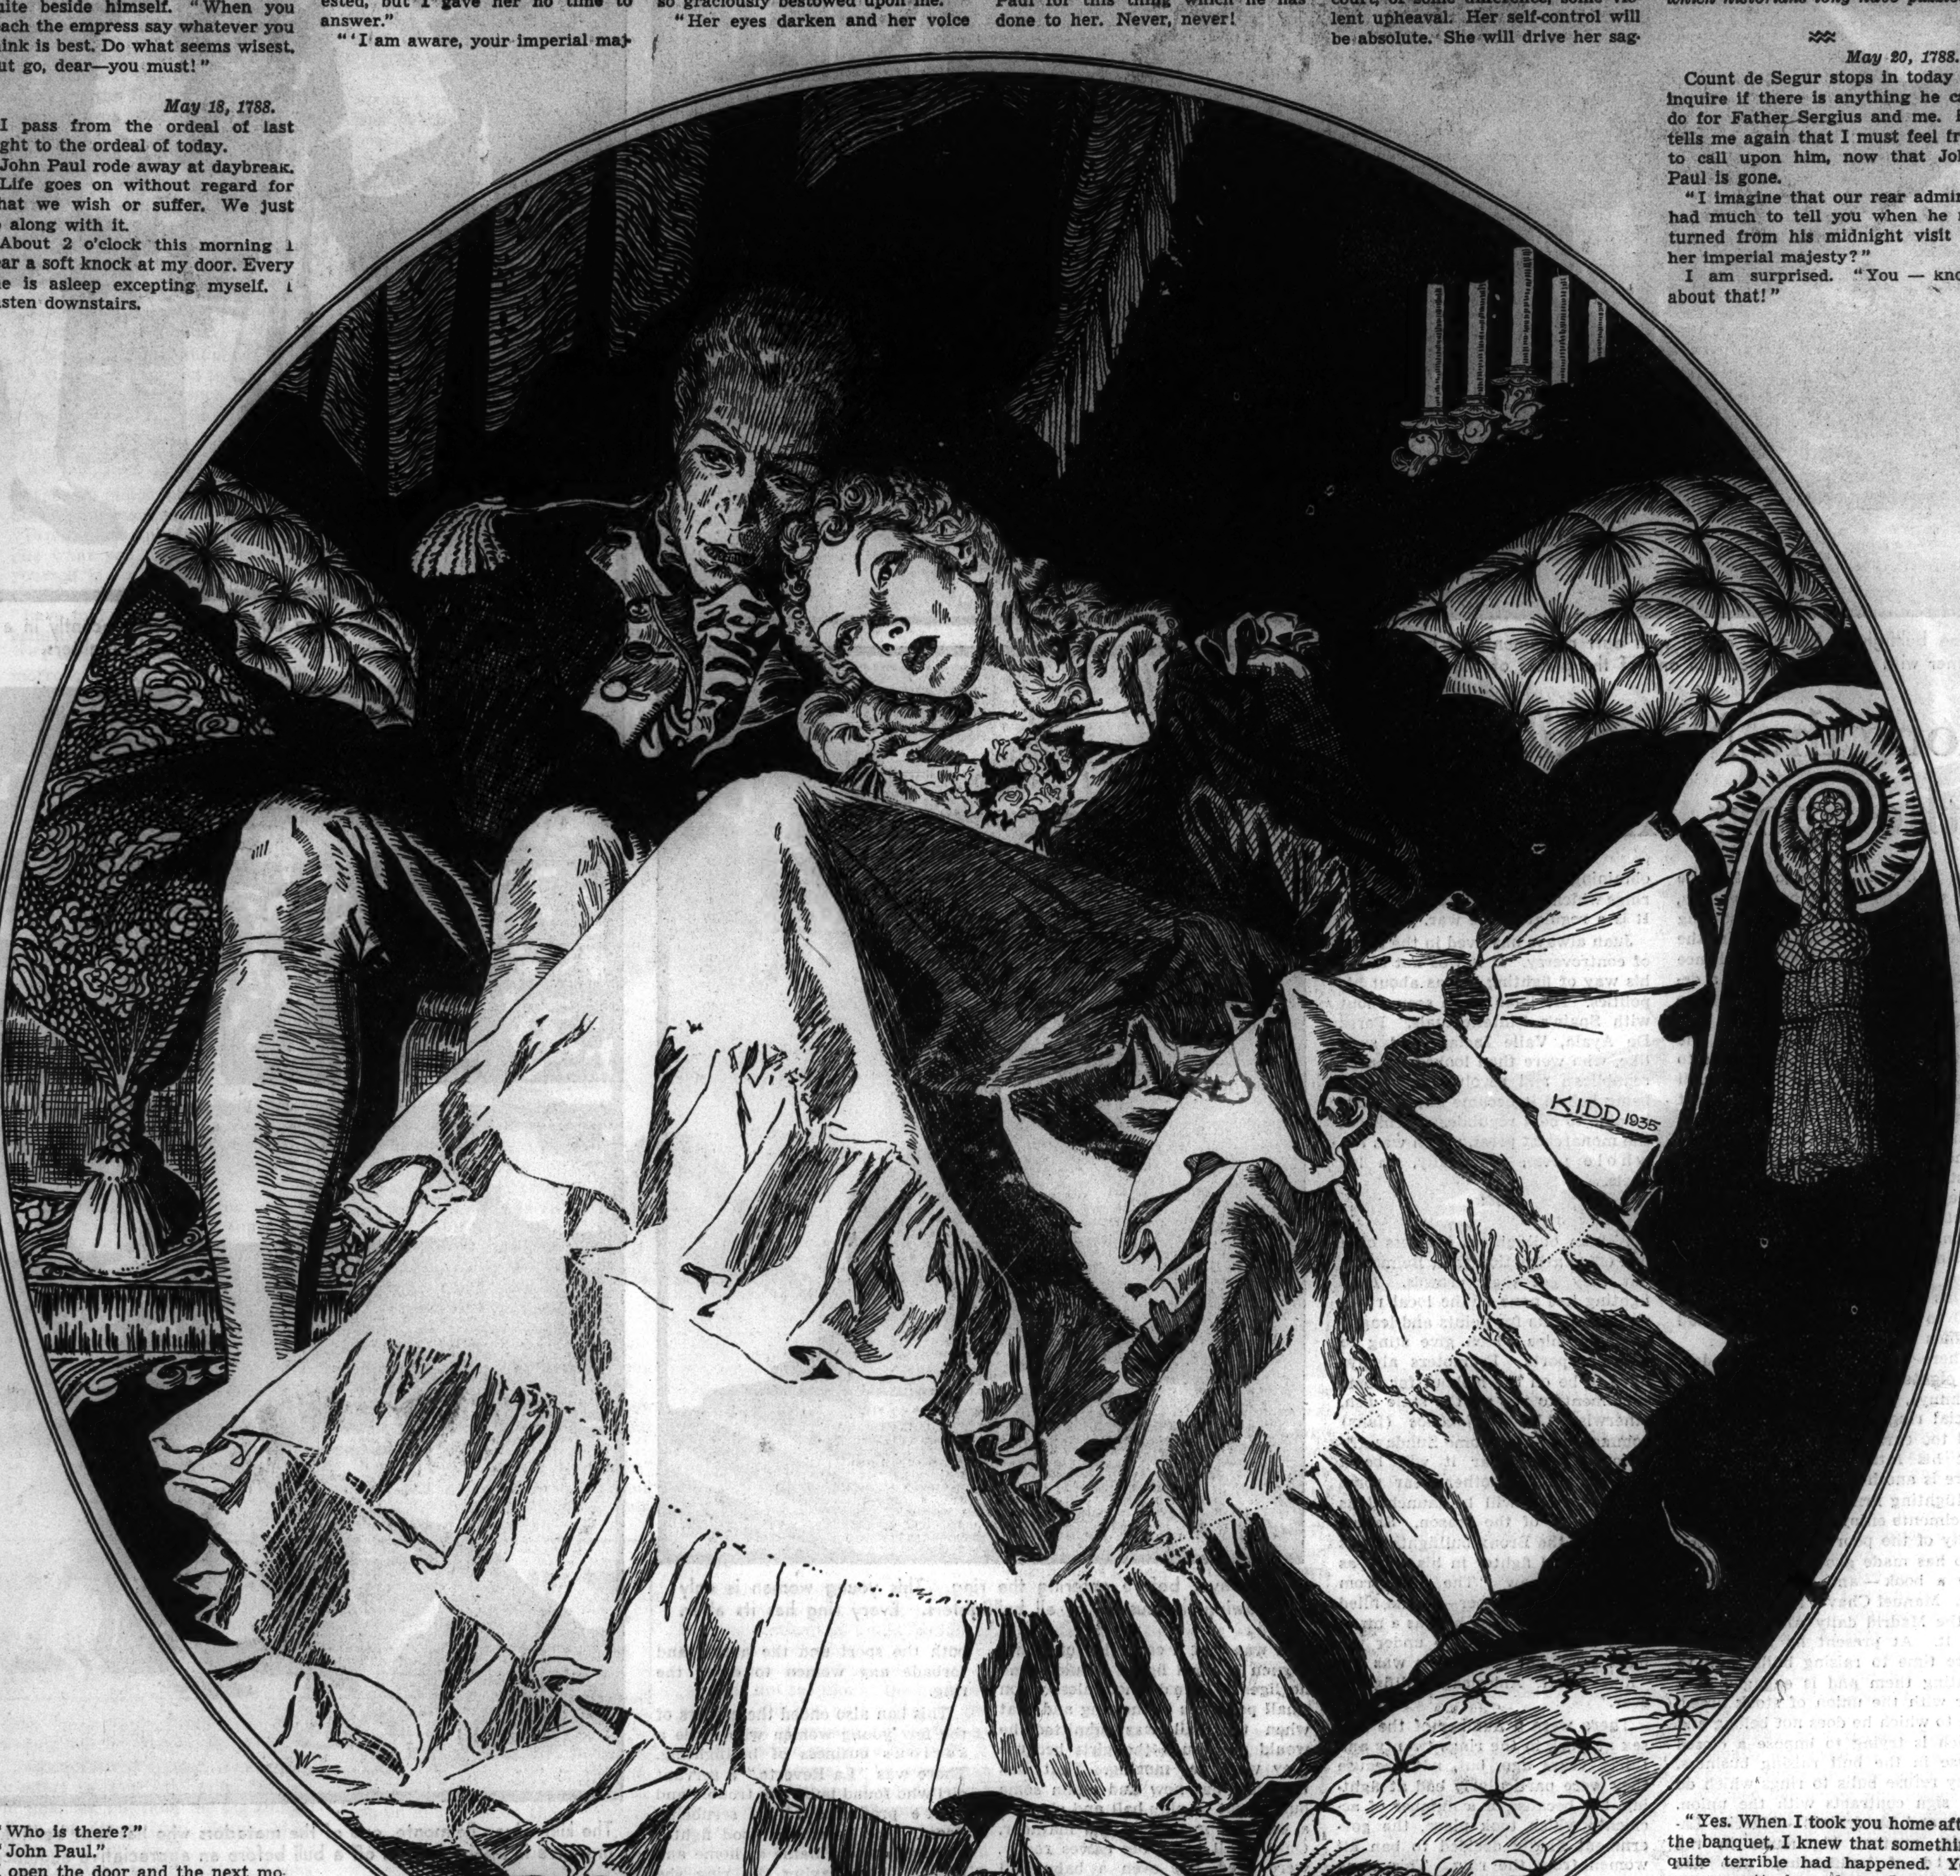
My heart goes out to him. He is deeply worried and anxious, for all his cool words.

I do not answer for a moment. I must crush my own fears and not tell him what I know is true. That before his footsteps had ceased to sound down the marble corridors she had rung for her Master Chamberlain and ordered spies to follow him. That she knows even now where he is, and will always know, so long as we both shall stay in Russia.

So I smile and draw his dear face close to my heart.

"Now it is you who are silly, John Paul! Of course she won't cancel your appointment, nor interfere with your Black sea trip. That would be an admission to all her court, of some difference, some violent upheaval. Her self-control will be absolute. She will drive her sagging flesh to form a mask for her emotions, as she did when you left her. Only—be careful, darling! Be careful to make no enemies if you can possibly avoid it. And never, never try to send me a letter. It might prove quite fatal."

He agrees to this and his arm slips around me.



"I couldn't go away without telling you what happened. I knew you couldn't stand it."

* * *

Later.

I tell Father Sergius what happened last night. He is very grave. I can see that he is distressed beyond words, but for my sake he tries not to show it. But he cannot veil the cloud in his eyes.

"We can only hope, and pray, my Anna. That was a hard blow for the empress. She has the pride of an insatiable voluptuary. She has changed greatly, every one says, these last few years, and is clinging with fierce tenacity to a bygone youth.

"She may, or may not, seek redress for last night's humiliation," he continues, "but be that as it may, I fear that John Paul no longer has her for a friend."

History has never been able to explain, satisfactorily, John Paul's tragic failure in Russia.

Why, after he left St. Petersburg, to take command of the fleet, did the empress suddenly lose all interest in him?

Why, after he had won battles for her in the Black sea, did she refuse to give him the credit for them?

Why, after he returned to court, did she permit the storms of undeserved scandal to break about his head?

Why did she refuse to investigate the source of the scandal and surround him on all sides with spies?

Why, after refusing him further commissions and virtually forcing him to accept a "two years' leave of absence," did she receive him but once at court, and then only for a few minutes and at Count de Segur's impassioned urging?

Perhaps the little episode which the Princess Anna describes in her diary, the secret meeting behind the locked doors of Empress Catherine's boudoir, and its unexpected dénouement, is the simple and logical answer to these questions over which historians long have puzzled!

May 20, 1788.

Count de Segur stops in today to inquire if there is anything he can do for Father Sergius and me. He tells me again that I must feel free to call upon him, now that John Paul is gone.

"I imagine that our rear admiral had much to tell you when he returned from his midnight visit to her imperial majesty?"

I am surprised. "You — know about that!"

"Yes. When I took you home after the banquet, I knew that something quite terrible had happened. You were so utterly undone. I returned to the palace and observed that at an early hour, for such an occasion, the empress retired to her boudoir. Shortly after I noted that John Paul was leaving the reception hall. I followed and saw that he was met by the Master Chamberlain in one of the upper corridors and escorted towards the empress' suite."

"He was only there about fifteen minutes."

Count de Segur's shrewd eyes narrowed. "He left so soon?"

"He made some excuse——"

"And thereby goes on record as the first man who escaped, or ever wanted to escape, probably, after having been summoned to a rendezvous by the empress."

"Will she forgive him?" I ask eagerly, this question nearest my heart.

"In time, of course. She is a busy woman and has many things on her mind. Stop thinking about it. That is why I came here today. To tell you to forget it, as she will. At this court horrors of one kind or another happen every day. Be a wise little princess and put it out of your mind."

I shall try to do what he tells me. If only Father Sergius stays close, he will help. He is my greatest comfort.

July 5, 1788.

The weeks drag on weighted feet and I have little heart to write in my diary.

Empress Catherine keeps aloof. She sends me written instructions in regard to the work she wishes done, but never requests a personal interview. For which I am devoutly thankful!

Count de Segur calls every day on Father Sergius and me. He is always hopeful, cheerful, sure that everything will work out for the best.

Today, however, he is plainly ruffled over the trouble that John Paul is having with the British officers.

"He has had to divide command with that abominable Nassau-Siegen—the scarlet livered cur!" he rages. "If there are any victories Nassau-Siegen will get the credit for them."

"But the empress promised John Paul sole command!"

The count shakes his head gloomily. "Promises are easy! She is losing interest in her rear admiral whom she moved heaven and earth to get over here a few months ago. She read me a letter last night from Nassau-Siegen which hinted that Jones has lost his far famed boldness and strength."

"O, that is all a plot being formed against him!" I protest. "Can't you make the empress understand?"

"I can try, my dear princess. She is not yet wholly under Nassau-Siegen's thumb."

* * *

July 10, 1788.

All St. Petersburg is celebrating the reports of two successful naval battles against the Turks in the Black sea.

Prince Nassau-Siegen is receiving all the credit. Flags are flying in his honor. No mention is made of John Paul.

"It is just what I expected," Count de Segur exclaims heatedly at luncheon today. "Jones has done the fighting, Siegen has collected the glory."

"How can the empress be so blind?" inquires Father Sergius, in genuine distress.

"Nassau has been a favorite for some time. Jones is new—and has already proven a disappointment in some respects," the count answers with a grimace.

"I have been talking with a few returned sailors. They are all enthusiastic for John Paul," Father Sergius remarks.

"As far as I can see, the greatest feat that Nassau has performed up to date is the destruction of nine stranded Turkish ships which John Paul wanted to save and add to the Russian fleet. Nassau wouldn't hear to this, but had them all fired and watched their destruction gleefully. Three thousand Turks, begging for mercy, and being slowly roasted in the flames, was Nassau's idea of an entertaining sight."

I am heartsick at all this. I know how badly John Paul must have felt over the burning of the Turkish ships. Such wanton destruction of men and property!

Both of the victories over the Turks in June, 1788, were entirely due to Jones' judgment and strategy, much hindered though he was by the sabotaging of Nassau-Siegen.

Jones' mistake came from giving too much credit to Nassau. He seems to have been too intent on his enterprise and too anxious to conciliate Nassau, to think or care about recognition. Later he realized that he had blundered, in his lack of self-assertion. He also had much to endure from the hostilities and treacheries of those under him, as well as from Prince Potemkin's capriciousness, and ever changing plans.

There is no question that if Jones had been given full command he would have swept the Turks from the Black sea, captured many of their ships and added them to Russia's fleet, and doubtless have arrived, in time, at Constantinople.

But there were too many odds against him. The British officers, for the most part, remained stubbornly hostile and took sides with Nassau against him. He did, however, win over a number of the Russian officers by his ability in naval strategy, and his seamen were devoted to him. When he left, they said:

"We have all of us lost a father!"

Nov. 20, 1788.

Father Sergius returns for luncheon today with marvelous news!

John Paul is on his way to St. Petersburg—and to me!

My heart sings. John Paul is coming back at last.

There is no doubt of it now. The Count de Segur tells Father Sergius to give me the good word and that he will be over this afternoon with more news and details.

I kneel before my ikon. Dear God, I thank you again. With all my heart, I thank you, for bringing my dear one home to me!

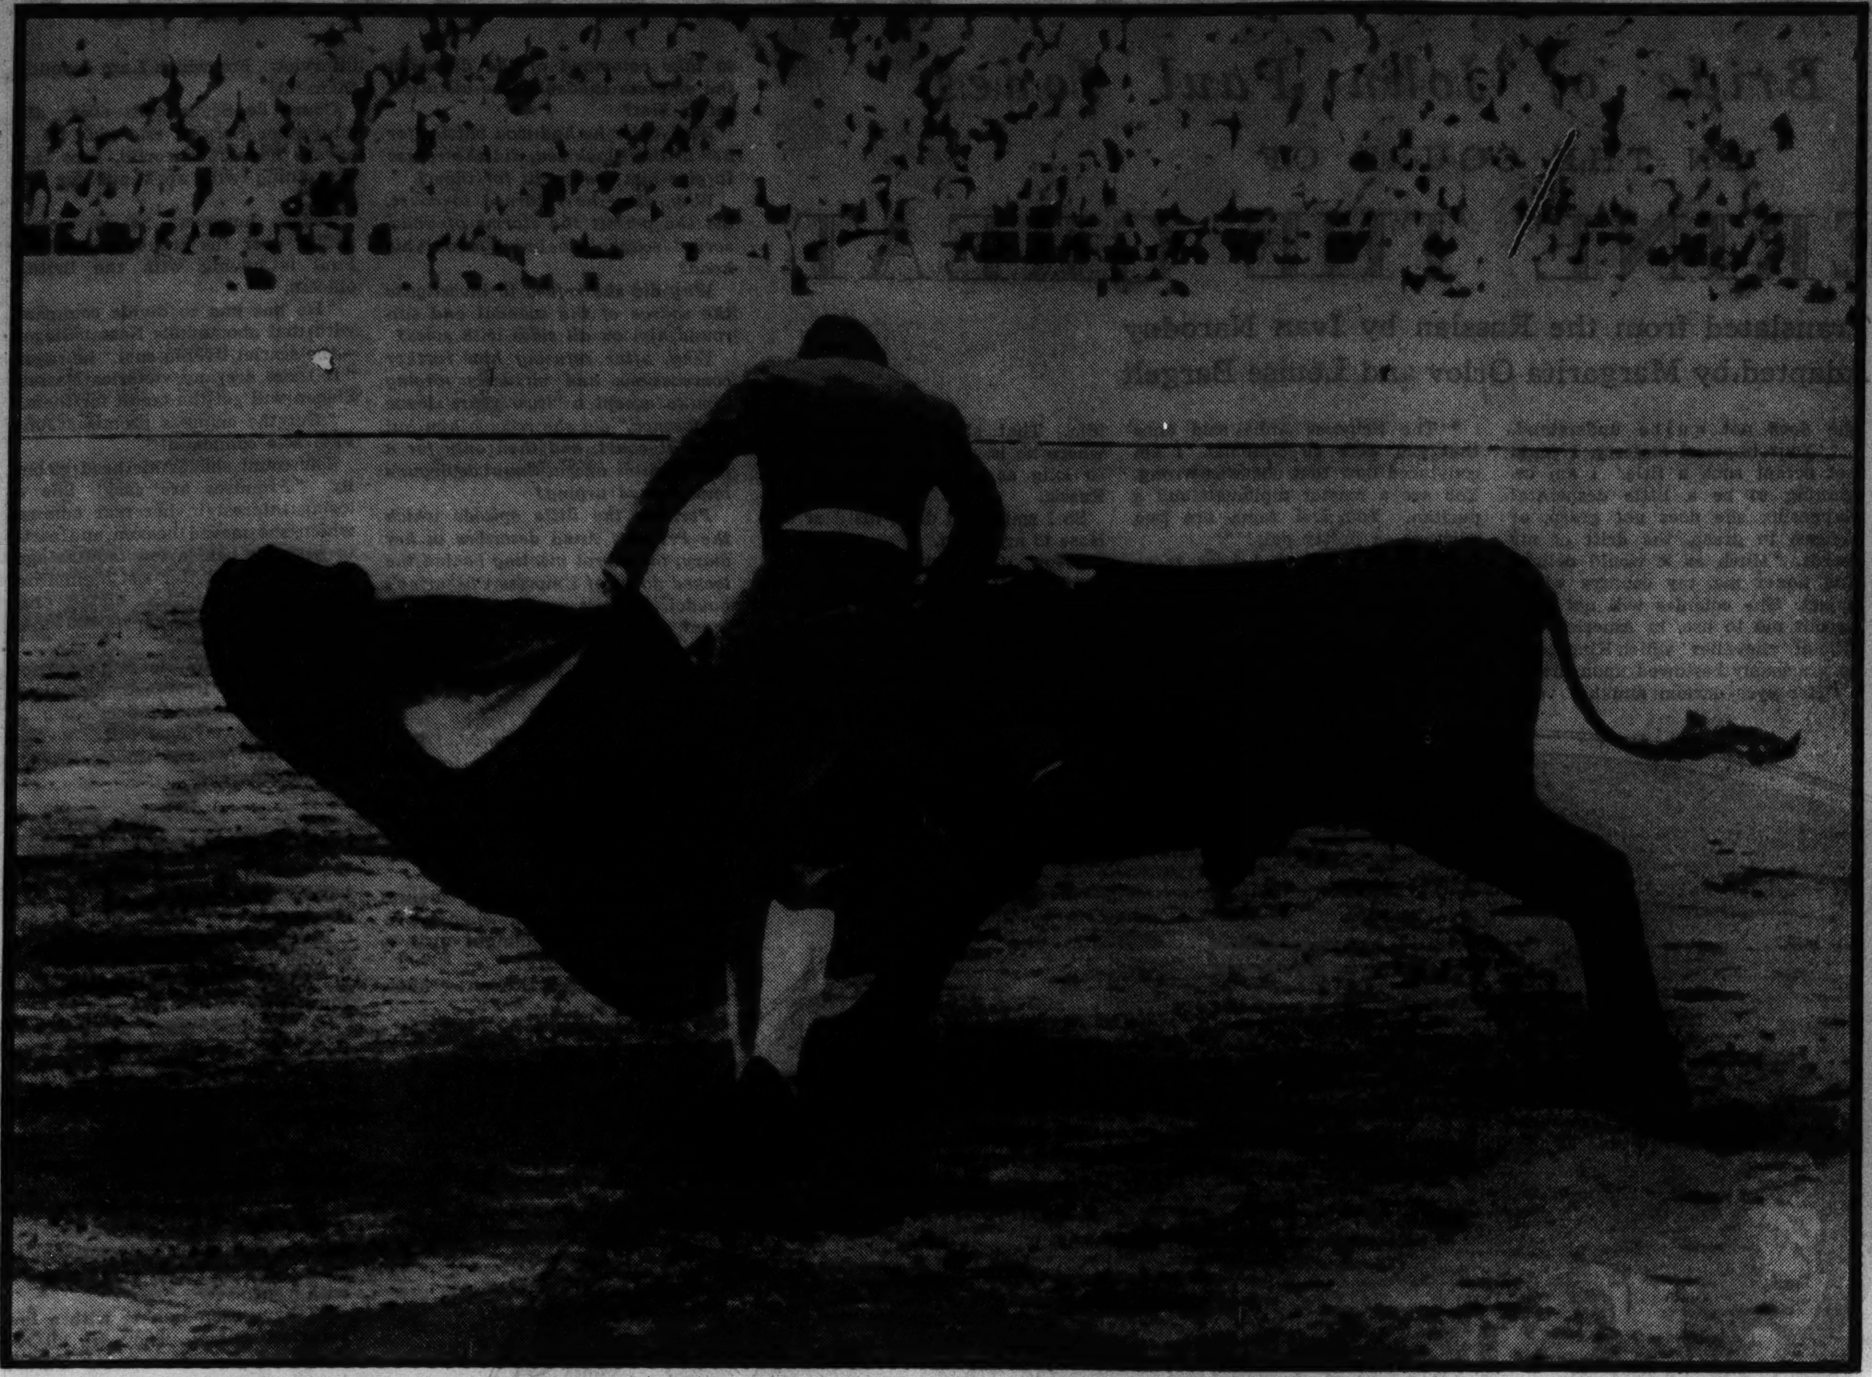
The Truth About the Woman Bullfighters of Spain



Juanita Cruz, Spain's foremost feminine bullfighter, handling a bull with deft movements of her cape. She fought three times last summer with moderate success in one of the plazas of Madrid.

These two elegantly attired young women appeared recently in a Madrid bull ring. They failed miserably as bullfighters.

Girls Are Among the Novelties That Keep the Sport Alive

By HENRY BUCKLEY

Madrid, Spain.

THE brilliant fighting of dynamic little Juan Belmonte, who is now forty-five years of age, and the reappearance in the ring of a number of woman bullfighters have been the two features of the 1935 bull season, which now has come to an end.

The critics continue to chorus dismally that the bulls and the fighters are not what they used to be; the ring owners continue their deadly feud with the stock breeders—but there is still no sign of the spectacle vanishing from the map of Spain. There were 250 more or less important fights last summer, and the new ring in Madrid—23,000 capacity—was filled again and again despite the fact that there were three other rings open in Spain's capital. The casualty list has been average—some five or six killed, all lesser known fighters or fighters' assistants.

What snap there was in the most recent season came mainly from the presence in and around the rings of Belmonte—otherwise known as "John the Earthquake." He appeared in fewer than a dozen fights between April and October, but what he did when he was in the ring was sufficient to galvanize a sport which can only live with the aid of constant stimulants and novelties. Some friends say he will not appear again in a Spanish ring. At present he is off to South American shores, where a Venezuelan producer has offered a record fee of $70,000 for four fights—not bad pay for killing eight bulls and spending ten hours in the arenas.

The vivacious but far from handsome Juan is always popping in and out of the Spanish ring. He started fighting in 1910, retired "for good" in 1920, came back in 1926, and retired, again "for good," in 1927. Last year he came back again, and now it looks as if he had had enough. The idealists like to argue that Belmonte just can't keep away from the lure of the bulls. The cynics hit back that Juan could resist the lure wonderfully—but that his bank balance doesn't.

Bullfighters have a big pull over performers in other sports in that age is not a big handicap, at least until fifty is turned. Rafaez Gomez, "El Gallo" (The Cock), has been fighting for thirty-five years and still managed to appear in half a dozen big fights last summer, but then very few fighters can dodge the bull's horns with such admirable dexterity. He has made dodging danger both an art and a science, and his dives over the fence when a bull gets a little out of hand are classical. But people put up with things from El Gallo which would bring a shower of bottles and cushions when done by a younger man.

But Belmonte does not dodge danger; he sails right into its midst. He is alive because he has only fought a couple of score encounters in the last fifteen years. When Juan is in the ring it is usually difficult to sort him out from the bull; they are so close together. He is as full of temperament as a prima donna. His mass of black hair flops over his brow and he literally attacks the bull as if he were storming a fortress. When Belmonte goes after the bull with the red cloth, the muleta, in one hand and a long, shining sword of fine Toledo steel in the other, then the whole audience stands up in order not to miss a detail, and the foreign visitors, who were full of indignation at the brutal treatment of the horses in the first stage of the fight, are liable to hold their breath and feel a thrill in spite of themselves at the sight of this long-haired little man who stands poised motionless as a mountainous fighting bull, one ton of gristle and bone behind two great sweeping horns pointed fine like stilettos, charges him again and again, those death-dealing points missing his frail body by millimeters only. Sometimes they do not miss. In his regular fighting days from 1910 to 1920 he averaged two bad wounds each season.

There are two Belmontes today. His eighteen-year-old son, "Juanito" (Johnny), appeared in several provincial rings last summer, but it is still too early to say whether he is just his father's son or whether there is another embryo star of the bullfighting firmament in the offing.

Belmonte enjoys the natural popularity of the poor down-and-out boy who has made good. His life reads like a book—and soon will make one. Manuel Chaves Nogales, editor of the Madrid daily Ahora, is writing it. At present he is devoting more time to raising bulls than to fighting them and is engaged in a war with the union of stock breeders, to which he does not belong and which is trying to impose a closed house in the bull raising business. They refuse bulls to rings which do not sign contracts with the union. Juan and his friends—Marcial Lalanda, another big name in the world of bullfighting, also has bought a ranch and is selling bulls—supply bulls to the rings that hold out against the union. In return this outfit uses pressure to prevent Belmonte, Lalanda, and others from obtaining contracts to appear in the rings which the union has signed up. It is a regular cattle war.

Juan always has lived in the midst of controversy. If it was not about his way of fighting it was about his politics. He liked to be seen about with Spain's "intellectuals," Perez De Ayala, Valle Inclan, and such like, who were then looked upon as republican and revolutionary—that being before it became almost fashionable to be a republican. This set the monarchist press, which was the whole press, practically, on his heels.

Woman bullfighters are less of a box office attraction than Belmonte, but they get their crowds. Bullfighting has none of the local rivalries and fights for points and league championships which give sting to other sports. Promoters always have to be on the lookout for some condiment to pep up the stale dish, otherwise the aficionados (fans) commence to stay home Sunday afternoons. One year it will be a Negro fighter, another year some foreigner who will be launched as the novelty of the season. Sidney Franklin, the Bronx bullfighter, was quite a good fighter in his way—as those who saw "The Kid from Spain" will remember—but he filled the rings not because he was a mean hand at twirling a cape under the bull's nose, but because he was the "first North American bullfighter ever."

There were a number of the fair sex at work in the rings twenty and thirty years ago, but, not because they were particularly bad at fighting, but because of a number of accidents which took place, the government finally decided to ban all women from the ring. This came about because it occurred to some promoter to ginger the less formal bouts by a variation of the "living statue" number which still features in music halls and cabarets. The idea was that a collection of young women of good figure should stand negligently and motionlessly on small pedestals in the ring and that when the bull was admitted he would not touch the girls because they were not moving. That was the idea, but now and again some bull forgot to play ball and charged a señorita instead of the matador. Only small bulls, big calves really, were used, but even a baby bull weighs enough to hurt if he takes to throwing his weight around. The government at the time quite rightly thought that it was a barbarous sort of business which discredited both the sport and the nation and forbade any women to enter the ring.

This ban also ended the careers of the few young women who made a serious business of bullfighting. There was "La Reverte," a servant girl who found bulls less trouble and more profitable than scrubbing floors. She became a good fighter and had quite a name at home and abroad. On leaving the ring she devoted herself to another kind of business and is now a well known citizen of Cadiz.

One article of Spain's bright and shining new republican constitution mentions that sex shall not be the subject of privilege. Several young women argued that this article, therefore, virtually abolished the decree forbidding them to fight bulls. The first governments of the republic did not see it that way, or did not want to. The cabinet ministers were mostly earnest souls from the "intellectual" classes who disapproved heartily of bullfighting and probably would have suppressed it if they had dared to do so. However, all that is past and Spain is being run again by persons without fastidious prejudices of that kind, and the comprehensive authorities have not stood in the way of the promoters anxious to exploit this new racket of the señoritas toreras.

Nothing would be so mistaken as to imagine that among the señoritas of 1935 bullfighting constitutes a powerful lure. In the first place, very few Spanish women have any other interest in bullfighting than that which may arise owing to the passions which matadors are apt to inspire in feminine bosoms. Believe it or not after looking at Juan Belmonte's picture, even the ugliest bullfighter has shoals of admirers of the opposite sex.

Of the aspirants for fame few take the career seriously. Of these few Juanita Cruz is the outstanding performer. Her real name is Hernandez, but one must admit that Cruz sounds a lot better. This correspondent has talked to her, and his impression was that there are lots of little girls of ten running around the streets of Madrid who could give Juanita points in an intelligence test and still beat her. This is, however, in the best tradition of bullfighting, where intelligence is discounted. The one "intellectual" of the ring, Ignacio Sanchez Mejias—he [illegible] lay which was not a good play, but then many people cannot even write a bad play—was killed last year by an unintellectual bull.

Juanita is powerfully built, a square-shouldered girl of twenty with a plump, pale face and a certain matronly aspect in the severe and matronly attire in which she fights—very different indeed from the gaudy ornateness of the flippant young señoritas who make one appearance in the ring for the sake of the publicity and who never return because no one will have them, not even if they appeared without pay. Juanita doesn't drink, doesn't smoke, has no hobbies, and when not practicing on tiny bulls or even on wooden heads trundled by small boys, on which the fighters practice the various cape movements, sits at home and sews or goes to the movies or drives out in her auto. "Occasionally I allow her to go to a café, but not often," says her manager, "because it is necessary to build up personality and prestige around a coming figure."

It cannot be said that Juanita appears to inspire in male onlookers the same attraction which her brother bullfighters have for the women in the audience. This probably saves her a good deal of time and allows her to take bullfighting very seriously indeed. She knows how to maneuver the bull by swinging a cape so that the animal chases the end of the cape instead of the holder, and she can slay a bull with as much dexterity as many of her male colleagues. Her technique is good, but she lacks the snap which a first-rate fighter must have in his work. She fought three times in one of the smaller plazas in Madrid last summer and had moderate success. Naturally, the bulls she fights are small.

Another young woman with the attractive and presumably newly acquired name of Luisa Paramount fights bulls, very badly, on horseback. Two others who have had a certain amount of success are two sisters with the obviously genuine names of Enriqueta and Amalia Palmeño. These two between them killed some sixty small bulls last season, and, according to the reports in the Madrid press, they invariably cut off the ear of the victim, which is an honor, and often the tail as well, which is an additional honor. Their career in the provinces has been one long trail of success, which may be true or may be merely good publicity. No reporter, even in Spain, would think of faking the result of a football match, but it is very different with the bullfighters who disappear from the ring under police protection. They are reported in Madrid as having had a brilliant afternoon, been conceded maximum honors and carried out of the ring shoulder high. Nobody appears to object to this kind of thing.

This correspondent, not having met anyone who has seen the Palmeño sisters fight, cannot say whether it is their technique or their publicity which is so good, but they cannot be altogether bad by any means, for they have appeared in more than a dozen provincial towns of importance.

A novelty which came indirectly to enliven the season was a very interesting talk given in one of Madrid's largest theaters on the psychology of bulls by a well known Catholic priest, Father Laburu, under the auspices of the powerful Catholic organization known as the Association of Fathers of Families.

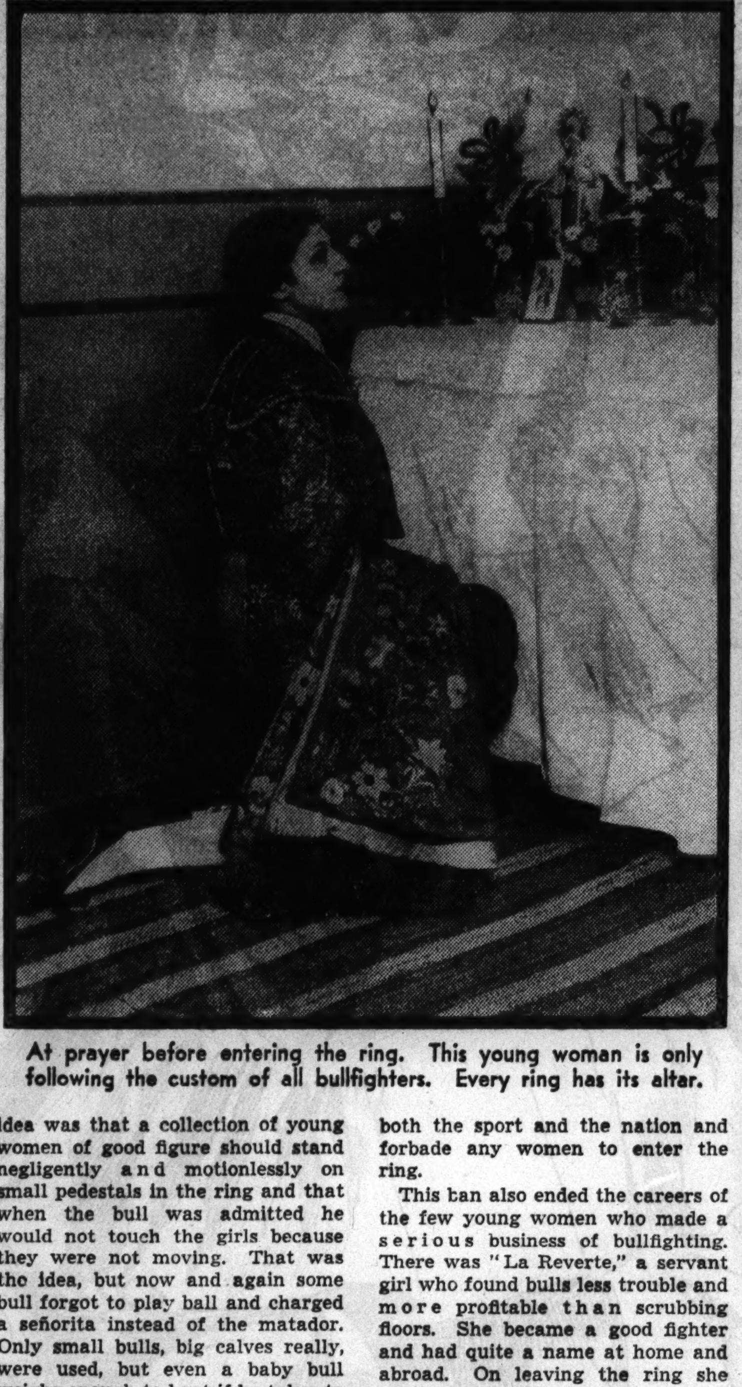
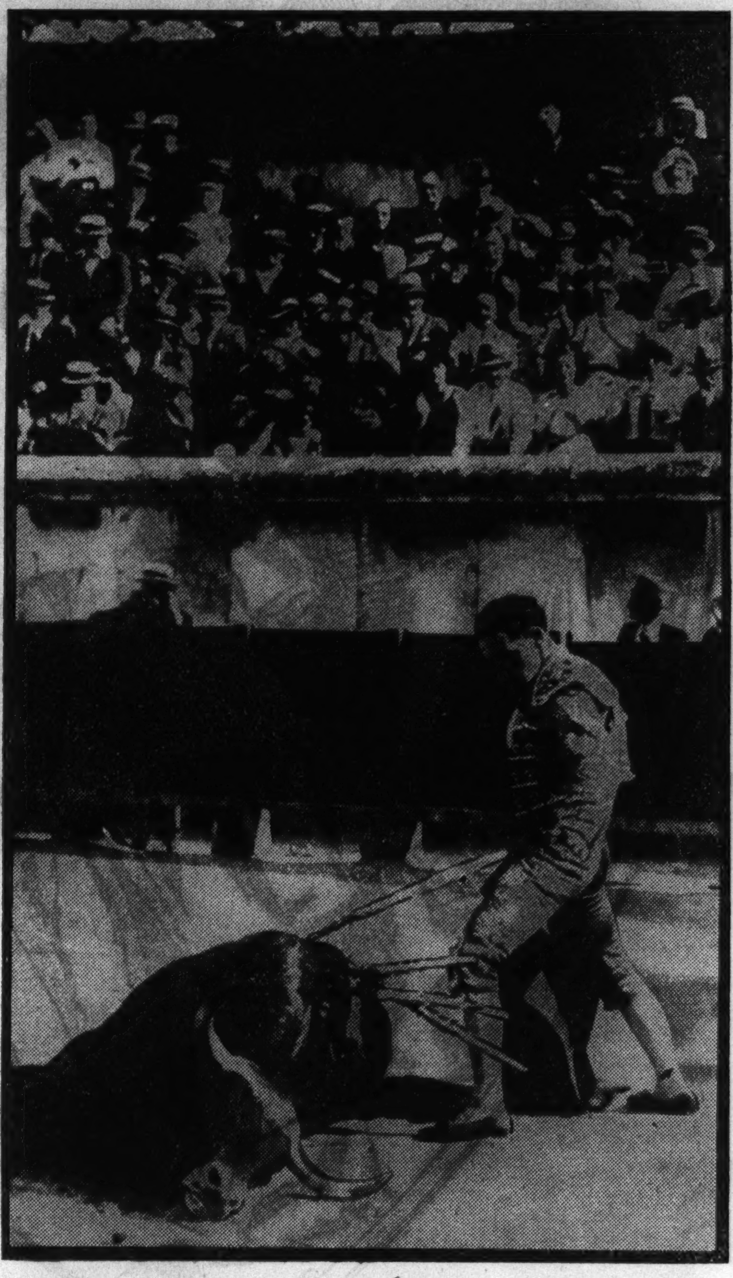
Father Laburu explained how the fighting bull, with his mountain of muscle behind the neck and his speed and his desire to attack moving objects, is an abnormal animal whose traits are hereditary and are carefully preserved and fostered by breeders. A normal bull is slow-moving and much less aggressive. The priest explained that only 30 per cent of the bulls bred for fighting are really brave animals of the kind bullfighters like to have in the ring. The bulls are tried out by the stockmen by methods which, Father Laburu said, are not unlike the present-day intelligence tests used for persons. The bull is separated from his fellows, who are driven swiftly away while a mounted man feints an attack on him. If the bull resists his natural temptation to run after his fellows, and instead remains alone and attempts to charge his attacker, then he is written down as being a first-rate bull, provided, of course, that his physical qualities are satisfactory. He must weigh more than half a ton and have good eyesight; this latter is very important, for if his eyesight is defective he may fail to follow the cape which the fighter swings before him and quite unwittingly crash into the matador before that worthy can sidestep.



At prayer before entering the ring. This young woman is only following the custom of all bullfighters. Every ring has its altar.



The kill! Juan Belmonte, one of the matadors who has kept bullfighting alive in Spain, finishes off a bull before an appreciative audience.

The parade before the fighting starts. The young woman at the front is Juanita Cruz, who takes her bullfighting very seriously.

For Bad Winter Coughs, Mix This Remedy Yourself

Saves Good Money! No Cooking!

If you want the best cough remedy that money can buy, mix it at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of distressing coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money—a real family supply. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, helps clear the air passages, and thus ends a bad cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous for its effect in stopping coughs quickly. Money refunded if it does not please you in every way.

Ethan, in the Town House, Makes a Startling Discovery Which Fits a Piece Into the Myrand Jig-Saw Puzzle

THE STORY TO DATE

Lucian Myrand is serving a life sentence for the murder of Serge Ralten, who was supposedly his friend. At the trial Myrand pleaded guilty, but gave no reason for committing the crime. Nor would he explain his mysterious disappearance for ten months after escaping from a German prison camp during the war. Myrand's wife, Ursula, and his daughter, Alice, live on the family estate near Chicago. On the sixth anniversary of the murder Ursula visits her husband in prison and notices a strange excitement in him. That evening Alice and Ethan West, a young lawyer friend, visit the town house where the murder occurred and which has been untenanted since. Ethan enters the library and finds a man murdered and sprawled on the floor where Ralten had lain. The slain man cannot be identified. Fresh finger prints of Ralten's are found in the library. For convenience the newly deceased is called "Otto," the killer "Rupert." Lucian fails to identify a picture of the murdered man. Daniel Fallone, professional reformer, offers his aid. Ethan finally learns where "Otto" had lodged and in his room finds Sunday papers from which two pictures have been clipped. One is of nineteen-year-old Johanna Strang, a Bohemian dancer, who is appearing in Chicago. The other is of Alice Myrand. Ethan interviews Johanna Strang. She admits she is a war foundling and came to Chicago to seek her parents.

INSTALMENT IX.

JOHANNA STRANG remained seated. She did not want to move. She did not wish her demand so summarily dismissed. But she could not be an unpleasant person, and she was not really stubborn.

Ethan stood looking down at her and waited, and soon she smiled at him and shrugged her slender shoulders in a gesture of gay, delightful submission.

"After all," she said, "having waited all one's life to learn of one's self, it is not so much to have to wait a day more—if," she teased him slightly, "it is so much safer."

Ethan wanted never to give her up, she was so lovely. She arose, and Ethan was reminded that he had not called for his check. There was a few moments' delay while he received it and paid it and before he followed Johanna Strang away from the table.

As they reached the door Ethan heard behind him a voice, important and authoritative. It was not familiar, but he knew he had heard it before. He turned.

The huge, impressive bulk of the reformer, Daniel Fallone, half filled the doorway. He must have followed them, Ethan knew, from the supper room. Ethan gazed at Fallone, waiting to see whether the big man recollected their brief encounter at Peter Corondelet's apartment.

Evidently Fallone remembered meeting Ethan somewhere. He nodded without speaking a name, and his eyes interested themselves chiefly with Ethan's companion.

Johanna Strang turned, and, to Ethan's surprise, she spoke to Fallone. "Why, how do you do?" she said in her pleasant, eager way.

"I am glad to congratulate you, Miss Strang," Fallone ponderously said. "Tonight was a triumph for our ideals. You will remember, when the box office fails you can count on me."

"Thank you!" said Johanna Strang. "O, thank you!"

"Here's the cab," Ethan interposed. "Good night, Mr. Fallone," he stupidly said, and put the girl in the taxi and followed her.

He said to the driver, "St. Evillon hotel," and waited hardly for the cab to draw away before he demanded:

"Where did you know Daniel Fallone?"

"Is that his name? I do not know him."

"You spoke to him—and he to you!" Ethan charged.

"O, yes. I met him this afternoon."

"Where?"

"At the theater, at my rehersal."

"He was there?"

"O, yes; many people were there—people of the stage and of the press."

"But Fallone," Ethan objected, "is of neither."

"No. I remember he came to be kind."

"Kind?"

"Yes. Why does he distress you so much? It was the manager, I believe, of the theater who presented him. It was after we had done some of the dances. He became most flattering about the dances, and most practical, too.

"He said he hoped such dances, which were art, would succeed financially—as you Americans say, 'at the box office.' He hoped, yet he feared not. He said there was too much that was art that was mere—how do you say 'with all clothes off'?"

"Nudity," Ethan supplied.

"O, yes, nudity. He said he would like to back me—such dances as mine—as art, if 'box office' was bad."

"O," said Ethan. "What else?"

"I remember nothing else."

The cab had stopped, and it might be his last moment alone with her. "Promise me that you will tell no one what you have told me about yourself."

"But you," she reproached him, "have told me nothing of myself in return."

"I will tell you of yourself by tomorrow, which is really today now," Ethan suddenly plunged into a pledge, "if you promise me that—at least until the end of this day—you leave with me only what you have told me."

Johanna Strang extended an impulsive hand. "That, then, is our bargain. I will be happy about it. Good night."

"Our bargain. Good night!" he said to her in the cab, but, of course, he accompanied her to the hotel elevator, which lifted her from him and left him alone.

* * *

IT WAS a sudden aloneness which held for Ethan an amazing quality. His own vitality seemed instantly lowered. A moment ago he was keen, excited; now he was dull and tired. Yet he did not want to think of return to his even more lonely room. He wanted to remain near, he wanted to think about Johanna Strang—to keep the look of her, the sound of voice, the quick, impulsive pressure of her hand.

Her hand, so much like Alice's! And her face, in outline at least, like Alice's. Sisters? Half sisters? The same father, but with mothers different—O, utterly different!

Ethan recollected now Peter Corondelet, who employed him but to whom he had made no report since morning of the day that now was yesterday. It was no hour to awaken Peter Corondelet by telephone. Ethan got in a cab and gave Peter's address.

Halted before the building, Ethan looked up, counted fifteen floors, and located the windows which were Mr. Corondelet's. Some of them were alight.

Ethan went in and had himself announced by the sleepy doorman.

"Mr. Corondelet says for Mr. West to come right up."

He found Peter Corondelet dressed as he had been for the evening, except that he had on a dressing gown instead of his dinner jacket, and he wore slippers. His cigar was half burnt and bottles of whisky and soda stood beside a glass.

"Evening, Ethan. I've been waiting for you."

"I've been this evening to the theater," Ethan said.

"The theater?"

"I saw Johanna Strang's performance. It was wonderful. I had never imagined dancing could be like that. They gave her an ovation. Afterward I went to the stage door. I asked to see her. I succeeded almost at once in interesting her."

"In yourself, you mean?"

"In herself, sir. I read in the program that she was an orphan, born in Austria in 1915. It struck me, sir, that that was the year when Lucian Myrand was in Austria—and not a prisoner. He had escaped and had not yet reappeared in France."

"No," said Peter Corondelet, "he had not."

"It occurred to me that perhaps Johanna Strang had chosen Chicago as the city for her American debut for some reason not connected with the dance."

"Did the other reason also occur to you, Ethan?"

"It did, sir. It seemed possible that Johanna Strang had come to Chicago really in order to find out something about her origin. It was that which I suggested to her at my first opportunity."

"And that suggestion met with—response?"

"Remarkable response, sir. It proved to be exactly what she had come here for." And Ethan related as accurately as he could what Johanna Strang had told him of herself.

Peter Corondelet drained his glass and arose. He fitted a fresh cigar to his lips and took a long time lighting it.

"We share, I am sure, sir," Ethan said, "the same inferences. But really they are only inferences."

"As a man, not as a lawyer," Peter jerked impatiently, "I find certain inferences inescapable. But, of course, we require much more. . . . We are agreed, I am sure, that neither of us shall say anything of this just yet to Mrs. Myrand."

"Alice?" said Ethan.

Corondelet looked at him. "Alice, you can decide for yourself. You will anyway. . . . Tell me, did you notice any particular physical resemblances between Alice and this girl?"

"Their hands are remarkably alike, and the outlines of the face. Not the features so much, but little turns now and then."

"Tell me about Fallone."

"I did not see him at the performance. I did not notice him in the restaurant afterward, but he was at the door when we were leaving."

"Fallone seems to be somewhat ahead of us, Ethan. I wonder what he knows! I knew, of course, that he had taken upon himself this case. Nothing could possibly please him more than to solve it first and independently. It would be the proudest feather in his cap—to uncover the secret of the silence in the Myrand case. Also it would show up the police and everyone else. That's the reformer streak in him, to prove everybody else to be wrong or incompetent but himself. The breath of scandal—I should say the blast of scandal—which will follow the complete uncovering of this case (if our inferences are correct, Ethan) also will give joy to a reformer of his type. I confess I would greatly like to rob him of that joy, Ethan. I have had a few passages with Mr. Daniel Fallone which add to my personal incentive.

"It is perfectly plain, of course, that he had some private knowledge about this Johanna Strang before she came to this city. How long before we can only guess. So if we are on the right track now, Ethan, it seems certain that Mr. Fallone was on that same track ahead of us. Which of us can now follow it faster? Well, we shall see!"

"You mentioned," Ethan reminded, "that you had word of some other developments."

"O, yes. The chief item was the check-over of the finger prints taken from Myrand's library. The plainest ones, you remember, were prints of Serge Ralten, who, undoubtedly and beyond any question, had been dead for six years.

"The bureau of identification was not impressed by possibilities of ghostly visitation, at least none that would leave plain finger prints, but they recalled that sometimes in questionable séances finger prints had been most cleverly faked. There is a recognized process by which finger prints can be reproduced and applied to suitable surfaces almost as if the living finger had touched the place.

"Almost, but not quite. The experts were able, upon careful examination, to show that the finger prints of 'Serge Ralten' were actually impressed from molds. They were counterfeit. Now, would you like to put up here for the night?"

"Thank you very much, sir, but probably I'll sleep better in my own bed. And I need a lot of sleep."

A call at his door aroused him to full daylight. Indeed, it was almost midmorning. He was wanted on the phone.

* * *

IT PROVED to be Alice, who had driven into the city. She had awakened early, she said, and she had to do something. The police investigation at the city house had been completed, she knew, and she wanted to go through the house again. Of course, not alone.

Ethan made an appointment to meet her before the house in half an hour. She was there when he arrived.

"Now tell me, please," said Alice at this first minute alone with Ethan, "about the dancer."

"I saw her dance," said Ethan; "then I took her out to supper."

Alice caught her breath quickly. "Did you? She's beautiful, isn't she?"

"Yes, she is."

"And more than beautiful, you want to say."

"I will say it," Ethan returned. "Alice, she's magnificent."

"O!"

"Alice, you care that I like her?"

"Of course I care."

His pulse responded to her answer, but he realized the difficulty of feeling now. "Let me tell you about her," he said. And, swiftly and as simply as he could, he told her everything that Johanna Strang had told him, and what he had said to her, and how later he had reported to Peter Corondelet. The only thing he kept back was his feeling for Johanna Strang, and that, too, in spite of himself, he betrayed.

Alice heard him for the most part silent, the color drained from her face as he proceeded.

At the end Alice looked at him without speaking, questioning him no more. In her eyes there was for the moment the threat of tears, but she banished them.

"I believe that girl's story," she said at last. "Must I believe that, too?"

"What?"

"That she's—she's my half sister!"

"So that entered your head, too."

"Of course it did. What could keep it out? But it's not sure."

"Why, Alice, it's not sure at all. It's a wild, wild guess, that's all."

"But didn't it disturb you?"

"Of course it disturbed me terribly."

"Let's move about, Ethan; I can't stand still."

She led him to the door of the library, closed again.

"You open it, Ethan," she said, and she retreated slightly as he obeyed her.

The room was vacant of living or dead. After a moment Alice entered after him.

"Let's not think now, Ethan, of Johanna Strang or anything else. Let's try to think for this little while of just what those men—the one who killed 'Otto,' and 'Otto' himself—were looking for. The police have looked, I know. But I was thinking last night, when I couldn't sleep and had to think, of the books—all the books. They couldn't have all been opened."

"No."

"Between the pages of one—but what one?—something might be hiding."

"Where shall we begin?"

"Where would you, Ethan?"

"Did your father use this room much?"

"Yes, he did."

Ethan was looking at the rows of books. "If he had in this room anything secret and private that he referred to from time to time for any reason it would probably be near his desk, so I suggest that we start with the books within easy reach of his desk chair."

The books nearest the chair behind the desk were sets of novels of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, bound in lether.

Side by side and very carefully they began to go through those books, and within twenty minutes Ethan suddenly emitted a low whistle. The note brought Alice instantly to his side.

He held in his hand a copy of a translation of "Toilers of the Sea." The book was open at its middle. It was a large book, printed on quite heavy paper with deckled edges. Ethan said simply: "There are two pages stuck together here, Alice, and something's between them. You could go through the book a hundred times or shake it without noticing this unless you looked for it." He separated the corners of the pages and peeled them apart as he murmured, "It's rubber cement, which you can pull apart and put together any number of times." He split the two pages. Inside was the photograph of a woman—a lovely, lovely woman, who was young, or who had been young when this picture had been taken. For the clothes were the clothes of twenty years ago, but the face was the beautiful, sensitive face of the dancer, Johanna Strang.

Johanna Strang at this hour was opening her eyes and seeing, beyond the curtains of the hotel window, the long, blue reach of Lake Michigan. She woke thinking of Ethan, and smiled. Her smile diminished only a little as memory of her own enigma was added to thoughts of the young American who had taken her to supper.

She sat upright. "Francine!"

"Yes, mademoiselle."

"My breakfast!"

The doorbell rang. Francine, pert, blonde, immaculate in a fresh uniform, hurried through the bedroom, saying: "This must be it! I ordered it ten minutes ago."

She opened the door and took a tray from the waiter. She unfolded the legs of the tray and set it over Johanna's lap.

Johanna drank her orange juice and picked up the newspaper on her tray. As she began to read Francine poured her coffee and continued to talk. "These newspapers! Nothing but crime! Murders and robberies! Look at that!"

She pointed to a headline which ran across the entire page: "NEW CLEWS IN MYRAND HOME MYSTERY DEATH."

Johanna was reading the story casually while she ate her bacon and eggs. Suddenly she gave a cry, dropped her paper, and looked with startled eyes toward Francine, who was selecting her clothes for the day.

"What is it, mademoiselle?"

* * *

JOHANNA was reading again. "It's my friend, Mr. West. His name is mentioned in connection with this murder."

"Did he do it? He's a gangster, then!"

Johanna laughed. "No. He's a lawyer. But it seems that he and his firm had something to do with investigating a murder that took place a few days ago. It says: 'Mr. Ethan West, who is acting as Mr. Corondelet's right-hand man in this affair, would make no statement when reached by telephone late last night.'" Johanna shook her head slowly. "My! It's a terrible country! The newspapers must have called him after he talked with me. He is such a nice young man! It's hard to think that while he was eating supper with me last night there was the investigation of a murder in the back of his head."

"That's the way Americans are," Francine said nonchalantly. She stepped from the room and began to run a bath for her mistress.

Again, after a time, the doorbell rang, and when Francine trotted through the sunny bedroom to answer it she did not notice that Johanna's face had lost color. It was the waiter calling for the tray. Francine was on the point of telling him that he had returned too quickly, when Johanna said:

"Tell him to come in."

The waiter was tall, bald, and reserved. He started to pick up the tray.

Johanna said: "Just a minute. I wanted to ask you a couple of questions."

"Yes, madam."

"I am a stranger in Chicago, and this is pure curiosity on my part." She smiled. "This morning I was reading this story"—she pointed to the paper—"and I don't know anything about the first part of it, so what I read doesn't make complete sense."

The waiter bent over slightly. "O, yes! The Myrand murder!"

"Do you know anything about this murder?"

* * *

THE waiter shook his head. "Nobody does, madam. That's the whole point. All Chicago is talking about it. You see, a few days ago a body was found in the library of Lucian Myrand. The house had been closed for years, and it might have been just any burglar—except that the man was lying in the same position as Mr. Serge Ralten was found in six years ago."

Johanna was startled. She tried not to show it. She was startled because Ethan had asked her on the previous evening whether or not she knew a man named Serge Ralten. She was sure that was the name. She looked steadily at the waiter. She made her voice casual. "Do you remember what happened six years ago? I thought if you did you might tell me, so that what I read in the Chicago papers from now on will make sense."

The waiter elaborately recounted the story of Lucian Myrand and his silent servitude at Joliet. When he had finished, Johanna, still feigning casual interest, said, "And you say that happened six years ago?"

"Just six years."

"And that Mr Myrand was a prisoner of war? When was that?"

"In the beginning. He was shot down early in the fighting. He was behind the lines for more than a year. It would be in 1914 and 1915, ma'am."

Johanna nodded. "Francine, please bring my pocketbook to me." She tipped the waiter liberally and sent Francine back to finish the preparation of her bath. Then she went to the window and looked out over the lake. She had been born in 1915—about the year after Lucian Myrand had been captured. The money which had been sent to her annually had been stopped six years ago—just after Myrand had gone to prison. Ethan West had asked her if she knew Serge Ralten.

Johanna Strang began to believe that her quest of self-identification was reaching its end. A fantastic end. An end stained now with blood. A still undecipherable end. Suddenly she remembered that the man now at Joliet had somewhere a wife and daughter.

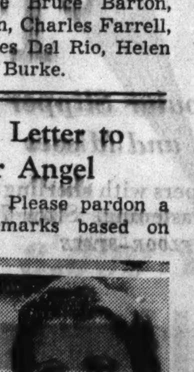
An Open Letter to Heather Angel



HEATHER ANGEL

Dear Heather: Please pardon a few personal remarks based on your birthday—I wouldn't bring this up at all if it didn't have a bearing on our seeing more of you in your professional capacity. You have two lives to lead, one private and the other public, and the point during the next four years is that they are apt to become considerably involved with each other. Watch affairs connected with the home and keep them under control. Don't worry—but at the same time don't take things for granted. With best wishes,

WYNN.

Society Finds Fresh Delights in Ballet Russe

'And Stock's "Tristan" Arouses Controversy Among Cognoscenti.

By Cousin Eve.

NORTHWESTERN University college does grand things this year at the Auditorium theater, with its course in "History and Enjoyment of Music." Two brilliant Gallo operas; Mary Garden and Rudolph Ganz in a Debussy concert; the Moscow choir, and last Tuesday night Cecil De Basil's Ballet Russe. This is always the apotheosis of beautiful music, magnificent dancing, and beautiful men and women. And this year Col. De Basil has brought, apparently out of his hat, many spectacular young and fresh houris of the dance with long Russian names. They gave three of my favorite ballets, "Le Tricorne," "Scheherazade," and "Le Mariage d'Aurore" Tuesday night with music by Tchaikowsky, Rimski-Korsakov, and De Falla, and scenery and costumes by Picasso, Leon Bakst, and Benois. The celebrated commentator Olin Downes commentated pithily and was heard to say that this Scheherazade was not the one of Diaghileff which he had, when young, followed about Europe.

Back of the stage, however, Col. De Basil was able to produce the Diaghileff score which he was following to the letter. Time plays tricks with memories of the best.

Cousin Eve Suggests False Eyelashes Be Omitted.

For the rest, the evening was one of divinely rushing, whirling, diving, floating figures, exquisite as ancient porcelains. Massine, with gleaming eyes and teeth, touched with a fiery diablerie; the young, dark Tamara Toumanova, adored by all the men; the aristocratically elegant and flamelike Riabouchinska, and the more solid beauties of Irina Baronova, much featured, with ash blonde hair, her beautiful arms and back burned like biscuit in Riviera sun. If they will please excuse me, these beautiful beings whom I extravagantly admire would be even more lovely without the false eyelashes which look like black caterpillars crawling on their snowy lids.

A great thrill does one have at the Ballet Russe. Massine has changed the ending of Tricorne this year, and one hopes he will keep the quaint and formal distinction of the ballet as they were before, and not let ways of the musical revue enter in.

The "Shut-Ins," of whom Mrs. Earle Zimmerman has just become president, and Mrs. Alexander Kirk, chairman for the benefit, had the most fashionable audience of the entire season. Mrs. Kersey Reed was the largest party giver, having thirty-five debutantes and their beaux for Katherine McClennan. Mrs. Potter Palmer's party included the Giulio Bolognesis, here after many winters in northern Wisconsin. Time and a quiet country life left unchanged these handsome people; the slim, dark eyed Contessa, beautiful and friendly as always, and Count Bolo, fiery when he was speaking for his country the other night at the Col. George Langhorne's dinner at the Army and Navy club, as if he had just arrived from Italy.

Living Pictures to Be Shown at St. Chrysostom's Bazar.

On Dec. 4 and 5 a holiday event of social importance, St. Chrysostom's church window bazar. Last year's windows were so successful that 50 per cent more subscribers have engaged windows this year in the handsome parish house, North Dearborn avenue.

Mrs. John R. Winterbothan Jr. and Eleanor Holden are having one of their inimitable shows both evenings. This will be an art talk, and twelve living pictures will be seen and described by a young lecturer whose name must be, for the time, under cover.

Mrs. Philip Maher, Denyse Root, John Root, the newly married Ned Platts, are among the "living models."

On Thursday night the turkey supper, and that needs no words to describe its excellence, its amusing social side.

Dr. Frederick Stock's "Tristan" brought out the multitudes. During one year the distinguished leader has worked out this pocket edition of the great Wagnerian love drama.

For the event, the stage of Orchestra hall was petticoated in yellow satin, and beautiful voices floated from behind these primrose draperies as scenes changed. The audience was divided as to the merits of this production.

BRIDE OF YESTERDAY

Mrs. Edward Bernard Ryan, the former Elizabeth Eleanor O'Hara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard O'Hara of 7012 South Shore drive, whose marriage to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Joseph Ryan of Oak Park took place yesterday at St. Philip Neri church. The ceremony was performed at 11 o'clock in the morning, and a wedding breakfast and reception followed at the Shoreland hotel. Mr. Ryan and his bride will cruise through the Panama canal on their wedding trip, and will make their home on Chicago's south side.

Clifford Caldwell's, when in a sort of musical receiving line, one met Mrs. Mario Chamlee and Chase Baromeo, who had been singing in the Tristan event.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk were at home at 1500 Lake Shore drive, and many of their friends saw for the first time the subtle white interior of their new apartment. They say the highest compliment one can pay is to be unable to describe the beauty of a house, a dress, or a woman. And all I seem to know about this interieur is that I sat upon a divine pale blue sofa; that the modernistic chimney wall and fireplace were of glass; that I faced a magnificent dark screen, and that my hostess' teagown of black velvet became her blondeness and the elegance of her living room. Mme. Edith Mason was absent and ill, but Mme. Marion Claire, beautiful and dashing, was there, in red frock and long black mantle. Her blonde coif was a myriad of tiny stiff little curls in rows like a Greek statue. For the rest, visitors were lively, gay. Joseph and Mrs. Ryerson, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, George and Mrs. Ranney, Frank and Mrs. Hibbard, Mrs. John Carpenter, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, the Orville Taylors, Robert Carr, Frank McNair, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer, Mrs. Frederick Stock, and S. Hurok, Russian impresario.

Mrs. John Carpenter's Monday tea for the younger set had a motif. And that did not appear until the hour was late, for there were distractions of one kind and other—chinoiseries on wall and in cabinet, charming hostess and friends to greet, and most distracting, perhaps, of all Peggy Hambleton's Swedish mittens. She couldn't even wait till snow flies to wear them. Black and snug, they had little paintings of roses and lilies of the valley on their backs. Sensational!

The idea of this twilight party was to acquaint the younger set with the beauties of chamber music. There will be an evening of this, the Mischakoffs quartet, this coming Tuesday in the foyer of Orchestra hall. This form of 18th century music culture is probably an acquired refinement of taste and there is a movement to catch the youngsters and get them interested before modernism or something else gets them. Buffy Marshall, otherwise Mrs. Thomas Marshall, and Miss Hambleton made the announcements for the series of four, which includes one concert by Jacques Gordon. Present, buds Elise Clow, Ruth Brown, Denyse Root, Katharine McClennan, and Mrs. Charles Swift, Mrs. Frederick Stock, Mrs. Dudley Root, Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, Mrs. Stanley Rickords were among the assistance.

Candlelight Illumines Cudahy-White Wedding.

Out to Lake Forest for an autumn wedding, that of Honoré White and William Cudahy, son of that Nora Cudahy whom everybody loved and who died untimely.

The church, a plain, brick, small-town church, was glorified by the poetic sunset hour into a grotto of romance. Candlelight on the black shapes of a furry crowd and bright autumn flowers at the altar. Stained glass windows, vivid as jewels on the dusky walls. Candlelight on the shimmering bronze dresses of the bridesmaids, their splashing nosegays of pink chrysanthemums, the tiny fillets and veils which revealed brightly burnished hair, the delicate lines of their features—Jean Schweppe, Ethel Johnston, Jean Wilhelm Harvey, Virginia Ashcraft. Young Lee Cudahy and Seta Morrill in stiff little long frocks of pink satin, walked ahead of the bridesmaids.

Honoré, always a lovely girl, in the beauty class, was a beautiful bride. White satin and tulle, white orchids and lilies, white herself as a lily, black hair lustrous under the veil.

Even Evening Is Bridal.

Everybody remarked on the impressive wedding service of Father Mullailey of the Paulists. In English, one felt somehow that these two youngsters were married sacredly for life, not for a whim of the moment. Coming out of the church into the open, one found the evening itself was bridal. The sky brightly flushed with pink, and the ground lightly powdered with the first snow.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fenton have a charming house, recently purchased from the Byron Harveys and remade, where the wedding reception was held. The Albert Spragues built it, having David Adler for architect. Poor David, who still lies in a coma after a bad crash in the hunting field! Of red brick after the Georgian manner, it has wings and a large, long dining room where the reception was held. David Adler designed only one door for this great room, and so many and congratulatory were the Fenton and Cudahy friends that only a football half back or left tackle could have made the bridal party. For those who cared to see, the stairs led invitingly to three rooms full of magnificent wedding gifts.

Refreshments a Nice Achievement in Temperatures.

For those who had traveled out from town, tray loads of sparkling champagne for toasts and best wishes, a dining room with towering wedding cake, all sugar lilies and knots of sugar ribbon. A superb wedding tea where everything hot was really hot, and everything cold was cold and beautifully served. It was extremely gay, of course.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thorne, Mrs. Edward Carry, Mrs. Charles Dempster, whose famous prie-dieu had officiated; Howard Gillettes, Sr. and Jr., Mrs. William Scudder, Mrs. George McLaughlin Jr., the Herbert Bradleys, James Hopkins, Mrs. Chauncey Borland, Mrs. Dexter Fairbank, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy Jr., the Austin Niblacks, Frank Wilhelms, Mrs. Jack Pitcher. Hundreds more.

Le Corbusier Advocates "Corridor Streets."

Le Corbusier, Swiss architect, lecturing at the Arts club Monday morning, was a magnet for many. But I saw no city planners, no noted Chicago architects, there. A tall, wiry man, in gray, square jawed, spectacled, illustrating his own words on a white board with colored chalks—his rapid French words. With him, his own interpreter, a tall, smooth, black haired fellow, Mr. Jacobs.

Pretty soon by a series of chalk marks and gradations one saw that as a city planner M. Le Corbusier believes in tall, thin buildings against short, fat ones; solid steel buildings with glass walls as against bricks and lumber, and nice, roomy tenements housing 2,700 souls rather than our kind of housing in what he calls

BRIDE OF NOVEMBER

Mrs. George Katzenberg, the former Lael Francine Kallis, daughter of Morton Kallis of the Belden-Stratford hotel, whose marriage to George Katzenberg of Chicago took place on Nov. 18. Mr. and Mrs. Katzenberg will live at the Belden-Stratford after Dec. 20.

"corridor streets." In his communist architecture there are no streets. Life is one lovely park, crossed by foot paths for pedestrians. And what looked like grooves under the houses for automobiles. Houses are built on steel stilts like dwellers in the jungles of Siam, so plenty of air circulates under these big steel flats. On their tops are gardens galore.

Preferably these communist buildings should overlook water. In the twinkling of an eye M. Le Corbusier had selected Stockholm as an ideally beautiful site, and jerked the whole town to bits, leaving only the royal palace and a few public buildings. Landing suddenly in Paris he tore down all old Paris from the Ile de la Cité, through the Morais, which is crammed with national monuments, as far as the Porte St. Martin, and had run up these steel tenements for unfortunate Parisians. I could fancy the scores of concierge wretches who would make life hideous for dwellers in these steel hutches which looked, in the architect's rough sketch, like safety boxes in the vaults of a bank.

Chicago Would Be Meat for Swiss Architect's Schemes.

Parisians who so dearly love their own sacred individuality and their little cozy homes tucked away in the quaint old quarters of the town. And who adore the ancient beauties of the Morais. M. Le Corbusier showed slides of a town or two in Africa under construction, facing the sea, after the communist plan. But here, too, one would think there is plenty of room for lateral expansion, with the desert of Sahara hard by. "Gratte-ciel" is the neat French term for skyscraper. A film was shown of Antwerp housing 500,000 people under this plan, which M. Le Corbusier calls a major development of the machine age, a "ville radieuse."

I happened that night to be dining with a woman who had looked thoroughly into this communist building in Germany, where it is not new. The Germans, however, have gone through it and come out on the other side in favor of bricks and mortar. The Swiss architect used frequently the term "slavery" in speaking of work and transportation to work. A job to the dashing Swiss means "esclavage," but not in this country, as yet. A job is still a job here. Mrs. Charles Goodspeed assembled various French people to lunch with the lecturer, M. and Mme. René Weiller, the John Storrs, Miss Rouillier, M. Jean Pouyer, Walter Frazier.

Farm Group Is to Have First Annual Meeting

Organization of Clubwomen from Rural Districts Terminates Year.

By Ruth DeYoung.

THERE are many women's organizations that count up dozens of years or even a quarter of a century of activity, but seldom nowadays to we hear about a year old group with a membership in excess of a quarter of a million.

MRS. ABBIE C. SARGENT.
[Underwood Photo.]

This is the story of the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau Federation, which is to have its first annual meeting next Friday and Saturday in the Hotel Sherman. The delegates will represent more than thirty affiliate bodies set up in twenty-six states. After they have enjoyed and profited by their own program they will remain for the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation the following week.

Says Mrs. Abbie C. Sargent of Bedford, N. H., the president: "The purpose of this great group of earnest farm women is to help accent the fundamental importance of organized efforts to bring about better educational, social, and spiritual opportunities for rural people. It wants to serve as a means for the exchange of experience in the field of adult education relating to home and community life, to provide nationalization for the state organizations of rural women, and to give to the rural womanhood of America the means of expression and the strength that come from unity in organized efforts dedicated to the development of a more abundant country life."

Mary Sue Wigley to Give Lecture on Home Problems.

At the opening session Friday morning Miss Mary Sue Wigley, well known lecturer on problems of the home, will discuss "The Romance of Forward Planning." Miss Wigley comes from Dawson, Ala.

Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau of the department of labor, will discuss "Child Welfare Legislation Affecting the Farm Home" on Friday afternoon at the same session at which Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, chairman of the consumers' advisory board, will speak.

John G. Winant to Review the International Situation.

On Saturday morning John G. Winant, chairman of the newly created social security board, who spent the past summer in Geneva, will review the international situation. This session will have, for its general theme, world peace.

Other speakers to be heard during the two day session include Dr. H. Clifford Loos of the Roos-Loos Medical group in Los Angeles, who will present some of his ideas on "Better Medical Care for Rural America"; Miss Agnes Samuelson, state superintendent of public instruction in Iowa and president of the National Education association, and Mrs. Robert M. Atkinson of Indiana.

Public Speaking Contest to Close the Program.

The program is to come to a close next Sunday afternoon with the annual public speaking contest for farm women. Thirteen representatives from Alabama, California, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, Tennessee, and West Virginia will speak on "The Farm Home and the World Today."

Another interesting feature of the convention will be an exhibit of native crafts and industries collected from all over rural America. This exhibit will continue through Dec. 12.

SHE IS A NEWLYWED

Mrs. Henry Stanley Neyman was Miss Degna Dante before her recent marriage in Resurrection church. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forecellati Dante of West Adams street, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Neyman of North Ridgeway avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Neyman are living at 143 North Parkside avenue.
[Valerio Photo.]

Officers of the federation, in addition to Mrs. Sargent, are Mrs. Ellsworth Richardson of Iowa, vice president; Mrs. Florence Bovett of Nevada, secretary; Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of Indiana, administrative director, and Mrs. George Tyler of New York, Mrs. J. D. Giles of Alabama, Mrs. W. O. Redford of Missouri, and Mrs. Mabel D. Ahart of California, regional directors.

Clubwomen to Have Two Day Education Institute Program.

An interesting item this morning is the announcement of a two day educational institute for clubwomen sponsored by the University of Chicago and to be held in coöperation with the education department of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. James Oldshue is the chairman of this department. The institute is to be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 22 and 23, on the university campus. It will be the second in a series of such meetings, planned by the federation to promote the theme of the general federation, "Education for Living."

MRS. BEULAH CHRISTIAN MAYHER.
[Matzene Photo.]

The first district of the Illinois federation is to have a board meeting tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the federation headquarters, 30 West Washington street. Mrs. Marion H. Biel, district president, will preside.

Mrs. Beulah Christian Mayher, president of the Association of Business and Professional Women, will be hostess at a dinner of the club at 6:30 o'clock Friday evening in the Auditorium hotel. The program promises to be interesting and unusual. Mrs. Florence E. Harris, president of the National Council Boards of Beauty Culture, will discuss "Better Appearance," and Dr. Maurice Udell, foot specialist, will give an illustrated talk on the effect of posture on health. Miss Florence Trumbull will present a program of musical selections. Dr. Vida Latham has planned the program.

Statue of Nero's Time Unearthed

CASABLANCA, Morocco.—(AP)—A rare archæological discovery is reported from Tangiers with the digging up of a fine Roman statue.

The statue, more than 6 feet high, is of a woman wearing a crown and is dated from the time of Emperor Claudius by local archæologists. It was uncovered by a laborer digging the foundations of a new building.

Claudius, who was stepfather of Nero, was emperor of Rome from 41 to 54 A. D.

Head of Legion Auxiliary Is to Be Honored

Over Thousand to Attend Dinner-Dance Tuesday for Mrs. Mucklestone.

MORE than a thousand friends and associates of Mrs. Melville Mucklestone, newly elected national head of the American Legion auxiliary, will pay tribute to her Tuesday evening at an informal dinner-dance in the Medinah club.

MRS. MELVILLE MUCKLESTONE.
[Underwood Photo.]

The Cook County council of the auxiliary has planned the homecoming party. Mrs. Mucklestone is the first Illinois auxiliary member ever to have been elevated to the highest post in the organization. Her election took place at the national convention of the Legion and auxiliary in September in St. Louis.

Other special guests will include Howard Savage and Edward A. Hayes of Decatur, past national commanders of the American Legion; J. B. Murphy, state commander of the Legion, and Mrs. William Glenn Suthers, state president of the auxiliary. The party will begin with a reception at 6:30 o'clock and continue with dinner, dancing, and a floor show.

In celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene is to hold a one day conference Friday in the Palmer house on the general subject "Modern Concepts and Practice of Mental Hygiene." The conference is planned to show the advance in thinking in this field, both from the point of view of the developments in medicine and other professions, and from the point of view of its integration into philosophic thought.

Speakers at the conference will include, among others, Dr. Franz Alexander, Dr. Clarence M. Hincks, Dr. William E. Blatz, and Dr. Harold L. Bowman. The luncheon meeting will have to do with the general subject "Study and Treatment of Personality Problems." At the dinner meeting Miss Helen L. Myrick, general director of the society, will present the development of mental hygiene in Illinois. Opening remarks will be made by Dr. Ralph C. Hamill, the society president.

Woman's Aid to Present Three Artists in Program.

The Chicago Woman's Aid will present three artists of note this week in its quarters, 185 North Wabash avenue. Mrs. Sonia Sharnova, well known contralto; Sidney Rayner, tenor, and Robert Wellenborn, pianist, will entertain at the club social at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

"Four Hundred Years of the English Bible—1535-1935" is to be the theme of a meeting at 1 o'clock next Friday at the Chicago Woman's club. Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed of the University of Chicago, an authority on Bible history, is to be the speaker before the club's Bible history class. Mrs. Frederic E. Dewhurst will preside.

Song and Poetry Luncheon to Be Given by Committee.

The Chicago Woman's club's American speech committee will celebrate Saturday with a song and poetry luncheon in the club dining room. Presented on the program will be Mrs. Francesco Falk Miller, who will speak on original poetry; B. Fred Wise, tenor, and J. Manley Phelps, head of the department of speech at De Paul university. Mrs. Charles L. Samson, chairman of the American speech committee, will preside.

SPONSOR FOR MUSICAL

Mrs. James O. McKinsey is a member of the board of the Friendly Aid society, which is sponsoring a tea and musical Wednesday, Dec. 11, from 3 until 6 o'clock in the ballroom of the Powhatan in Chicago Beach drive. The society contributes to 14 Chicago charities, including the Infant Welfare and the Martha Washington Home for Crippled Children.

In celebration of the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of Horace, the ancient Roman poet, the Friends of the Library, affiliated with the University of Chicago, are to have a program at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening in the Harper Memorial library on the university campus. The principal speaker is to be Gordon Jennings Laing, professor emeritus of Latin at the university. His subject will be "Horace and the Culture of Today."

Betty Crandell Engaged to Wed Walter Murphy Jr.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made yesterday at a cocktail party at her home, 179 Lake Shore drive, of the engagement of Miss Betty Jane Crandell, daughter of George Crandell, to Walter Whitaker Murphy Jr., of Buffalo, N. Y. Young Mr. Murphy and his father were here from Buffalo for the party.

Miss Crandell attended the Faulkner school and the University School for Girls and finished at Briarcliff. She has traveled extensively in Europe. She met her fiancé at Olean, N. Y., where his family has a summer home, about a year ago.

No date for the wedding has been set but it probably will take place in June. About the middle of December the Crandells will leave for Miami Beach where they have spent the last several seasons.

Monument to Chef.

VILLENEUVE-LOUBET, France.—(AP)—A monument to this town's most illustrious son, Auguste Escoffier, world famous chef, will be erected here. On the base will be engraved a list of the palate tickling dishes he invented and peach melba will lead all the rest.

When Chicago Was Young

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freen Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, June 12, 1886.

DEAR JULIA: Mrs. Norman B. Judd, mother's friend, spent three days of this week with me, and it was such a privilege to have her here, for she's one of the most intelligent women I have ever known. She brought with her a German book, which she read aloud every morning, saying she didn't want to lose her German accent.

Her husband, who has been dead for some years, nominated Lincoln in the Wigwam, and, as a reward for his political services, was sent as minister to Prussia. In spite of the worldly honors that have been her portion, Mrs. Judd has remained a humble and devout churchwoman, and her whole life has been lived on a high plane. She was one of the organizers of the Home for the Friendless, and we have had long talks this week about the Chicago agencies which are devoted to the relief of human suffering. Mrs. Judd is so well informed that she was able to tell me all the latest news of these various movements and reforms.

It is easy to stress the sordid side of life, and our city, I'm afraid, has rather a bad reputation, but Will said a rather good thing yesterday, I thought, when he spoke of it as having only the defects of its qualities. We are young, undisciplined, vigorous, free and easy. Some day, he says, we shall grow up and be well behaved and refined.

Mrs. Judd told me how many women lawyers we have in Chicago, but I can't remember now how large the number is. Miss Kate Kane is one of the ablest. She recently defended eloquently a man accused of murder. Then there is Mrs. Myra B. Bradwell, not only a lawyer but the editor of a law journal which the legal profession reads eagerly. Her husband, Judge Bradwell, is as proud of her as are her other friends.

Then we have many medical women . . . about 300 practicing physicians, I heard Mrs. Judd say. Dr. Leila J. Bedell is now the president of the Chicago Woman's club, a great honor. Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, and Dr. Mary Thompson are all outstanding in the profession. If they were men they would have wider recognition, but even so, they have had their share of honor.

Mrs. Judd mentioned two ordained women ministers in the city. One is Dr. Florence Kollock of Englewood; the other the Rev. Augusta Chapin of Oak Park.

Miss Frances E. Willard, one of the country's great educators, is president of the National Women's Christian Temperance union. I was surprised to hear from Mrs. Judd how many millions of pages this organization sends out in a year. There is a distinct trend toward temperance, she thinks. She also told me that Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, president of the local temperance organization, has almost perfected plans for the construction of an eight story building to house the international, national, and local branches of the W. C. T. U. Think of having a building, conceived by women, and put up to accommodate women's activities! We have come far, haven't we? since the days when women were not supposed to speak in the presence of the lords of creation.

The free kindergarten movement is prospering here, many of these schools for the little ones being supported by the generous women of Chicago. Mrs. E. W. Blatchford is a leader in this movement.

Mrs. R. Hall McCormick is president of the Society of Decorative Art, which helps women who need to earn their living in their own homes by means of needle or paint brush.

Of course women's clubs are flourishing. The Chicago Woman's club is a wonderful body of women, exercising much influence in the city. The Fortnightly is the inner shrine at which literary minded women of the highest social circles worship. I am pleased to be a member of that.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman B. Judd. Mr. Judd nominated Lincoln for the presidency in the Wigwam in 1860.

The Union Catholic Library Reading circle numbers many Catholic women as members, while Browning clubs are as thick as bees round a honey pot. Will says Culture [with a capital C] can be had while you wait in Chicago, for a north side Browning club meets in our block, at the home of the Willie McCormicks; the south side has one, under the leadership of Mrs. Kate Tuley, and on the west side Mrs. Celia Parker Wooley conducts a third one. Do you find Browning terribly hard to understand? Sometimes he seems to me really wilfully obscure.

Mrs. Judd told me, much to my surprise, that the Negro women of Chicago have a literary club in which they study the same subjects we are taking up in our clubs and that they are doing excellent work.

Are you going to Newport soon? Much love.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

The Woman's Temple building, projected in 1886, was built at the corner of La Salle and Adams streets by these courageous women, but a heavy mortgage on the property was too much for them and they were obliged to give it up.

Head Hunting Is Dying Out in the Philippines

Still Persists in the Remote Areas, but It Loses Its Appeal Elsewhere.

By Mason Warner.

BAGUIO, P. I.—The biggest and busiest native market in all the Philippines is situated in Baguio. Sunday marks the high point of any week's trading. All day Friday and Saturday the mountain trails for miles around are dotted with natives coming to market, bringing their products for sale and having in mind the purchase of things they need. There are many family parties in the incoming groups, and father, mother, and the children camp, cook, and sleep alongside the running streams.

Baguio is the most beautiful and most healthful resort in the far east, with wild mountain scenery, and cool forests of stately pines spreading out in every direction. It is the "summer capital" of the Philippines; Americans predominate the population. Among the places worth visiting in and around Baguio are Mount Mirador, Trinidad valley, the Antamok and Balatok gold mines, Dominican hill, Camp John Hay, and the Mansion house. Burnham park, in the center of the city, was named after David Burnham, the Chicago architect who laid out the plan for Baguio in 1904. But the market is the most unusual attraction.

They Let the Women Do the Work.

Sunday crowds at the market are estimated to number from four thousand to seven thousand. Some come in carts drawn by caraboa or bullocks; some by bus; a few in automobiles so old and broken that one wonders if they will hold together for the return trip; others on freight trucks, but the majority walks.

The women are the burden carriers and they bring to market the products of garden, field, and jungle in large baskets carried on their backs and supported by a wide lether headstrap resting across their foreheads. Another type of basket is carried on top of the head.

Baguio is in the Mountain province, a region not suited to farming, but La Union province runs along the coast, not far away, and La Union is one of the richest and most fertile regions in the world. It seems as if everything in the way of fruits, vegetables, and grain grows in La Union. The natives bring to market tobacco, peanuts, pineapples [only half as large as those in Mindanao], bananas, coconuts, durian fruit [I saw one as large as a watermelon and weighing 45 pounds], rice, lettuce—actually scores of different food products, native to both tropic and temperate zones, for Baguio is situated on a plateau 5,000 feet above sea level. A sweater or topcoat is necessary in Baguio, no matter if the thermometer registers above 110 degrees on the sea coast, less than thirty miles away. The Baguio hotels keep welcome pine log fires burning in the fireplaces in the lounges the year round, for the average temperature is 78 degrees maximum and 46 minimum.

A Paradise for the Shopper.

In addition to the foodstuffs displayed in the market there are many examples of native handcraft—home woven fabrics, coarser, and not beautifully embroidered as is the pina cloth of the south; silver jewelry, wood carvings, including book ends for the tourist trade, curios, brass and metal work, and rattan and wicker baskets of many sizes, shapes, and styles.

Bolos, the wicked looking native knives with accompanying lether sheaths, can be bought for 25 cents. Bananas, pineapples, and coconuts are sold at such low prices it does not seem worth even a native's time to bring them to market. Silver bracelets, earrings, breast pins, and similar articles are cleverly made in ingenious patterns, but the silver apparently is without alloy and so soft it is too easily twisted or broken. The coarse fabrics, with their bright colors in native designs, make attractive and practical luncheon sets, and the oftener they are washed the brighter become the colors.

Keeping the Evil Spirits at Bay.

The natives can buy whatever they need in the way of food, clothing, household utensils, and fighting weapons in the Baguio market. There is an occasional head ax offered for sale. There are also to be found the "devil chasers," without which no natives, men or women, undertake a journey. The devil chasers are simple, round, hollow bamboo sticks, 15 to 20 inches long, split two-thirds of the way, with a hole drilled near the handle end. The split end is struck on knee or hand, and the sound of vibration, which keeps the evil spirits away, is varied by pressing a finger on the hole as a flute is played. Devil chasers sell for a cent or two, but why a native should buy one when he can step into a bamboo forest and make one with three or four strokes of his bolo is not explained.

The city of Baguio is proud of its native market and does everything within the power of the municipality to encourage attendance and trade. Substantial buildings of stone provide spaces for stalls and booths, but peddlers and dealers overflow the buildings and spread their wares on the walks and in the streets.

Roast Dog a Prized Delicacy.

A short distance into a ravine leading to the market is the stockyards of the Philippines, where pigs and hogs to the number of a hundred are tethered to stakes while awaiting buyers. Beyond the pig market is the spot where horse trading takes place. And beyond this, until recently when the white residents of Baguio protested against its continuance, was found the dog market.

Roast dog is a prized delicacy among Igorrotes. The protest was not based upon a fastidious objection to dog eating, but the Igorrotes stuffed the poor animals with rice while alive and then beat them to death with clubs, thus assuring tender meat. So the dog market was moved. It is now in the hills back of the principal hotel, and at dawn the howls of the tortured and suffering canines render the morning hideous. However, the hotel clerk assured guests that "something will be done about it"—and no doubt "something" has been done by the time this appears in print.

The Igorrote people are divided among nearly a score of tribes. Among those inhabiting the Mountain province are the Apayao, Benguet, Bontoc, Ifuagao, and Kalinga. They are still primitive, wild people, believers in evil spirits as rulers of the universe, with pagan ceremonies and worship, practicing trial marriages as a general custom, living under antiquated modes, and measuring time by the moon and seasons. They are the descendants of the earliest Malayan invaders, who drove the original black woolly-headed pygmy inhabitants back up into the mountains.

Head Hunting No Longer Popular.

Historians do not agree upon the date these first Malayan invaders arrived on the Island of Luzon, but Prof. Beyer of the Philippine bureau of science says the Ifuagaos must have occupied their present territory at least two thousand years. He bases his theory upon the time needed to construct the huge system of stone walls by which the Ifuagaos irrigate their rice terraces on the mountainsides, utilizing every available foot of soil from the high timber line to the floors of the valleys, the same water inundating hundreds of rice paddies on its way down.

Good roads have accomplished much toward abolishing the former popular pastime of head hunting. In the old days villages of different tribes, though only a few miles distant from each other, regarded each other as enemies. It was the old story of "hating the stranger." Good roads brought them together, they got acquainted, and became less hostile, if not friendly.

Head hunting still persists in the remote areas of Luzon, but is almost obsolete in the Mountain province. The custom originated in the desire of the surviving members of a family to provide companions for a dead chief's spirit on the mysterious journey from earth to the Igorrote heaven. The quickest way to provide good company for the departing one was to remove the heads of a few members of an adjoining tribe. This done, reprisals were in order. Thus head hunting became an honored institution.

Going to Town in a "G" String.

The taking of a head or heads was the occasion of a great feast in celebration of the event, and all the men, women, and children participating in the feast were entitled to the decoration of tattooing as a distinguishing mark. It is worthy of note that three in every five adult natives at the Baguio market bear the tattooed designs on the arms, indicating participation in a head hunting feast.

From early morning to midafternoon the crowds surged forth and back, in and around the market, with much bargaining, gossiping, and buying. The native costumes were fascinating. The women wear skirts with broad stripes of blazing red, blue, or yellow, interspersed with black and what was once white. They are bedecked with brass necklaces and armlets, and many smoke big black homemade cigars that would make an oldtime Bowery bartender seasick. The native men consider themselves dressed for town if they don a cap, shirt or coat, and "G" string. Their naked brown legs, sturdy and muscular, add picturesqueness to a scene of moving, constantly changing color.

Altogether, the Baguio market is well worth visiting when making a tour of the orient. From it to Manila is 156 miles by motor, a five or six hour drive. Or one can go by train in an air conditioned coach to Damortis, then change to bus up the famous "zigzag" trail; or one can fly up in a good plane in an hour and a half for a moderate fare.

AN EGYPTIAN OASIS ON THE FRINGE OF THE DESERT

A picturesque view of the Great Pyramids with a water hole in the foreground. Lewis A. Till, explorer, will describe this and other Egyptian scenes in an illustrated lecture at the Fair store Friday morning.

Egypt Is Subject of Travel Lecture

"EGYPT and the Cradle of Civilization" will be the subject of an illustrated travelogue at the Fair store at 11 a. m. Friday. Lewis A. Till, world traveler and explorer, will be the speaker.

LEWIS A. TILL.

Ever since the dawn of civilization Egypt has been the goal of travelers. Today it is a perpetually sunny winter resort, combining ancient customs and modern comfort. The modern aspect is to be found chiefly in Cairo and Alexandria. Much of the rural section is the same as it was before Christ's time. Water is still carried as it was in the days of Moses, and the grain is winnowed under the same methods employed when Joseph was governor.

Mr. Till's lecture is regarded as timely, in that the season in Egypt lasts from November to March. He is appearing here under the auspices of the World Travel institute.

Florida Sunbeam Will Start Jan. 1

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week that the New York Central system, the Southern Railway system, and the Seaboard Air Line railway had pooled their resources to provide a daily service from Chicago to both coasts of Florida by way of the highland and lake regions of that state.

Heading the fleet of trains is the Florida Sunbeam; others are the Ponce de Leon and the Royal Palm. The Sunbeam, completely air conditioned, will leave Central station, Michigan avenue and Roosevelt road, at 11:45 p. m. and reach Tampa and St. Petersburg in the early morning of the second day, and West Palm Beach and Miami before noon. The service is to begin Jan. 1.

This new train will enter into competition with the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad's Dixieland, the Pennsylvania's Florida Arrow, and the Illinois Central's Floridan.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

AT least two Chicago travel officials will be starting around the world soon after the first of the year. Kenneth A. Cook, general agent for the Canadian Pacific, and A. G. Brooker, cruise agent, have been appointed to the cruise staf of the Empress of Britain, due to leave New York Jan. 7 on its annual jaunt to distant horizons. This time the liner will go by way of South Africa. The circumnavigation will take 132 days, with the return date set for May 18.

The Chicago office of the Hamburg American Line-North German Lloyd was notified yesterday that a six day service between New York and Denmark had been inaugurated. Under the new arrangement, passengers arriving at Bremerhaven on the Bremen or Europa early in the morning of the sixth day out of New York proceed immediately to Hamburg, where they connect with an express train, which in turn connects with a motor train. The last named reaches Copenhagen at 10:45 p. m. The schedule is hailed as another attainment in the age of speed.

Two special Caribbean cruises have been arranged to give northerners an opportunity to spend Christmas in the tropics and to celebrate New Year's eve on an ocean liner. One will sail from New York Dec. 20 on the Champlain of the French Line, visit the West Indies, South America, and the Panama canal, and return Jan. 2. The other, going on the Cunard-White Star's Georgic, will leave a day later, call at Bermuda, Haiti, Cuba, and the Bahamas, and likewise return the day after New Year's.

For those travelers wishing to spend Christmas at home and New Year's at sea, there will be, among numerous other short cruises, one aboard the Cunard's Majestic and another aboard the United States Line's Manhattan. Both will depart from New York Dec. 27.

For the first time in the history of the ancient Mexican port of Acapulco, two transoceanic liners, the Pennsylvania and the California, will call there this winter. The calls are on the itineraries of tour-cruises arranged by the Panama Pacific Line, with three weeks required for the trip from Chicago back to Chicago. The tours will leave here by rail Dec. 31 and Jan. 14 and will make stops at San Antonio, Monterrey, Mexico City, Xochimilco, Guadalupe, Taxco, and Cuernavaca. From there the passengers will proceed to Acapulco, on the west coast of Mexico, where they will board a ship for a cruise along Central America, through the canal, and to New York by way of Havana.

A Christmas cruise to Alaska was announced last week by the Northern Pacific railway. Leaving Chicago Dec. 11, the travelers will arrive in Seattle Dec. 14 and there board the S. S. Victoria of the Alaska Line for the trip to the far north. Returning, the passengers will reach Seattle Dec. 30 and Chicago Jan. 2. The idea is to permit Americans to see their northern territory in its winter moods and to give them a look at the land where Santa Claus' reindeers come from.

Irving Vaughans Leave on Annual Cruise of World

Hundreds of Other Chicagoans Prepare to Spend Xmas Holidays in Europe.

MR. AND MRS. IRVING VAUGHAN sailed on the Excambion Tuesday on the first leg of a trip around the world. After a cruise through the Mediterranean they will continue their way on various other liners. Mr. Vaughan, sports writer for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, makes the trip each year as soon as the baseball and football seasons are out of the way.

Fellow Chicagoland passengers on the Excambion were Mrs. Frank E. Brown, bound for Syria; Mrs. May S. de Gheest, going to Marseilles, and Miss Anna Ruskin.

Jules Ryss, likewise starting on an eastward journey around the world, left Friday on the Aquitania. Miss Rose Engel and Mrs. Donald McWilliams embarked for England on the same ship. Also sailing for England are Richard Goulden, Mrs. E. L. Nightingale, and Miss L. M. Beasley, all of whom took passage yesterday on the Samaria.

Going Back to the Fatherland.

Hundreds of European born Americans from Chicago and the middle west will sail in the next two weeks to spend Christmas with relatives in their native lands. The majority of them are going as members of personally conducted excursions. One large group, bound for central European countries, will sail Tuesday on the Manhattan, with Victor P. Kolasinski in charge. Another group, accompanied by J. R. Boyd, will leave on the same ship for Ireland.

The Laconia and the Majestic will sail Friday with vacationists planning to spend the holidays on foreign shores. J. Mason will accompany the Scottish excursionists; J. L. White, the English, and M. S. Eherovich, those bound for Central Europe. Another delegation will sail Saturday on the Ile de France with Joseph S. Gianni for a French yuletide. Other groups are booked to sail on the Britannic, Aquitania, Lafayette, Washington, and Rex. These five ships will sail from New York Dec. 14.

Others Bound for Old World.

Mrs. Lawrence Williams of Lake Forest left last week on the Lafayette to visit her sister, Mrs. C. Ross Cuthbert, in London.

Dominico Pandolfi, a former Chicagoan, who now lives in Rome, sailed for home yesterday on the Conte di Savoia with his daughter Julia after a vacation with friends here. Others departing on the Conte di Savoia were Karl Wadekin, on his way to Zurich; James Ellis, to Budapest, and Miss Maria Fiari and Giuseppe Ciampi, to Genoa.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Berolzheimer, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Muellen Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Errett Van Nice, all of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Meyer of Milwaukee left on the Monarch of Bermuda for brief sojourns in Bermuda.

Electing to travel around rather than across America, Mrs. R. Evans, Mrs. Anna Shaul, and Mr. and Mrs. M. Grimes and their daughter Louise sailed from New York for San Francisco yesterday on the Virginia.

Among the Chicagoans leaving Europe for home last week on the Ile de France were Mr. and Mrs. George T. Bunker Jr., O. B. Stevenson, and Miss Jean Handelman.

HALLSTADT, picturesque old Austrian town on its own lake. . . . Waters amid wild and romantic scenery. . . . Houses perched one above another, with wide roofs and wooden balconies. . . . Site of early lake dwellers. . . . No spare acres for the dead; the graveyard once each decade is moved to the charnel house. . . . At Obertraun, nearby, one makes the ascent to the famous ice caves of the Dachstein. . . . Eight hours to the summit. . . . Mountains rising from the lake's somber edge to the clouds. . . . Here lake dwelling Celts lived on pile founded houses 4,000 years ago. . . . Salt chambers in the mountain, where salt was mined in the stone age. More than a million tourists a year to Austria and many thousands to the Hallstadt region.

- Torun, ancient stronghold of the Teutonic knights in Poland. . . . Fifty miles from Marienwerber. . . . Birthplace of the 16th century astronomer, Nicholas Copernicus. . . . Polish proverb runs: "Gingerbread of Torun, Cracow girls, and Warsaw shoes are the best things in Poland." . . . Tourists travel there today for more than its gingerbread. . . . Its three ancient churches are among the best of Poland's gothic temples . . . Here also is Poland's only leaning tower, erected in the 14th century. . . . A gothic town hall is superb. . . . The castle of the Teutonic knights is in ruin. . . . Many old granaries, relics of the days when its grain went far abroad.

Borneo Donning Modern Mantle

SEATTLE—Borneo, once the original habitat of the wild man and exponent of all things reminiscent of the primeval, is slowly but surely donning the mantle of modernity. One evidence of this is furnished by J. D. Glass, representing one of the large oil companies of California, who has arrived from the orient on the American Mail liner President Grant and who says the oil fields of Borneo are being developed with great rapidity.

According to Mr. Glass, the Dutch, who own the major portion of Borneo and the Islands of Java and Sumatra, are developing the industrial and travel potentialities of these possessions. Java already is well settled and properous and is attracting considerable tourist trafic. Sumatra, however, is looked upon as offering the greatest natural attractions from a travel point of view, and railway construction on that island is now receiving particular attention.

Mr. Glass says that when the various possibilities of the orient are a little more fully realized along the lines of interior travel facilities, eastern Asia will have more to offer the tourist than any other spot on the globe.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

WORD comes to Chicago from Mexico that the new Pan-American highway, closely linking this country with its neighbor to the south, probably will be officially opened late next spring. Thus will end a long and troubled effort to gain a direct passage to Mexico City.

Right now the road is supposed to be closed to trafic, even though it is being used to some extent by tourists from the United States. The Mexican government doesn't want to take the responsibility for whatever accidents or delays may occur.

- Chicagoans who have made the trip this fall relate that it will require many months for the gravel to settle. They say there are likely to be landslides for several years in certain sections, but that once these end the débris can be rapidly cleared away and should not interrupt trafic. Meanwhile travelers to the southland—and there will be thousands of them this winter—will stick to the old reliables: The railroads, the airways, and the steamship lines.

- Some tourists have brought back the report that en route from Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City they were unable to find any good hotels along the highway except at Monterrey and Victoria. Federal officials down there have replied that the government is providing all kinds of facilities, such as tax exemption, for concerns or individuals wishing to build hotels, and that these measures will relieve the situation in a year or so.

Mexico expects the road to open up numerous sections that so far have lacked proper communication with the outside world and to increase the already large flow of visitors from this country. It will greatly augment the transportation systems now in use.

- American Ambassador Josephus Daniels set forth the other day that he is looking for throngs of his fellow citizens in the Mexican capital next summer—soon after the highway has been completed.

That sounds logical enough. But the trouble is that summer is the rainy season, when highway conditions aren't so good. The dry season extends from November to May, and that's when most travelers like to travel. It looks as if many of them will refuse to wait until the road is open.

I have heard that the Holland-America line is about to build a new flagship. What can you tell me about it? F. H.

The ship will measure 33,000 gross tons and accommodate more than 1,300 passengers. Two sets of turbines will generate 34,000 shaft horsepower. The hull is to be streamlined, and the funnels so modeled as to minimize wind resistance. There will be ten decks. The agreement to build the vessel was reached late in October by the line, five Netherlands shipyards, and representatives of labor organizations.

In a little church built at Tarpon Springs for Greek fishermen who dive for sponges is a rare collection of George Innis paintings. Architectural monuments of the early Spaniards are to be seen at St. Augustine, Fort George Island, Daytona Beach, Pensacola, and New Smyrna. A Russian exile built Florida's first railroad. AIDS ANNUAL BALL

Mrs. Louis C. Sudler is a member of the board of Emerson House, which is working to make a success of the organization's annual ball to be given Dec. 11. The party will be held at the Stevens hotel, and Jack Hylton, the British orchestra leader, will furnish the music. Proceeds from the benefit will go to Emerson Settlement house on West Grand avenue.

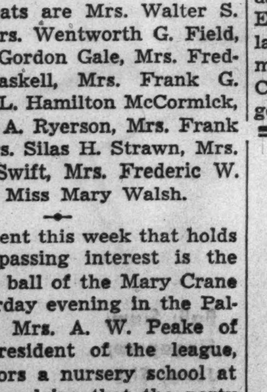
Cordon Club Is to Repeat Its Co-Opera Success, "Hi-Eda"

TESTIMONY to its entertainment value, the Cordon club's new deal co-opera, "Hi-Eda," is to be repeated next week on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday evenings, Dec. 9, 10, 11, and 14. The show was given last spring for the first time, and it drew such enthusiastic comment that the club has voted to present four more performances.



MISS MARY CAMERON.
[Beidler Photo.]

Miss Mary Cameron, a Cordon member, is the author of the words and music, and is director of the cast. The performance next week will be given in the clubrooms in the Fine Arts building, 410 South Michigan avenue.

Some of those who have taken blocks of seats are Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Wentworth G. Field, Mrs. Henry Gordon Gale, Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell, Mrs. Frank G. Logan, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Martin A. Ryerson, Mrs. Frank D. Stout, Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, and Miss Mary Walsh.

A social event this week that holds more than passing interest is the third annual ball of the Mary Crane league, Saturday evening in the Palmer house. Mrs. A. W. Peake of Evanston, president of the league, which sponsors a nursery school at Hull house, explains that the party will be a "snowball" affair.

Assisting Mrs. Peake with the arrangements are Mrs. J. Edgar Lee of Evanston, Mrs. William McNamee, also of Evanston, and Mrs. Congor Reynolds and Mrs. Herbert E. Zipprodt of Kenilworth.

Apropos Hull house, the Hull House Woman's club is to have its annual Christmas card party Friday evening in the Graemere hotel, Homan and Washington boulevards. This club is one of the oldest women's organizations in Chicago and one of the most respected. Miss Mary E. McDowell was the first president, and the late Jane Addams an active member until the time of her death. Miss Laura Thornton, president, is the daughter of a charter member. Mrs. J. E. Morris, program chairman, Mrs. B. J. McDonnell, and Miss Thornton are working together for the success of the party.

All of Chicago's blind are invited to a party which the Blind Service association is to have at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Industrial Home for the Blind, 1900 Marshall boulevard. Mrs. George Schretter, critic of the American Library association, will give the second of a series of talks on "Books of World Recognition," and Esther Cadkin, lyric soprano, formerly with the Opera Royale of Italy, will give a musical program. Mrs. Gottfried D. Bernstein is the capable president of the association.

The Dorothy Kahn Club for Crippled Children will meet at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Standard club. Dr. Joshua Loth Liebman, rabbi of K. A. M. Temple, will be the guest speaker, with Mrs. R. D. Katz presiding, and Mrs. A. B. Counselman, hostess. The program has been planned by Mrs. Julius Shiffman.

At 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon Mrs. E. J. Wexler will give a musical and tea in her home, 5240 Sheridan road, to benefit the earning fund of the Dorothy Kahn club. Mrs. Wexler is the founder and honorary president of the north side junior auxiliary of the club, which helps abundantly to brighten the lives of Chicago's little cripples.

The Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing will hold its annual fall bazar and Christmas sale all day Friday and Saturday in its quarters, 64 East Lake street. There will be a large and interesting selection of merchandise at moderate prices: Christmas gifts, homemade bakery goods, jellies, and jams.

Kelley's Test of Good Art Show Disputed

Critic Would Reverse Criterion of Assistant Director of Institute.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE ill-fated American Paintings and Sculpture exhibition at the Art institute has only another week to run, but it is not too late to tell two good stories that have come out of it. With all the publicity that has been showered upon its macabre paintings it is not strange that an unusually large crowd has filled the galleries from week to week. One Sunday some 14,000 people went in to see the show and the total for three days was 17,000 visitors. This would reflect credit upon Chicago as an art loving center were it not for the justice that lies behind Daniel Catton Rich's remark: "We wish we were getting them in here under a different pretext. They come and ask the guard, 'Where are the dirty paintings?'"

The second story is told in all seriousness by a woman who swears she is repeating exactly what she heard and if she heard correctly the museum guides must brush up on their art history. My informant was standing in the gallery where "Lovers on a Stool," by Mary E. Fife, hangs and through which a group of women were being conducted. The Art institute lecturer stopped the group at this particular painting and drew their attention to the leg. The leg is so obvious that it is doubtful whether any of the women would have missed it, but, be that as it may, attention was centered on it and the lecturer said: "In the leg you see a real Titian."

Rubens, Not Titian, Miss Fife's Artistic Ancestor.

There was more, rather a lot more, comment upon the composition, but Titian was the artist on whom Miss Fife's rugged harlot was fostered by implication, while, if there is any throwback to an early master in this picture it surely can only be attributed to the school of Rubens. Rubens painted vigorous females, robust and voluptuous. Titian is more famous for his red haired blonde beauties, ladies, all of them.

So, in spite of the museum guide, if you must this next week stop in and see how the "Lovers" are progressing, link them in memory with Rubens and let Titian sleep in peace.

Pictures Harshe Selected Marked with Circle at Back.

By the way, one last bit of advice, for the first time in history the director of the Art institute, Mr. Harshe, is willing to have his selection of the paintings known. Those he invited are marked with a blue circle on the back and if you are curious ask the guard to turn the paintings over for you. Thinking over the show at the moment, it is difficult to remember a hundred paintings that would be a credit to their sponsor, whether he invited or juried them. [There is the most remarkable lot of ephemeral trash in this exhibition!] And, on your hunt for the "dirty" paintings, do not overlook "Bal Negre" by Edwin Boyd Johnson. It is small and dark and likely to be missed, but when you find it it ranks well with the best drawing cards in the show.

Charles Fabens Kelley, assistant director of the Art institute, has been heard to say that an exhibition is good if it has one or two good paintings in it. The same sophistry has been used by others and it usually is voiced when the Art institute exhibits are up for discussion. I think the odds should be turned the other way and a good show should be one in which only one or two poor paintings occurred. There is no reason why we should not have brilliant exhibits in the museum, if standards were enforced again and slipshod "new notes" put at a discount.

The Fifth International Exhibition of Lithography and Wood Engraving will continue in the print rooms of the Art institute to Jan. 16. It is an excellent show, and it seems a pity that so few of the thousands who are climbing the stairs to see the poor paintings do not turn their footsteps to the print galleries where a really fine exhibit is being neglected. Lithographs and wood engravings, like etchings, have not the spectacular appeal of paintings, but when they are well done they have a fascination peculiarly their own. This exhibition is a splendid one to use as an introduction for those who do not know much of the lithographer's craft. It has its modern part, but the modern note here, in virtually every instance, has been written by an instructed hand.

Moderns in Chicago Society of Artists Exhibit Bearable.

The Chicago Society of Artists, the modern contingent of what was formerly a united association of Chicago painters and sculptors, is holding its annual exhibition in the Diana Court building. Naturally a great deal of modern art is present but as it stands on its own feet, unbacked by museum prestige, it is not too difficult to like it—in part. There are various elements of it that are hard to swallow, for instance the movement in Francis Chapin's medal winning landscape and again in Vavak's "Summer." Those are whiffle trees, whiffling in the sun, and if you don't know how trees whiffle look at the pictures; they clear the mystery.

There are various gloomy and portentious creatures staring at one here and there, and you will find some joyous sprites, such as the "Diana" by Camille Andrene Kauffman about whom one can only say: "Run, child, run! The goblins will get you if you don't watch out!" This special Diana is nearly a twin to the Milles' Diana of the fountain that gives the building its name.

Ivan Le Lorraine Albright shows two interesting canvases with extremely long names. You may have three guesses as to the nature of "On This Moving Earth of Cool Light—Cool Like the Light of the Moon—There Stands a Red House." Right! Curiously enough, it is a red house, an old fashioned red house, framed in a black frame, a complete Victorian survival, looming out of that title. Mr. Albright's other picture is "There Were No Flowers Tonight," and it shows a woman leaning over untying her ballet slipper strings. The woman looks like Ida, the Ida who is immortalized forever in the sonorous line "Into the World Came a Soul Called Ida" which, in former years, was another Albright favorite. If this is Ida she should not mourn her lack of flowers, for she has lost at least thirty pounds and her skin is several shades lighter and fresher and, all in all, she is an entirely rejuvenated person.

Gertrude Abercrombie shows several rather pensive compositions, a little dark and a little melancholy and a little romantic. Frances Badger offers several amusing and pictorial woodland scenes, birds and little animals frisking about cheerfully in bowers of bright green leaves. Todros Geller shows a gay "Monday" with the wash dancing in the background and two nice gossips exchanging jokes in the foreground.

Magda Heuermann has won the D. J. McCarthy prize of $100 for "the most meritorious miniature in the exhibition" in the Annual Water Color and Miniature exhibition at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Miss Heuermann's miniature is a portrait, "My Father." It shows an elderly man with flowing beard, seated, book in hand.

Many a truth is said in jest!

The truth is we are OVERLOADED
ON FINE FALL AND WINTER
APPAREL

Due to the inclement and unseasonable weather, we find ourselves overstocked. Our floors are crowded with fine high-fashion women's apparel. New clothes for Southern and cruise wear are coming in—we must make room. We must unload! We must clear the remainder of fall stock! We must sacrifice!

This is typical of the hundreds of amazing values that you will find here.

PERMANENTS
UNBELIEVABLY NATURAL
..through the technique used only at Burnham's

AFTER a Burnham Permanent, the effect is never, "She's had a new permanent." Instead it's, "Isn't her hair lovely!"

The incomparable naturalness of a Burnham Permanent comes through the matchless skill of specialists, through our having available the six leading permanent wave methods, through our exclusive use of the trade-marked materials approved by the makers, through the way we use them.

The result is always a lovelier, more natural, and longer lasting permanent...one that leaves the hair soft, lustrous and alive. The price of $5.00, for short hair not grey or white, includes a shampoo and finger wave. Day or evening appointments.

Combination Treatment
A personality haircut, shampoo and finger wave by an expert coiffure artist, $2.00.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

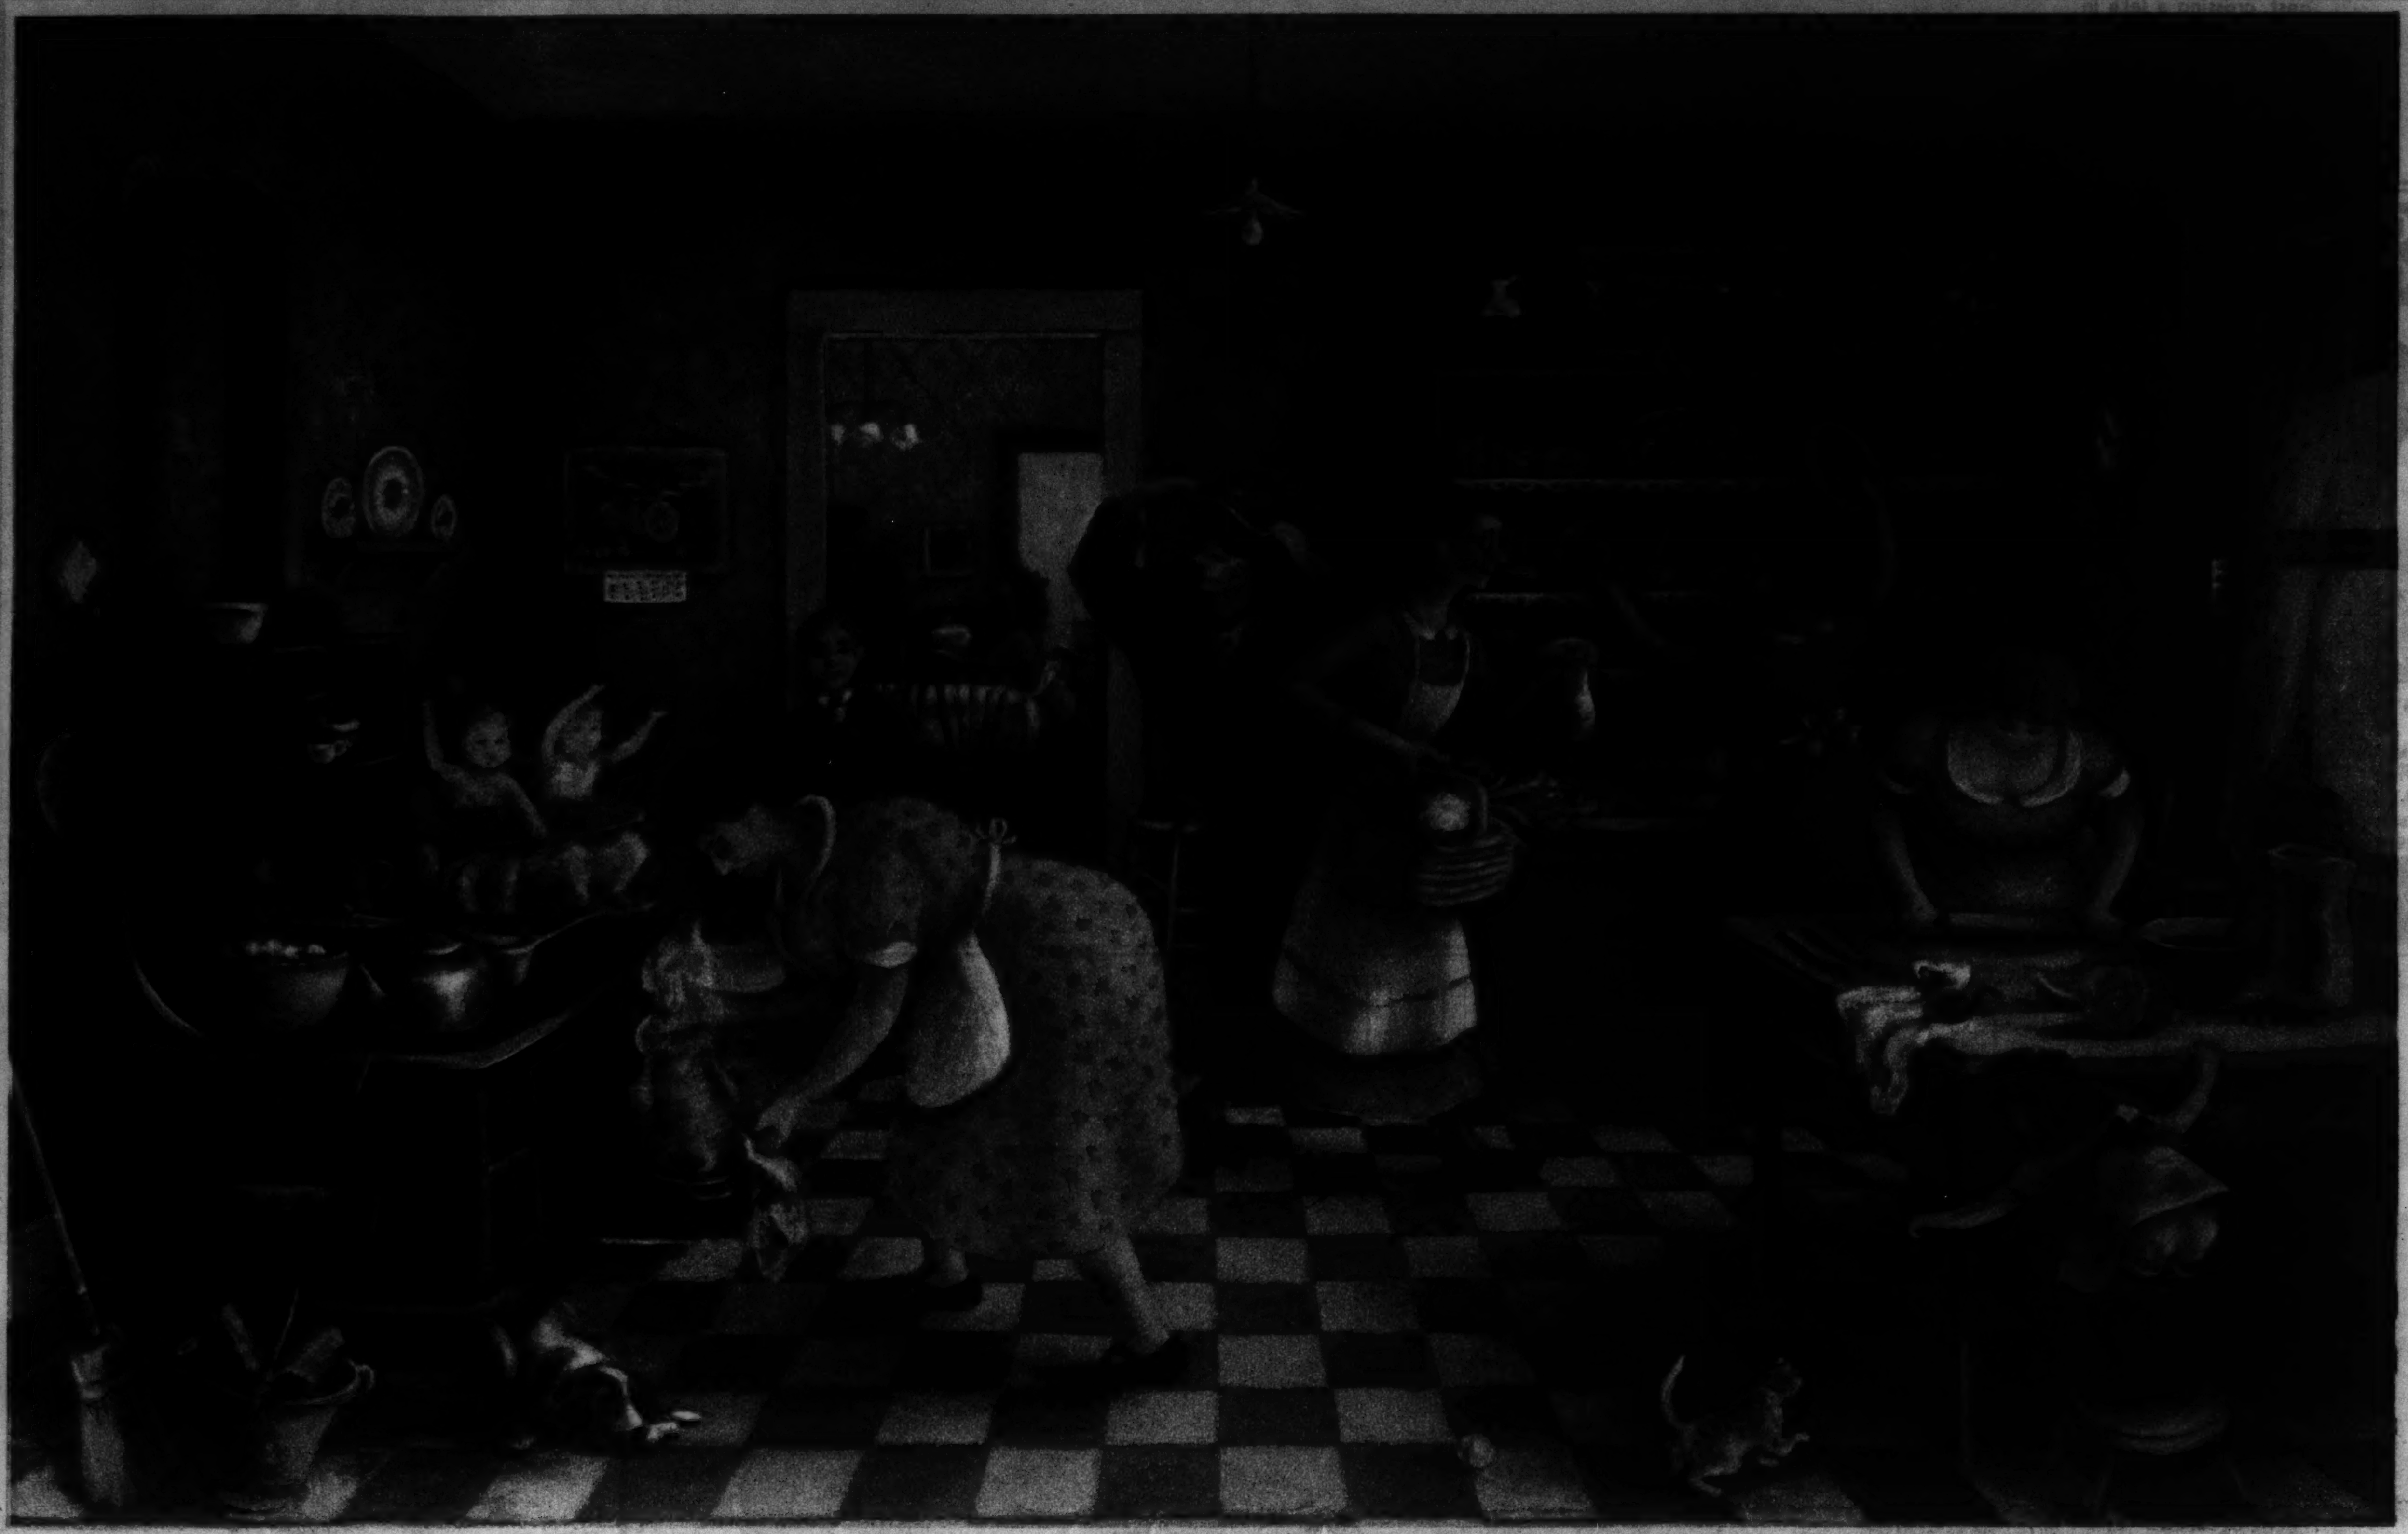
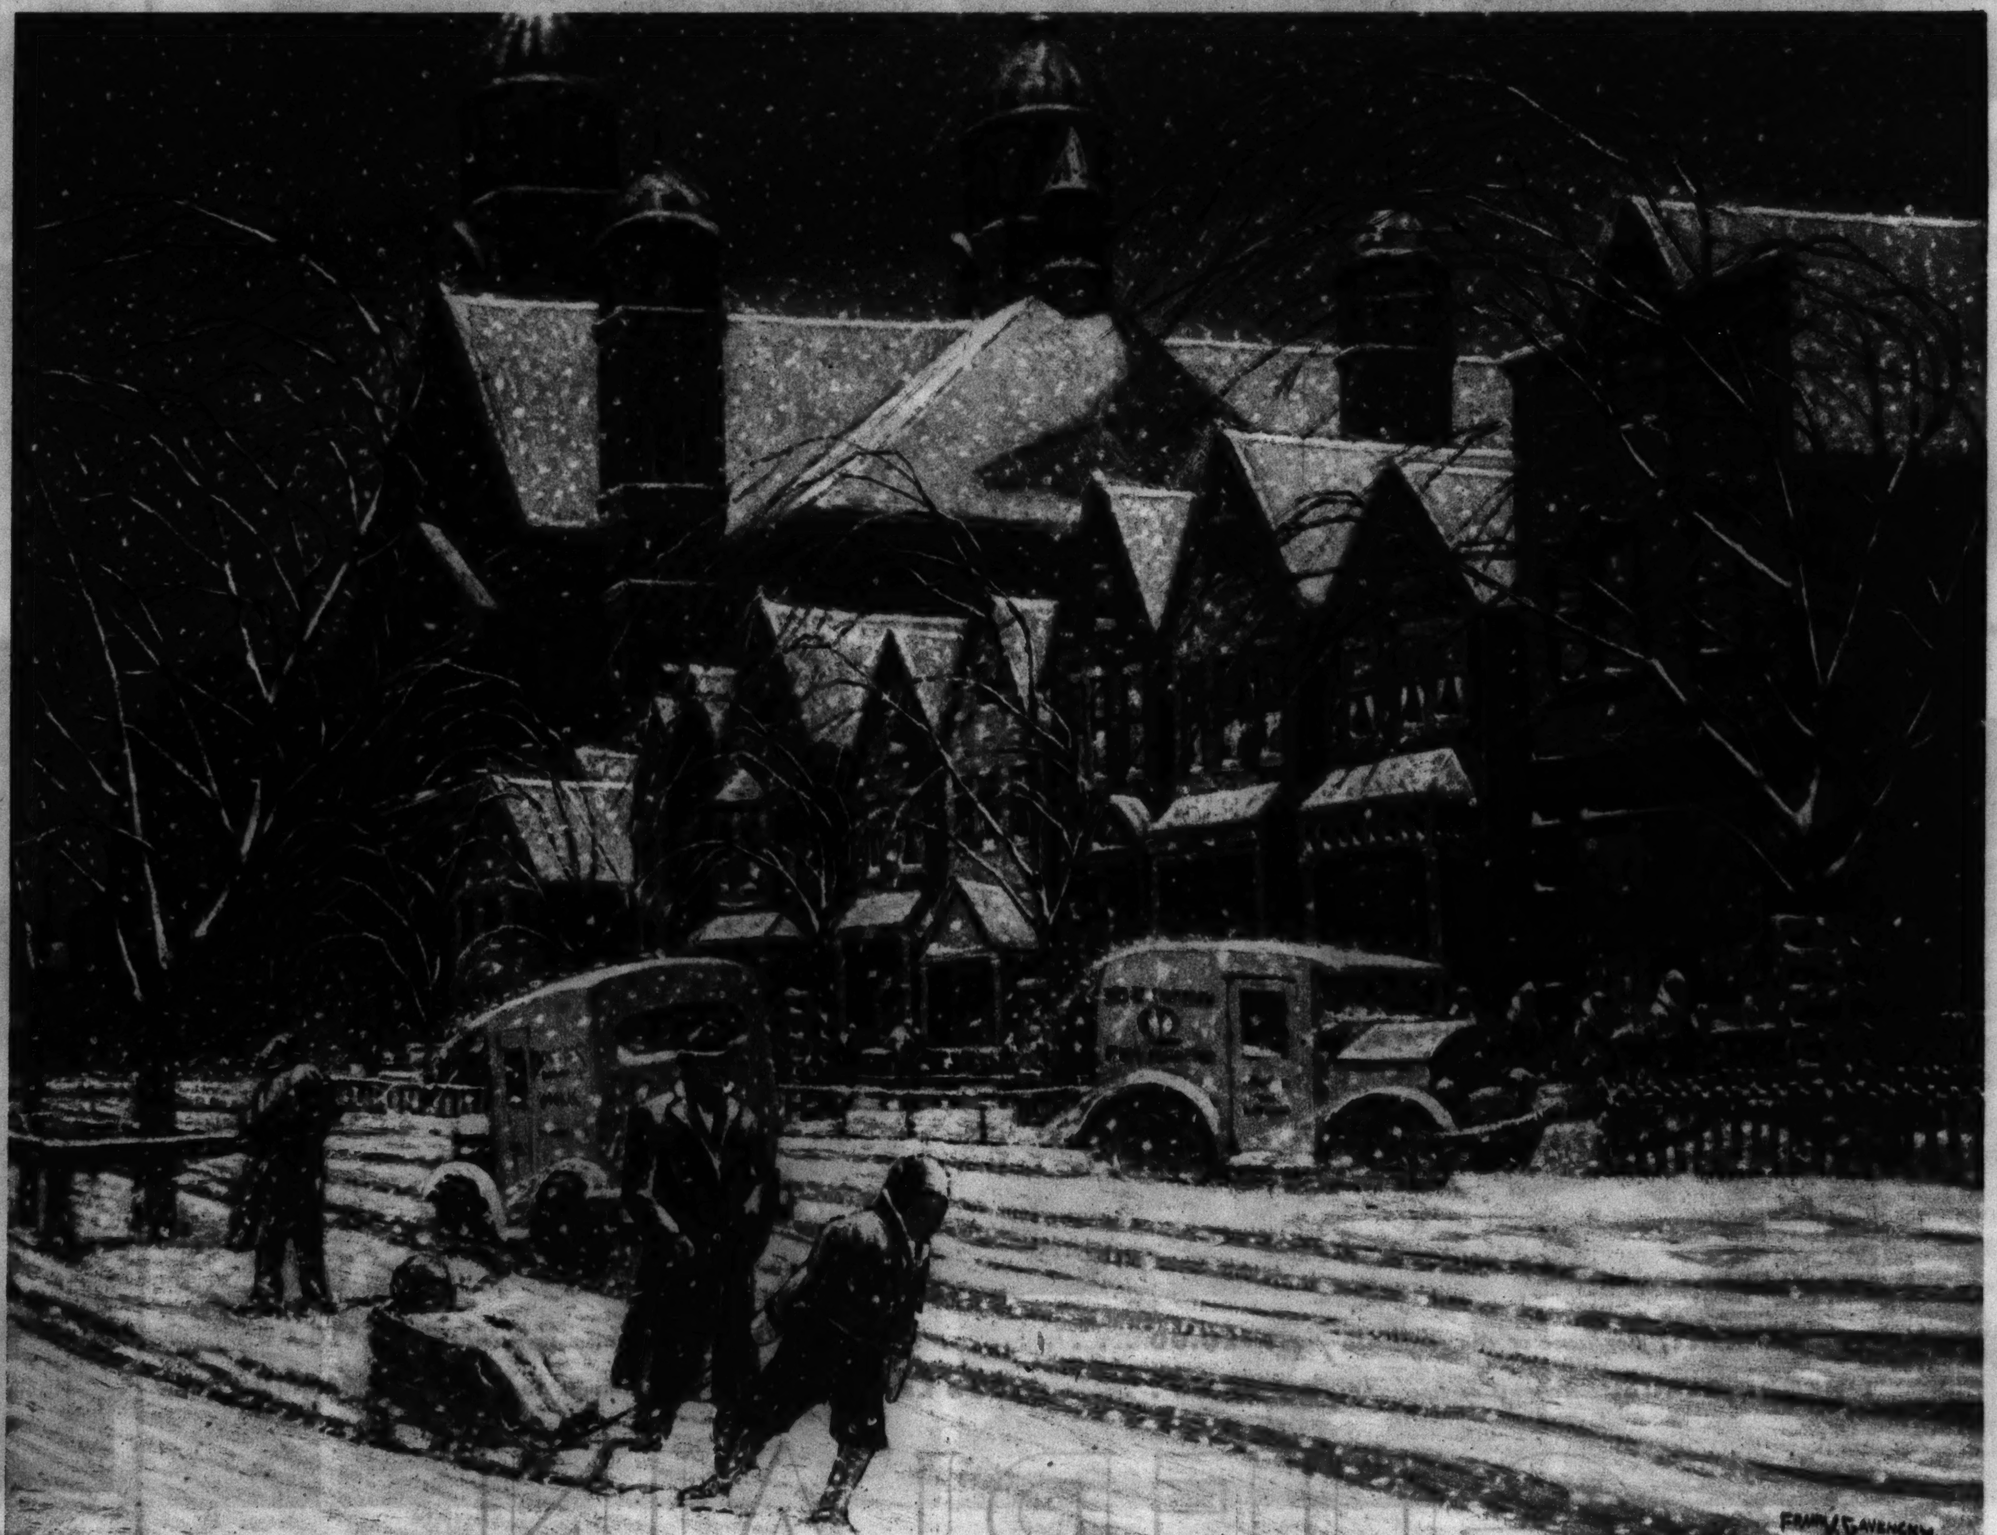
December 1, 1935



THANKSGIVING

by Doris Lee

This unpretentious and amusing canvas was awarded the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan Art institute medal and $500 in the current 46th annual exhibition of American paintings and sculpture at the Chicago Art institute. Miss Lee is a native of Illinois.



SNOW FALL

by Frank J. Gavencky

A rather stiff and conventional winter scene, this canvas is dignified by being virtually the only conservative painting passed by the jury for the current Art institute exhibition. Gavencky is a member of the Palette and Chisel club and is noted for his flower paintings.

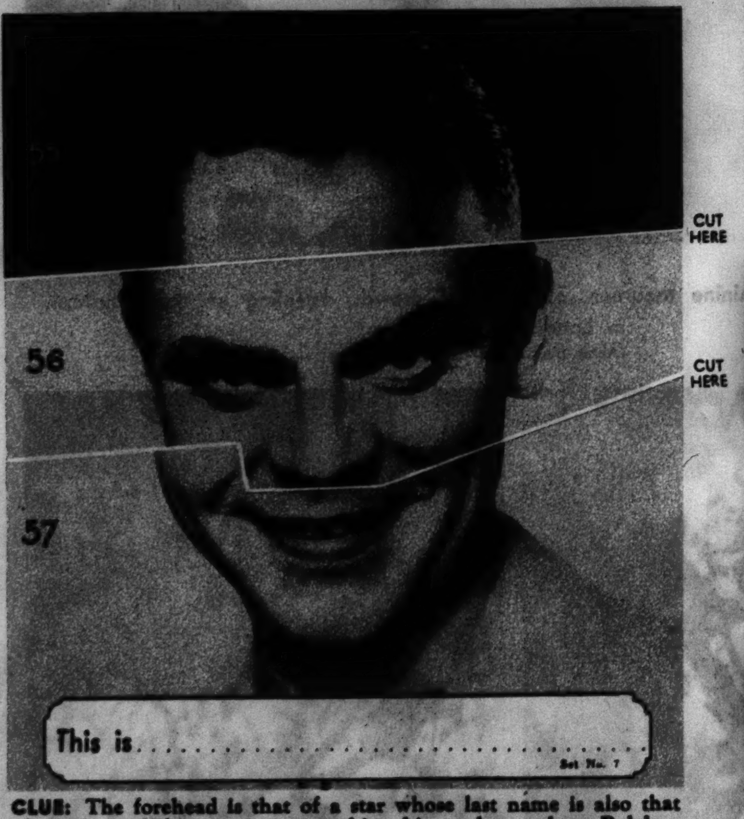
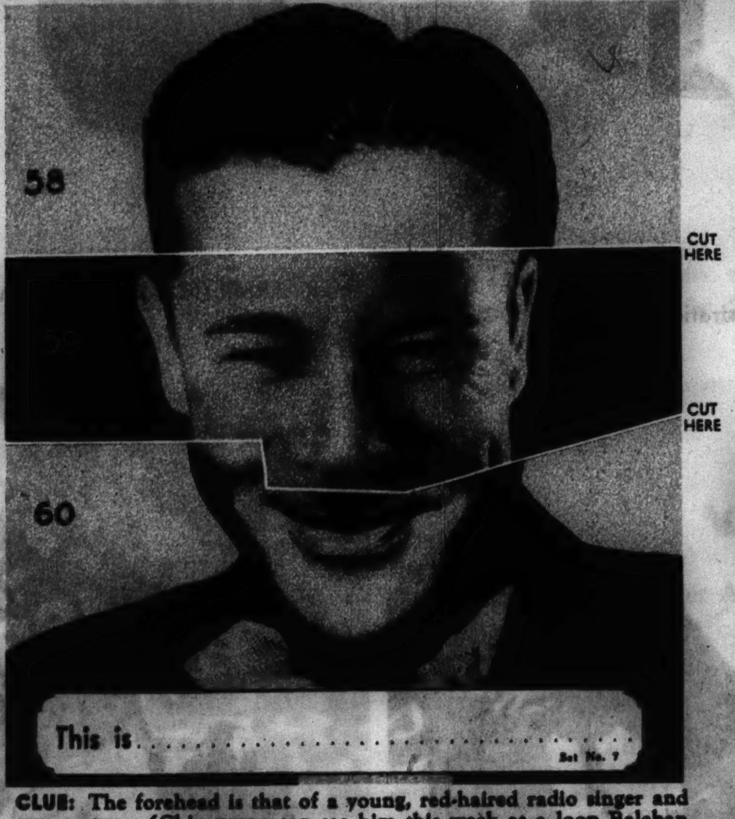
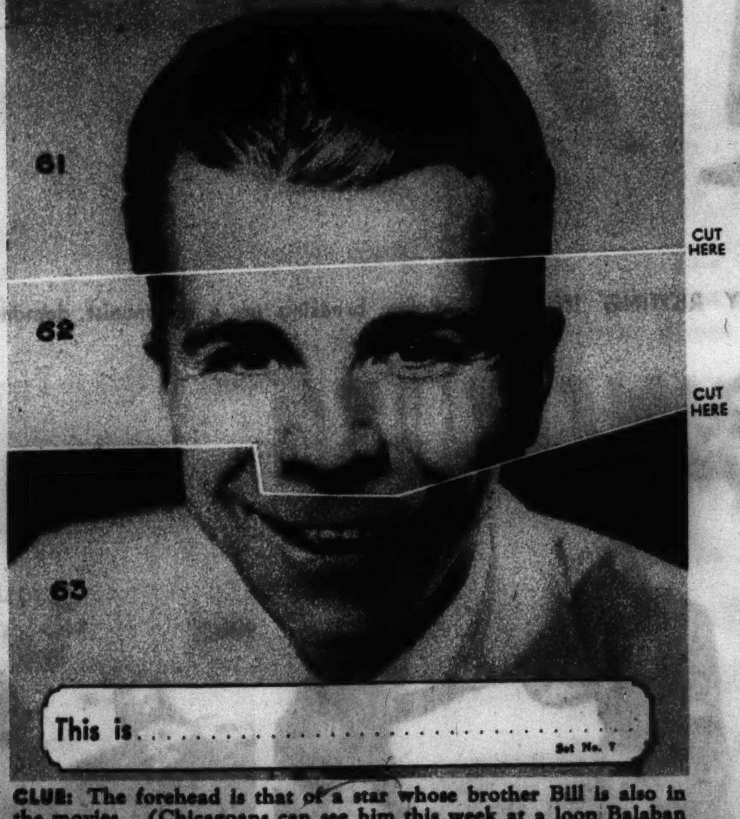
Set No. 7



CLUE: The forehead is that of a star whose last name is also that of a color. (Chicagoans can see him this week at a loop Balaban & Katz Theater.) These deep set, brown eyes are seen in a recently released film version of a Shakespearean play. The mouth and chin are those of an actor frequently co-starred with the wife of a famous singer.

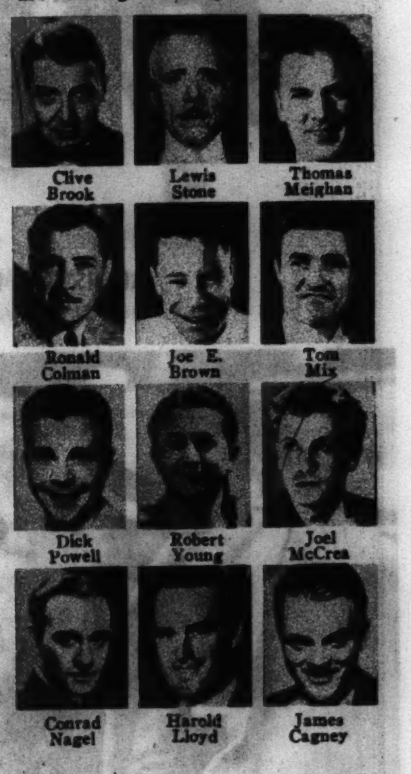


CLUE: The forehead is that of a young, red-haired radio singer and screen star. (Chicagoans can see him this week at a loop Balaban & Katz Theater.) The eyes and nose are those of a star who plays comedy parts. The mouth and chin are those of a star whose first name has one letter less than his last name.



CLUE: The forehead is that of a star whose brother Bill is also in the movies. (Chicagoans can see him this week at a loop Balaban & Katz Theater.) You have seen these smiling eyes in a number of musical spectacles. No clue is needed to recognize this mouth and chin.

The Movie Stars in Set No. 7 are among those pictured below



THE STARS WHOSE PHOTOGRAPHS ARE USED IN THIS CONTEST APPEAR REGULARLY IN PICTURES AT BALABAN & KATZ THEATERS! . . . SEE THEM THERE!

• THE RULES •

WHO CAN ENTER: Every man, woman, boy and girl is eligible, regardless of residence, excepting employes of the Chicago Tribune, employes of Balaban & Katz theaters and members of their families.

WHAT TO DO: The pictures must be cut apart, assembled and pasted together. Below each picture must be written the name of the star. You may trim off rough edges if you wish to make perfect rectangular pictures. Three pictures will appear each Sunday in the Chicago Sunday Tribune until 36 pictures have appeared. Each set of three pictures, when cut apart and assembled properly, will make complete portraits.

WHERE TO SEND ENTRIES: DO NOT send in pictures one at a time. Hold all pictures until you have the complete set of 36. Then send them to "Misplaced Faces," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois. No entry will be returned. All entries must be in by midnight 15 days after Set No. 12 is published. Each entry must be sent by first class mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department.

THE PRIZES: The Chicago Tribune will pay 428 cash prizes totaling $10,000 to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of pictures in accordance with these rules. See prize list above. You do not necessarily have to solve each of the 36 pictures correctly to win. Prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest. Elaborate entries are not necessary. Just make your entry simple and neat.

JUDGING: Entries will be judged by a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Entrants agree to accept this committee's decision as final. Accuracy in assembling and naming the pictures, and neatness of entry will be the sole determining factors. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be paid.

NOTHING TO BUY: It is not necessary to buy the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

For Back Copies Containing Previously Published Sets of Pictures in This Contest See Your Newsdealer or the Tribune.

2 Things to Do

TO EASE COLD INSTANTLY

Discomfort and Aches Go Almost Instantly This Way

1. Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets in ⅓ glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness instantly.

The pictured directions above show perhaps the quickest, simplest and most modern method yet discovered to combat cold and sore throat.

Your own doctor will approve this way. Millions of people have discarded "cold killers" and patent nostrums for this modern way. It relieves the average cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Note that all you do is this.

Two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a full glass of water.

Three Bayer Aspirin tablets, crushed and dissolved in ⅓ glass of water as a gargle. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back to permit this medicated gargle to reach the irritated membranes of the throat.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally acts to fight a cold almost instantly. AND — eases the aches and pains that accompany most colds.

The gargle acts instantly like a local anesthetic to soothe pains in the throat and to ease throat irritation.

Try this way. You will be amazed at how quickly you can ease a cold. Be sure, though, that you get Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets. They dissolve almost instantly in the stomach. Hence start working almost instantly. And also, dissolve thoroughly enough in water for use as a gargle.

Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water.

By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

A Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach — Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

Yardley of London

TO DECK THE WORLD'S MOST CELEBRATED CHRISTMASES!

BY APPOINTMENT TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND

AGE-OLD is the tradition of the Christmas Hunt in England and in many parts of the world. But not — oh troubled reader — the Hunt for Christmas Presents that so often makes our lovely traditional ceremony a modern nightmare.

. . There is, you see, a certain graceful custom cultivated by the bright young descendants of those who led medieval pageants. In England it centers around Yardley House in Bond Street. In America, at Yardley House, Fifth Avenue.

. . From them, a glorious tide of Christmas gifts that honor both recipient and giver is welling forth. You'll find one sparkling wave of it on your nearest fine store's counter. And there, select untroubled!

. . No Yardley offering is too tiny to bear its royal crest and Bond Street flavor of distinguished taste! None too magnificent to outshine the thoughtfulness of its giver! Even the danger of choice and duplication holds no perils: for who could have too many such delightfully fragrant luxuries?

. . The prices, too, are planned to add peace and joy to your heartfelt Christmas lavishness — for they begin at $1.25 and mount most gradually to $30. You may fill your list tomorrow easily but charmingly—with enough left over for some Yardley Christmas charm for you! Yardley & Co., Ltd., 620 Fifth Avenue (Rockefeller Center), New York City; 33, Old Bond Street, London; Paris, Toronto, Sydney.

1 Men's Distinguished Gift Set including the famous shaving bowl, shaving lotion, talc, hair tonic and soap $6.00

2 Young Girl's Set: youthful combination of English Lavender, talcum, face powder and Lavender soap $3.25

3 Tremendous Trifles, for many names on your list: Yardley's Single Compact, cake or loose powder $1.50
Yardley's Double Compact, cake or loose powder $2.50
Yardley's Triple Compact, with attached lipstick $3.30
(with loose powder, $3.60)
Yardley's De Luxe Triple Compact with 2 interchangeable lipsticks . . . $3.95
($4.25 with loose powder)

4 Distinguished complimentary combination of English Lavender Bath Salts and Soap, only $1.50

5 Beauty Bath Set containing Lavendomeal, Lavender soap, dusting powder and wicker flask of Lavender $6.60

6 Traveling case for particular men: shaving cream, shaving lotion and invisible talc in folding case $2.95

7 Bath Luxury Set, containing English Lavender, soap, dusting powder, salts, and English Complexion Cream $6.50

8 Complexion Compendium. . . . A complete set of the cosmetics and toiletry series, handsomely boxed $14.85

THE FRAGRANCE Gemey

Up Regent Street in London . . . in the rue de la Paix . . . down Bubbling Well Road in Shanghai . . . men and women are hurrying to be ready for Christmas. And up at the top of shopping lists, in gay capitals the world around, is that gift-favorite of lovely women everywhere, the fragrance Gemey.

Here in America, too, at your favorite perfume counter, Richard Hudnut presents an appealing gift collection . . . perfume and powder, compacts and lipsticks, dozens of beauty baubles dear to a woman's heart . . . all gaily, delicately, refreshingly scented with the fragrance Gemey!

Choose Gemey—for the one you like best. Take a leaf from the Christmas notebook of the smart cosmopolite, a tip from the world traveler. Watch HER eyes sparkle when she finds beneath her Christmas tree any one of these glamorous gifts in that heart-stirring fragrance Gemey.

1—Lucky the lady whose self-appointed Santa chooses Gemey Face Powder, Rouge, and Lipstick—all scented with the same world-famous fragrance! In a blue and silver gift box, $2.35.

2—Don't let being a "mere man" keep you from giving her perfume! She's sure to thank you for Gemey, the fragrance that won its way around the world. In a crystal clear flacon, $3.75.

3—Canny Christmas givers choose gifts that are long on pleasure—light on cost. Gemey Face Powder and Toilet Water, for instance, in this dressy, satin-lined gift package, only $2.75.

4—Four essentials to a fastidious toilet: Perfume, Toilet Water, Face Powder, Talc . . . all in the alluring fragrance Gemey. In a box she'll save to keep stockings and hankies in. $5.

5—Spangles and sparkles dress up this gay blue and silver box that holds three Gemey treasures: Perfume, Face Powder, and double compact for powder and rouge. She'll love it. $3.50.

Much safer..SAY DOCTORS for little babies

FEWER DIGESTIVE UPSETS
So smooth . . . Libby's Homogenized foods actually help safeguard babies against digestive upsets. They digest far more easily than any strained foods. Thousands of doctors are now recommending Homogenized foods because they know digestive upsets all too often lead to tragic consequences.

BETTER WEIGHT GAINS
Your baby gets more vitamins and minerals from Libby's Homogenized foods than from the finest strained foods, scientific tests show. Homogenized vegetables, fruits, cereal and soup give babies extra nourishment for faster growth and better development!

PROTECTION AGAINST ANEMIA
Libby's Homogenized foods are being fed weeks earlier than strained foods . . . to give babies the minerals and vitamins they need to protect against nutritional anemia. Ask your doctor when your baby should start. Feed Homogenized foods with a spoon . . . or mixed with the milk formula in baby's bottle. They flow freely through a new nipple!

GREAT ADVANCE OVER STRAINED FOODS
Libby's special process of Homogenization "explodes" food cells . . . makes solid foods easier to digest . . . more nourishing.

Whole food cells like this are found in the most carefully prepared strained foods. Valuable nourishment baby needs is imprisoned.

Libby's special process of Homogenization "explodes" all food cells. Every bit of nourishment is released for easy digestion.

Baby's vegetables, fruits, cereal and soup now Homogenized by a special Libby process . . . actually give babies a head start in health!

- A better way to prepare the vegetables, fruits, soup and cereal your baby needs has been found!
- Libby uses a special method of Homogenization that "explodes" the cells in baby foods so all nourishment is really released for quick, easy digestion...and reduces coarse fibers into tiny, non-irritating particles.
- Foods keep all their natural bulk . . . but it is smooth bulk that cannot cause injury.
- Libby's Homogenized foods are sold by grocers everywhere at prices so low you can feed them to your baby every day. Insist on Libby's . . . only Libby's Baby Foods are Homogenized...no others are so easy to digest, so nourishing.

BABIES LIKE THEM, they're so smooth, so palatable

THIS BALANCED DIET RECOMMENDED BY MEDICAL AUTHORITIES . . . Still another Libby improvement . . . Homogenized foods come in combinations . . . three or more of the foods babies need are available in a single tin! There are three vegetable combinations, one fruit combination, a delicious soup, and a highly nutritious cereal. Saves work for mother . . . and money, too.

THE "QUINTS"...a living tribute to medical science. The famous Dionne Quintuplets have been fed Libby's Homogenized Foods regularly.

A delicious new way to make
CINNAMON BUNS

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons shortening
½ cup sliced Brazil Nuts
⅔ cup milk
Softened butter
Brown sugar
Cinnamon

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Rub or cut in shortening with stiff knife. Stir in milk and work lightly into a smooth dough. Roll out on a floured board into a sheet, 6 by 8 inches. Spread with softened butter, sprinkle with brown sugar, cinnamon and Brazil Nuts. Roll dough as for jelly roll and slice crosswise. Put rolls close together in a well-greased pan or in muffin pans. Bake in a hot oven, 400° F., about 12 minutes or until brown.

Brazil Nuts add delicate new flavor to these buns. Use Brazils also in breads, cakes, salads, etc. Delicious and economical. Buy Brazils shelled or in the shell. At all grocers, nut shops and food departments.
